Ruby is charged with murder with malice in the shooting of Lee Harvey Oswald, accused assassin of President Kennedy.

Tonahill said that the encephalographic record showed "brain damage."

James Bowie, assistant district attorney, leaped to his feet barking objections. Belli then rose and a heated wrangle broke out on the question of what Bowie called "no procedure" for this.

JURY TO DECIDE

In overruling the motion for acquittal, the judge said "that is a matter for the jury to decide."

An unprecedented panel of 900 jury candidates—nearly double the normal number—has been called in order to qualify 12 absolutely unprejudiced.

Ruby, 53, a pale, pudgy nightclub operator, gunned down Lee Harvey Oswald, self-styled Marxist, two days after the president was killed in Dallas Oswald was charged with murdering him.

The trial is starting in a courtroom directly across the street from the building where the assassin lurked and then fired at Kennedy.

Defense lawyers indicate that they will try to go into the circumstances of Mrs. Kennedy's murder, as an integral part of the case for Ruby.

But Bowie, Wade, Dallas County district attorney, says Oswald's guilt or innocence is immaterial in Ruby's trial.

The key phrase in the indictment of Ruby says he "... did then and there with malice aforethought kill Lee Harvey Oswald by shooting him with a gun."

This is equivalent to a charge

Billy Rose, Onetime Boy Wonder Of Broadway, Sensation of Market

The word got around last week that since Oct. 15 the value of Rose's stock holdings had been increasing at nearly $9,000 an hour. It was no novelty to Rose. As the result of a 3-for-2 split on Nov. 15, he made $1,000,000 in 20 minutes.

Rose is the largest individual stockholder in American Metal Climax, Inc., Telegraph and New York Central Railroad. His long-term profits in A. T. and T. alone are more than $8,000,000.

"None of it seems real to me," he said. "The only thing that seems real is the 20-cent piece I have in my pocket."

Is it better to be rich or not rich?

"I think rich is better, but I don't think it's all important."

One thing is important to him.

"I want to get married again," he said. He married four times to three lovely girls. I like girls."

His wives were the late comedienne Fanny Brice, swim star Eleanor Holm, and Miss Doris Mathews.

Rose takes pride in the fact he has had 14 careers. He lists them in order.

Songwriter, shorthand expert, eight-cent operator, producer of producers, world's fair impresario (at New York), newspaper columnist, theatre owner (two in New York), newspaper columnist, real estate operator, Philan-

Two Schemes for Centennial Projects to Be Presented

Centennial projects for Belleville were discussed at a recent meeting of the Community Planning Association of Canada's Belleville Branch at the Corby Library. Two schemes will be presented to Mr. Jones's Parks, Recreation, and Arena committee for their considerations.

One: Mrs. G. R. Zimmele offered ten thousand dollars towards the purchase of the historic Ponton house and five acre property on Dundas St. West, as a museum and park. This would be a scheme of great value to that rapidly-growing part of the city, but might not qualify strictly as a centennial project since Mr. Zimmele would continue to occupy the house during her lifetime.

Another: Mr. R. Greig outlined a plan for the historical and marine development of a block of South Front St. as a tourist project. It would be the almost photographs of the early houses that are already pinpoint the actual date a house was built.

COULD ISSUE SHARES

Greig cited a re-development might cost half a million dollars — quite a lot more than the $65,000 the Parks, Recreation and Arena Committee are authorized to spend for the Centennial, but there is no reason why the scheme should not be undertaken separately. Suggestion was that McKay or Lindsay and Jack Mosley of Peterborough. The rink did not Greig cited that the "Trinity" uniforms stood out in the crowd. His gun was always at the ready to troubles broke out.

"The Baby Champs" a rink of Al Shukster, J. Petticrew, Murray Johnson and Dave Johnson, second place while the "Clowns" a rink of Doug Ashley, Bill Holway, Dave Hyndman and Charles Lovett won the two-game high and the "Firemen" a rink of Bill Hollingsworth, Cliff Neil, Bill Spinelli with Mac White as skip was second in that class. The "Clowns" had the high was won by a rink of Al McCullam, Goldie Livingston, Bill Riley and Stan Reston as skip with the "Besties" a rink of Claude Tice, Wes Andrews, Bill Meagher with Ron Benn as skip was second.

The best-costumed rink in the spiel went to the "Gay Women of the Silver Slipper" with Bill "Wilhelmina" Gault, Fred "Fredrics" Maund, Cec "Cecil-la" Kirkwood and Enola "Prostetius" Wilkinson as members. They played the Besties in the third game of the day and drew and attracted a large crowd as the Besties led their opposition through the costume onto the rink. The "Medicos" a rink of Dr. William Beattie, Dr. James Nellis, Dr. Jack Haynes with Bob Lanning dressed twice for the occasion, on the morning they were the perfect professional doctors and in the afternoon appeared as demure patients nurses and they created quite a stir around the club.

The Besties "queen" in their sateens coats put out a number of fires around the club, the Besties led a couple of songs in a bad key and the nurses produced a number of diapers and other such like articles after their patients. It was all in fun and it is one of the best spiels ever staged at the club.

Morris Booth of Cobourg was on hand to lead his rink of Pete Acton, Bill Woods, James Coverdale with his son, Ross Booth as skip. The women's section of the club served a delicious roast beef dinner for the curlers and it was delightful. Mr. Archie Roe kept the draw sheet and compiled the points and as usual did an excellent job. The antics of the curlers in their varied costumes kept the clubhouse in a roar all day and it was a tired bunch that wended their way homeward.

GIRLS GRAY-Y CLUB

Last Saturday, the Girls' Gray-Y began preparing Valentines for the sick children at the Belleville Hospital for (you guessed it) Valentines Day.

Between the swipping sound of scissors and the frenzied calls for the paste jar, thirty beautiful and creative valentines were produced.

They were delivered to the hospital on Friday, February 14th at 4:00 p.m. Club President, Sherry Graham, Kate Walters and one other member, Heather Grant. The girls enjoyed making them and hope that the children had a wonderful day.

Costume Spiel At Curling Rink Real Success

The "Mesmure Sqreaders" a rink consisting of Bill Sherwood, Bob Smith, Lloyd Sheppard with Dr. J. J. McCorquodale as skip, Ralph Vickerd, Vic Vickerd and Grey bonspiel at the Quinte Curling Club on Saturday day. The spiel was a costume affair sponsored by Victoria Grey Trust Company and for which "Bud" Trill, the manager of the Belleville office, was chairman. Assisting in this rink of Gerry Phelps, assistant general manager of the company, Lindsay and Jack Mosley of shares of non-interest bearing stock, and with donations. Mr. Greig cited that the Parks, Recreation and Arena Committee are authorized to spend for the Centennial, but there is no reason why the scheme should not be undertaken separately. Suggestion was that McKay or Lindsay and Jack Mosley of Peterborough. The rink did not Greig cited that the "Trinity" uniforms stood out in the crowd. Quinte Secondary School Band received 82 out of a possible 100 marks and placed fourth. The top band from Scarborough received 85 points. At the end of the festival Mr. McKellar gave an oral and written report on each band's performance. Mr. McKellar said, "They had an excellent and exciting start, with the band having much potentiality," that the Quinte Band was well drilled and had tremendous future. He also felt the band from the brass section was beautiful. Mr. McKellar said, in closing, that from a technical point of view the playing was perfect.

Future plans of the band include playing on the air this week and an exchange visit with a school in Peterborough in April.

CARDS OF THANKS

I wish to take the opportunity to say my good friends and my family for the kindness shown me during my recent confinement and eighty-fourth birthday and the beautiful cards and gifts received on me. It made me think of the poem written by Dr. E. A. Robert Browning, who wrote:

Come grow old along with me. The best is come is yet to be. The last of life for which the first was made.

I would like to thank my friends and customers who were so kind to me during my recent stay in Belleville General Hospital, also thanks to Dr. L. A. Dafoe and the staff on second West.

Mrs. Ida McMillan.

We wish to express our thanks to all for their help since our fire and for their generosity in donating furnishings, clothes, money, etc. Also to the Belleville firemen for their fine collecting, and to Rev. Sawyer, Mrs. Sawyer, O.D.D. Members of the Legion, L.O.L., Allisonville, and Canadian Legion, Belleville Ladies' Auxiliary and to the Ameliasburg district. We are so glad to be among such decent people.

Mr. and Mrs. Joyce Shantz and family.

Merchants to Ask Liquor Board To Keep Downtown Store Open

This was the feeling of merchants this morning as they met at the YMCA to discuss whether or not they should try to have the Liquor Control Board re-consider its Station Street site in favor of a downtown location.

The meeting passed a motion concurring in the location of the proposed Station Street store but will ask the LCBO to continue operation of the present store as well as to open a smaller store at some other downtown location.

This morning's meeting was called by the downtown merchants' association chairman, Jack Ireland, after receiving a number of phone calls last week asking what the merchants were going to do about the proposed location of the liquor store on Station Street.

Mr. Ireland said the LCBO had at one time been interested in a Front Street site, but when the property was sold for sale had purchased property on Station Street as the site for its new store.

EXPLAINS POLICY

Cleo Colling, Front Street druggist and member of the city parking authority, said it was not policy for the LCBO to locate stores on one-way streets and it did not favor downtown locations.

He said if downtown merchants went back to LCBO officials objecting to the Station Street location there was the possibility the new liquor store might be located at the Plaza or some other location some distance from Front Street.

"I feel that the Station Street location is the best under conditions which the LCBO will tolerate," he said.

Jerry O'Connor, downtown jeweller, felt, however, that it would still be worth while to investigate whether the LCBO would consider retaining the present Bridge Street store, or possibly open a small satellite store at another downtown location.

Still Trying To End Quebec Teachers' Strike

SHERBROOKE, QUE. (CP)—Mediation sessions continued today in an effort to reopen the Roman Catholic schools of eight Eastern Townships communities to some 16,000 French speaking students.

Schools board officials and representatives of the teachers' unions met for a total of 30 hours during the weekend, but no agreement was reached and the 600 teachers involved stayed away from classes again today.

The crisis began Feb. 6 when teachers in nearby Asbestos did not report for work. Their colleagues quickly followed suit in Windsor, Richmond, Brompton-ville, Coaticook, Magog, Danville and East Angus.

A reliable source said a major unsolved issue is a statement the teachers want the boards to sign, promising there will be no legal action against them if they return to work.

Mediator Michel Marengo said agreement had been reached on "a large part of a new contract." He said the talks dealt with equalization of salary scales in Sherbrooke diocese, where teachers' pay varies widely from one community to another.

The teachers are seeking pay increases they say would amount to about $750 each on an annual basis, and such fringe benefits as a group health insurance plan of which the boards would pay half the cost. The diocesan association of school boards has said its members have offered salary increases that average out to about $500.

Willy Brandt New Leader Of Opposition

BAD GODESBERG (AP) Mayor Willy Brandt of West Berlin took over the leadership of West Germany's opposition Socialist party Sunday with a plea for tough, patient negotiations to ease the situation on the Communist wall.

Brandt has an appointment today with his chief political opponent, Chancellor Ludwig Erhard, to see what can be done.

By decision of a special party convention that ended Sunday, Brandt will be Erhard's rival for the chancellorship in the 1965 election. Erhard leads the Christian Democratic party.

Brandt hailed the agreement with the Communists that enabled West Berliners to visit relatives in East Berlin during the Christmas holidays, for the first time since the Communists built the wall in 1961.

REJECTED OFFER

Brandt's West Berlin city government and Erhard's West German federal government have agreed to reject a Communist offer to renew the Christmas agreement for Easter and Whitsuntide. But Brandt and his friends are still working hard for some kind of agreement on passes.

Brandt, 50, took over as party chairman by 320 votes out of 334. There was no opposition. He succeeds Erich Ollenhauer, who died last December. In the 1961 election Brandt was the party's candidate for chancellor.

USE BOTH

On the vote over use of the word "state", he said after the convention that the Quebec Liberals have been using the terms "state" and "province" interchangeably in recent resolutions and statements.

The vote on this matter won't change anything," he went on. "It does not make use of the word obligatory for party members."

On the question of bilingualism, Georges Lapalme, Quebec's cultural affairs minister, told the convention he will receive in the next two months "a project of linguistic forms which, it goes without saying, will demand the immediate and energetic intervention of the state."

Mr. Lapalme said the Quebec government should carry out "a thorough study" of bilingualism.

He said the linguistic project is being drawn up by a consultative committee of the provincial government's French-language bureau, which is made up of linguists from Laval University and the University of Montreal.

WON'T VOTE

The convention decided against voting on a resolution from Vaudreuil-Soulanges riding urging that Liberal candidates in federal and provincial elections have separate organizing committees.

Mr. Aquin described the "state" vote as "a matter of wording in a particular resolution."

The vote came unexpectedly during discussion of a resolution on Eskimo affairs submitted in English by the Liberal Club of Sir George Williams University, Montreal.

When an amendment was proposed from the floor that the words "this province" be replaced by "the State of Quebec," the president called for a vote.

In his subsequent statement, Mr. Aquin said the amendment came from French-speaking as well as English-speaking delegates.

The convention adopted two resolutions calling on the provincial government to "get tough" with civil servants appointed under the former Union Nationale regime. They were accused of practising "patronage" and "sabotaging" government policies.

Quebec Liberal Federation Calls on National Party To Change Present Structure

MONTREAL (CP)—The Quebec Liberal Federation has formally approved the use in one of its resolutions of the term "State of Quebec," in English.

The approval, by a vote of 60 to 55, came at the second plenary session of the federation's annual convention Sunday.

The two-day convention also appealed to the National Liberal Federation to change its present structure.

The appeal, which originated with the Quebec general council, was announced to the meeting by Francois Aquin, president of the provincial group.

Mr. Aquin had recently attacked the national federation as having "neither the structure nor the orientation of a democratic party."

River Bottom Black, Murky Say Frogmen

Nobody came up with the motor but it was a good winter exercise for the divers anyhow.

Regular members of the club, diving yesterday, all but one RCAF personnel were: LAC Todd Shannon, LAC Ronald Peters, LAC Thomas Ganter, (president), LAC William Simms, and Thomas Coon, civilian. They were assisted by trainees, including two women who served hot coffee between dives.

"You don't want to have claustrophobia down there," commented Tommy Coon.

Comments by the divers was that the river bottom is black and murky this time of year.

The only mar to an otherwise enjoyable afternoon was that Ken Wannamaker's little dog was run over and killed on the highway above the diving scene. Dozens of cars lined the highway as motorists' curiosity as to what was going on out on the ice overcame them.

Hits Guard Rails

TRENTON — Considerable damage was caused in a one-vehicle accident on Highway No. 30 on Saturday night near Breakaway Creek (Sea, Ontario) north of Brighton.

Police say that 23-year-old David Dubblestein of Cooksville, formerly of Bloomfield, failed to negotiate a curve in the highway. The car veered off the road, clipped off 13 guard rails and plunged down a 20 foot embankment.

Dubblestein escaped without injury.

The Short View

For three centuries the Bahutus were the serfs of the warlike Watutsis, a tribe of giants, many of them seven feet tall.

Before the Watutsis swept into this area in the 16th and 17th century the Bahutus had lorded it over the Pygmies.

The white man came and subjugated the Watutsis, but finally relinquished the reins of power to the natives. The Bahutus were the most numerous and now they had the equalizer for the Watutsis' warlike skills; they had the white man's guns.

So the serfs became the rulers and took revenge on the Watutsis and many of the Watutsis fled but returned to slaughter their former serfs. The Bahutus retaliated by murdering the Watutsis who remained.

"The tragedy of the Bahutus and the Watutsis," according to Aaron E. Einfrank writing in the Toronto Telegram, "has evolved out of the UN's pig-headed determination to give independence to nations unable to bear the responsibilities of independence."

This is a popular view.

Much the same thing was said about Britain's withdrawal from the sub-continent of India, when that resulted in its division into two nations, India and Pakistan, and when the early days of independence saw racial massacres which dwarf into insignificance what is happening in Rwanda.

People who think like this seem to believe that, if the white man will but retain control long enough, he can distill away the hatred aqueesed out by hundreds of years of repression and injustice.

There is scant evidence that this is possible.

Every baby, learning to walk, suffers bruises. But do we, then, prevent a baby from trying to walk until he is bigger and stronger and able to run without falling?

There are some things which can only be learned by doing. Walking is one of them. Running one's own government may well be another. The massacre of thousands of Hindus by Moslems and thousands of Moslems by Hindus, the Bahutus' cruel chastisement of their former overlords, the rapine and shooting which followed the Belgians' withdrawal from the Congo—all these are deeply regrettable. Many of them may well have been unavoidable. If so, postponing them would serve no useful purpose.

If only those nations which have never massacred or enslaved are fit to rule themselves, who shall be independent? The British, with the Irish potato famine but a century in the past? The Belgians, who within this century were cutting off the hands of Congo natives who did not produce their quota of rubber? The Russians after the famine in the Ukraine? The Germans, with Buchenwald within the memory of most of us?

Compared to the white man, the Bahutu is fly-white.

Heal Thyself

Ontario lawyers were told last week that the public needs greater protection from government and government bodies.

This need was emphasized by several speakers at the mid-winter meeting of the Ontario section of the Canadian Bar Association.

It is good to see lawyers taking the lead in this fight. It confirms the conviction which is still prevalent in this country that lawyers are interested not only in law but in justice.

Still, we think there is something which the Bar Association could do besides listening to addresses of members.

It could make a point of calling the matter to the attention of a select body of lawyers—those who are also legislators. Lawyers form a large portion of the members of all Canadian legislative bodies.

The public would not need greater protection from government and government-controlled bodies if it were not for the fact that some lawyers co-operate in, even if they do not initiate, the passing of laws and regulations which unduly restrict public freedom.

Canadian culture cannot be manufactured, it is a continual process. It is not going to be achieved in a little over one generation. Culture is not static nor is it the possession of any one nation or any group of nations. Ours should be a happy combination of all aspects without regard to sources. If we are wise, we will avail ourselves of the opportunity that is ours and benefit from certain aspects of all groups.—Former Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario Keller Mackay.

Letter to The Editor

He Does Not Like Our Postage Stamps

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

I find it most annoying to have to look at stamps portraying our Gracious Sovereign stamp as a bewhiskered woman.

I invite the general public to take a close look at our 4 cent stamp and for that matter, most of our stamps.

You will find on the 4-cent stamp up in the top left hand corner a symbol which, with great respect to our fine Jewish citizens and meaning no offence to anybody including either nationalist China or Red China, appears to be an admixture of the star of David and a Chinese pagoda.

A kingdom should look like a kingdom, and a queen should look like a queen. The effigy of a king in a kingdom should bear some indication that this is still a monarchy.

I appreciate that with a female monarch one cannot expect a military looking figure with a large moustache and full beard and military tunic with a uniform which we used to have with King George V, but surely a queen should look like a queen and history books show Queen Elizabeth I in a dandy costume to display the loyalty of any loyal royalty lover.

Old Queen Elizabeth I knew how to dress to evoke a proper response, as did her subject Walter Raleigh etc.

May I respectfully suggest that the present image and the present stamp (this also includes a diatribe against our coinage), evoke nothing but a feeling of complete blah!

Until we make up our mind to identify ourselves with our more colorful neighbor to the south and become true republicans and start issuing the star spangled banner and singing "America, America from sea to shining sea" etc. Then we are left in a curious vacuum.

Many of us feel this is going to come about but I'm afraid if the Americans really discover we exist and want to take us in).

No doubt many of us will do so by backing in, hoping to hand the Americans our October crop, but we may have a reward for handing us their color problem.

Then we in Ontario can join the northern states in being pure and right both ways.

I'm just whiling away the meantime in the last days of our declining kingdom of Canada. I suggest that we have a last fling (some fling anyway) and dress up—so-mmo-ncerly and dress up our stamps and our coins and our coinage and enjoy ourselves in a brief wild fling with monarchy.

We might even find we enjoy it.

I think we might even enjoy going whole-hog and awarding titles to most Canadians with distinguished service and undetected crime, as they have always done in the United Kingdom. I think we would find it even more amusing when we join the grand republic counting the number of people who can still call themselves Sir or Baron of Belleville etc. etc. (no Conservatives need apply), as they decline in numbers just like the old Civil War veterans of the United States.

However I suspect most Canadians like our country to be colorless, flagless and dull, preferring to invest their supply of public adulation in such items as the Maple Leaf hockey team and the Beatles.

Kenneth G. M. Ross.

P.S.: I invite other Canadians of like mind, who dislike they can accomplish nothing by so doing, to write similar letters. It has a gratifying therapeutic effect on the frustrated Canadian psyche.

Irritating

Nothing irritates a western farmer or businessman more than the assumption that Canadian farm problems and politics are identical with those in the U.S. Reminds this a close second as irritation is the notion that eastern farming and western farming are identical.

CLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

30 YEARS AGO

February 17th, 1914.

Since inception two years ago the "fag fund" set up by the Belleville branch of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, Unit 201, has sent a total of 672,600 cigarettes to the boys serving overseas from Belleville and district, it was disclosed by secretary James Lazenby. A total of $3,375. has been expended by the "Vets' Fag Fund" to assure cigarettes to boys of the Belleville district, regardless as to where they may be stationed in this globular war.

The first year of operation, 1940, saw the Vets send 2667 worth of cigarettes, prior to which they had sent smaller quantities amounting to some $108. However, in 1943 the figure rose to 81,000, and during in 1944 cigarettes valued at $114 have been sent overseas. Only this week an acknowledgment was received in Belleville from India, posted last July.

The Women's Canadian Club of Belleville will have the honor to present, at the meeting in Bridge Street United Church rooms on Monday next, a very noted Canadian woman, born and bred in this Dominion, in the person of Dr. Charlotte Whitton. Dr. Whitton, who will speak on the subject, "What Do We Mean by Social Security," has not only taken a great interest in questions and affairs concerning child and family welfare, but she is also interested in journalism. Now residing in Ottawa, she has contributed to the literature of Canada with her book, "The Dawn of Empire Life." In 1934 the C.B.E. was conferred upon Dr. Whitton. For a number of years, she was the executive director of the Council of Child and Family Welfare and of Canadian Welfare Council, she was a member of the advisory body of the Child Welfare Committee of the League of Nations.

February 17th, 1934.

Little Miss June Rose entertained a number of her young friends at a Valentine party at her home on Dufferin St. on Wednesday evening.

Mayor George O. Tice is in Toronto to attend a meeting of the mayors of the cities and towns in the province for the consideration of hospitalization of indigent patients. As a delegation, the mayor will later wait upon Hon. Hon. W. H. Hepburn, Minister of Public Works in reference to the matter.

The severity of the present winter, almost unprecedented by low temperatures and continued cold weather, has the growing popularity of wood as a fuel has created a mild wood famine in this district, according to reports made by dealers.

Twenty young men pleaded guilty to the charge of non-payment of the poll tax, in police court before Magistrate W. C. Mikel yesterday; three of them paid the fee and were dismissed. The balance accused must pay the tax by March 1st. Wards 2 and 3 with the problem of the inability to pay, on the part of some of the accused. Period of unemployment. Magistrate Mikel said he cannot revive the poll tax as it ceased under a city by-law and must be published two months before the tax is argued but should have taken it before the Court of Revision." City Assessor T. Ed. Ketcheson presented the cases and A. B. Collins city solicitor, prosecuted.

Has Written Harris Column Since 1944

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

This week marks the completion of 20 years of my daily column. In that time, I have written more than 5,000 columns totalling more than 2,000,000 words, upon hundreds of different subjects.

The question I am asked more often than any other is: "How can you do it every day?" And the answer is so simple, I am often ashamed to give it: each column writes the next one.

Everything is grist to my mill, is related to everything else. No subject exists in isolation. All life is a process, and all processes are somehow linked together, directly or indirectly.

I am currently looking through a new book called "The Road to H," a study in narcotics addiction and drug policy, written by a team of psychologists, sociologists, and case workers.

The book deals with dope addiction among young males in Manhattan's Spanish Harlem ganging activity, and the family and cultural backgrounds of these youths. Yet the implications of even one book of this sort spread through the whole world and into every aspect of modern life.

It is between biology, geography, mental illness, family patterns, economic conditions, the threat of nuclear warfare, child films, magazines, and movies, the structure of police and political systems.

It raises such questions as the failure of religious organizations, the inadequacy of funds for child study, the changing roles of the schools in urban communities, the fact that addiction in such countries as England, the effect of opium traffic in the Middle East, and today, the psychological versus the physiological need for narcotics, the prevalence of cigarette addiction to the rarity of heroin addiction.

Also, it makes us think about the relationship between the armed forces and police, the whole matter of "will power" the effectiveness of punishment as against prevention, the influence of the father on the sons, the increased burden of leisure facing us, the chronic unemployment that hits hardest at youth, Negroes, Puerto Ricans and other minorities, sexual addiction and escape from a bleak future.

If a writer is considered in isolation, he cannot do anything of real scope and significance. Political views solve no political problems: only when they transcend the political arena can they be useful.

To look at one thing alone is not to see it at all.

What I am doing every day, and have been doing for 20 years, is to try to make connections. Indeed, I think that is the only way out of the tunnel, before the landslide buries us all.

Should Be More Like Joe

By VAL WERIER in The Winnipeg Tribune

Most people who watch hockey have their favorite teams. My favorite is a team in Alcan Hockey League of neighborhood. It is composed of eight and nine-year-olds. They play in the "Corner" in the centre of the city league. In the house or community club league, every one who enters has a chance to play. In the city league, children compete for a berth on the teams.

What really makes me fond of this team, is Joe the coach. He makes the team what it is, like any good coach. He's a tall, heavy set man of about 35. Several times a week during the ice lopes onto the ice in his overcoat of a bear who has had his fill of ants and honey and is at peace with the world. He's not dismayed when the other coaches, who shout and scream and almost become apoplectic in expelling their charges to greater heights.

In the house league, the rule book is completely disregarded as long as the kids behave in a gentlemanly manner. No one worries about being off side, or infractions of that nature. Coaches insist on the best procedure tantamount in court to lawyers' instructions to the witnesses. Some coaches in fact do advise the players in particular terms from within the rink.

Not Joe. He's on the ice as a matter of conservationism. When he wants to change the line, he leans over the boards, lifts up the gate and ejects them on the ice. He does it in an effort less fashion and with the same despatch as an automatic pin setter in a bowling alley. He performs the same trick in reverse with the kids that have followed their masters on to the ice.

It all makes for swifter changes. No longer do the kids play hours on the ice, not an uncommon business in house league rushes. He gives the kids a chance to play, in the city league, children compete for a berth on the teams.

What really makes me fond of this team, is Joe the coach. He makes the team what it is, like any good coach. He's a tall, heavy set man of about 35. X-Ray, Radium, Cobalt Rays Are Essentially the Same

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My ovaries were recently removed because of cancer. I am now having X-ray treatment plus pills. What is the difference between X-ray, radium and cobalt? — W. B. J.

Essentially the rays from all three are the same — they are "gamma radiation."

The difference primarily concerns the source, and the intensity, or energy, of the rays.

Radium is a naturally-occurring element, obtained by purifying enormous amounts of pitchblende or other ores. It gives out a constant stream of radiation as it gradually degenerates into other substances.

X-ray is also gamma radiation, but instead of coming from a radioactive substance (such as radium and cobalt) it is produced by shooting a high-voltage stream of electrons against a metal target. The gamma rays are then produced by this stream of electrons.

Turn off the electricity, and the gamma rays stop, unlike radium which you cannot "turn off." When radium is not in use, the cobalt becomes radioactive.

Pellets of this radioactive cobalt then are placed in a lead and steel container which is equipped with a shutter, much the same in principle as a camera shutter except that, of course, it must be dense enough to stop the radiation when the shutter is closed.

This radioactive cobalt and its associated equipment is very expensive, of course, but as much as is needed can be made, whereas radium is rare and extremely costly, and hence is available only in tiny quantities — radium "needles" or capsules containing radium about the size of a piece of a common pin, perhaps an eighth of an inch long.

Thus in some cases, these widget capsules can be embedded in the cancer, or very close to it, a constant although small amount of radiation.

With either cobalt or X-ray, a beam of much higher energy is applied for a short time, measured in minutes as a rule.

In any case, the purpose is the same, to bombard the tissues with gamma radiation to combat the cancer. The question is which method — radium, cobalt or X-ray, is more convenient for a specific case.

In technical jargon, the high-energy source provide "hard" rays which can penetrate deeper and be held in a more narrow beam.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is there any drug to cause a person with low blood sugar? When my blood sugar drops too low, I become sick. — Mrs. C. H.

I don't know of any drug that will cure this problem, but don't be disheartened. People with low blood sugar can be treated successfully. Diet and sedatives are the chief factors in such treatment. In certain circumstances a drug called glucagon is injected to raise the blood sugar. (It's also used for people with severe insulin reactions.)

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: Six months ago I had a hysterectomy because of cancer and frequent bleeding. However, I still have some bleeding two or three days in a month. The amount is scant, but I am curious as to where it is coming from. — M. D.

Doubtless the doctors removed the uterus slid left the cervix, and cervical cancer is common; there is fear of cancer. The tissues of the cervix can produce this type of bleeding.

I'd suggest that you be checked again at the time you have bleeding.

Today in History

Feb. 17, 1964 . . .

The League of Nations 31 years ago today—in 1933—condemned the Japanese occupation of Manchuria. Early in the previous year, the Japanese had formed a Manchuria, a vide government, and in 1934 Henry Pu Yi, last scion of the Manchu dynasty when it abdicted its control of China in 1912, ascended the throne of the newly named Manchukuo. The new country, Manchukuo, like a Japanese controlled territory, was recognized only by Japan, Germany, Italy and El Salvador.

1946—Emperor Charles I and the crown prince of Portugal were assassinated.

1945 — Allied armies, pushed the Germans back to the Rhine River in the Second World War.

Ill-Effects

Hasilton Spectator

The ill-effects of excessive cigarette smoking should be set in theft, proper place in the realms of myths. If neglect is treated as an isolated "wickedness," then the government is guilty of the same certain to fail. There have been far too many examples of attempts to stamp out the drinking of alcohol to leave any belief that mere stamping on a habit is enough to put it out of existence.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO (CP) — Trading was active and prices were strong to higher on good and choice grades of slaughter cattle at the Ontario public stockyards today.

Lower grades of steers, heifers and yearlings and cows were steady.

Veal calf prices were strong. Hog prices were steady and sheep and lamb prices were steady.

Remarkable Survival Story Was Created One Year Ago

Despite painful injuries, temperatures that dropped to 45 below zero and constantly nay food, Helen Klaben and Ralph Flores prayed and struggled and somehow managed to live until they were rescued 40 days later.

Today, Miss Klaben, 22, an attractive girl with brown hair and deep thoughts, is studying at Columbia University.

She has regained the 46 pounds she lost during the ordeal and hopes to complete college work also dropped several years ago.

He is trying to regain the $6,000 he estimates the flight cost him.

HELPED FINANCIALLY

The accident forced the amputation of all of Miss Klaben's toes on her right foot, but it has also brought her some financial benefits.

Money from a magazine article on her experience and her recently published book "Hey, I'm Alive enabled her to go back to college.

"I sure hope it holds out," she said, smiling and speaking with a soft voice. "I've got two years to go."

She selects her words with considerable care when she looks back on the survival: "It matured me and has given me a new insight into life. . . .

"I feel I have an inner calm now. I don't rely on external things—such as a mink coat or money or travelling — to be happy."

She isn't certain what she wants to do when she finishes college, but she knows her life has definitely taken a new direction.

Speaking of Flores, who stamped out the S.O.S. in the snow that led to their rescue from a Yukon mountain near the British Columbia border, she declared:

"He showed a tremendous amount of courage and ingenuity. So much strength. An amazing amount of physical and mental strength.

"He is a very fine person. He treated me like his daughter."

HOPE TO FLY AGAIN

Flores' wife and six children still live in San Bruno, Calif. His future plans are uncertain. He hopes to take an examination this summer in an effort to regain his pilot's license.

The license was taken away after the Federal Aviation Agency found he had violated more than a dozen regulations on the flight, including failure to have adequate emergency equipment and to follow other regulations.

Miss Klaben was flying as his navigator when the plane went down Feb. 4, 1963, while on a flight from Whitehorse, Yukon, to Seattle.

The RCAF called off an aerial search after 30 days, but two pilots flying supplies later spotted them.

Their only food was two cans of sardines and two cans of fruit. They also ate their tooth paste and melted snow for water.

U. N. to Show Trade Proposals At Conference

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—The United Nations has unveiled wide-ranging proposals for consideration at its conference on trade and development to be held March 23-June 15 in Geneva.

They involve basic issues certain to set off sharp controversy among the 1,800 delegates from 123 countries and UN agencies expected to attend.

They include such fundamental questions as whether the western-supported GATT — the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade — should be a model adjunct to a new international trade organization representing Eastern, Western and non-aligned nations.

The proposals are contained in a 180-page report presented by Dr. Raul Prebisch, 54, Argentine-born international economist who is secretary-general for the conference.

The basic problem is how to close the widening trade imbalance between the industrial and the developing nations of the world, which he says could reach $20,000,000,000 by 1970.

Prime Minister to Hear Reports From Members to Set Lines of House Action

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson was to hear reports from his parliamentary troops today as part of a two-day study session designed to set lines of government action for the session of Parliament which opens Tuesday.

Mr. Pearson addressed a dinner of Liberal MPs and Senators and their wives Sunday after urging opening sessions of the pre-session caucus conference to speak up frankly to the cabinet about the things which need to be done.

The meetings were the second stage of a new system instituted last September at the insistence of MPs who complained they were not given a chance to mould government policies or bring their talents and experience to bear in shaping legislation.

Caucus chairman Guy Rouleau, MP for Montreal Dollard and parliamentary secretary to Prime Minister Pearson, told the caucus session that much remains to be done to improve a new liaison system among the cabinet, the party and the MPs established on the insistence of the MPs at a conference midway through the last session.

"The caucus as a whole requires added strength," he said. "There should be still closer relationship between the cabinet and members of Parliament."

Study groups of MPs attached to each minister after the previous conference "can become even more useful."

Members can be given an even more important role to play and a lot can still be done to make them take on duties that befit a member of Parliament in this era of the new politics—that of a genuine legislator."

COMMITTEE URGED

As a start, Mr. Rouleau proposed that a caucus committee be formed to draw up proposed changes to parliamentary rules "enabling members to study legislation before it is tabled in the House."

On the political front, Mr. Rouleau said it urgent that the MPs "work towards giving the National Liberal Federation a more democratic structure." He proposed the caucus prepare a report on this for the March meeting of the federation executive.

Mr. Rouleau explained later at a press briefing that these were personal suggestions which come up for consideration at today's sessions.

To review the results of the earlier conference, Mr. Rouleau said specialized information services proposed by the MPs were set up in the prime minister's office, the National Liberal Federation and the caucus secretariat to improve communication with the public.

MPs were being advised of any visit to their constituencies by cabinet ministers.

A special committee was at work with Justice Minister Favreau, the new government leader in the Commons, under chairmanship of chief whip James E. Walker, MP for York Centre, on plans for the session.

The conference which continues today broke up into a number of working groups covering broad lines of government policy — social security, economic policy, labor, citizenship and immigration, agriculture, transport, federal - provincial relations, foreign affairs and defence and electoral matters.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) President Johnson sent a top labor trouble shooter today to Gulf ports to help forestall threatened boycott of wheat shipments to Russia and a railway dispute that slowed the space program at Cape Kennedy.

James J. Reynolds, assistant secretary of labor, came here after the AFL-CIO executive council opened its annual policy making session. Most labor leaders including AFL - CIO President George Meany are present.

Reynolds is expected to try to soften the attitude of the AFL-CIO's Maritime Trades Department on the threat to boycott loading of wheat for Russia, unless at least 50 per cent is shipped in U.S. ships.

Reynolds also is expected to confer with G. E. Leighty, chief negotiator for 11 unions on strike against the Florida East Coast Railway in a 13-month-long wage dispute marked by dynamitings, shootings and accusations of sabotage.

An AFL-CIO spokesman indicated the maritime unions would find considerable support on the executive council for a wheat-loading boycott.

A meeting between Leighty and a chief official of the railway Sunday night did nothing to bring the two sides closer to the negotiating table in that dispute.

WALLBRIDGE U.C.W.

Wallbridge United Church Women held their meeting recently which opened in the usual manner, followed by various reports. Ten visits were recorded for January and a discussion on the Presbyterial at Napanee followed with several members planning to attend.

A report was given on the recent bus trip to Toronto at which time several United Church places were visited including the Supply Depot, the new United Church House and the Fred Victor Mission. The history of these is most interesting, beginning with the need, the financing, and now the comforting ministry.

Members accepted an invitation to join with the Centenary group for the World Day of Prayer service. The new study book for this year is "God and His Purpose". Mrs. Cooper was in charge of the program which closed with prayer.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

"LACK OF COURTESY OR OPPORTUNITY?"

At a dinner party in a restaurant the other evening, one of the women at the table was lamenting that men today were not as gallant and gentlemanly as they were when she was a girl.

As she generalized, she scanned the menu and then announced to the waiter that she'd have steak, a salad and a very small baked potato — without butter, please.

Later, when the orchestra started to play, she jumped up from her chair, told her husband he'd have to dance with her, and swept on to the dance floor with him in tow. When they returned, she pulled out her chair, sat down and continued to ponder whatever happened to manly good manners.

If, more particularly, she meant her husband's manners, anyone could have told her. She never gave the poor man a chance. When he asked what she'd like to eat, instead of telling him she told the waiter. Then, before he had finished eating, she made him stop midcuddle and trot along meekly to the dance floor. It also was obvious when she flounced back that he was about to pull out her chair when she grabbed it and seated herself with much clicking about the good old gracious days.

Judging from her actions, I'd say that if masculine good manners were dying out (which is far from the truth), she had helped administer the coup de grace. At least, that possibly was the case in her own home. Her husband, a charming, very tasteful gentleman, rarely was given a chance to open a door or a chair for his wife, let alone order for her in a restaurant or ask her to dance in a courtly way. Her do-it-yourself attitude left him standing helplessly on the sidelines while she took about a hundredth man's lack of graciousness.

OFTEN THE CASE

And isn't that frequently the case? Very often, women who complain that men aren't as mannerly as of yore are just the ones who have taken the initiative away from the male. This doesn't mean that women should lose their delicate, handkerchief-in-my-air of helplessness to get men to open doors for them. If a man would just stand back for a second and resist the impulse to grab the door knob, her escort would quickly perform this little courtesy for her.

Actually, when a woman starts to complain that the man in her life never helps her on with her coat, or in and out of cabs, or runs interference for her in crowds, etc., etc., etc., it's what she should do it recheck her own behavior. Very often, the reason he seems negligent is that she doesn't let him indulge in such natural gallantries. Just give the poor guy a chance and it's amazing how quickly his manners will seemingly improve, once he's permitted to exercise them naturally.

Woman Has Seen Many Town Changes

RED LAKE, Ont. (CP) — Jean Campbell has seen many changes in this northwestern Ontario mining town since she arrived here in 1923.

At that time, there were eight white women and 300 men in the community. Houses were hastily erected shacks with furniture fashioned from old dynamite kegs and egg crates.

There was no electricity and residents had to provide their own entertainment.

Now the town, about 160 miles northeast of Winnipeg—one of a number of mining communities within a 10-mile radius—has all the modern conveniences, including bowling alleys and theatres.

During the Second World War Mrs. Campbell's husband, the late George W. Campbell, discovered in the area what she says proved to be one of the richest gold mines in Canada.

She lives alone now with four dogs in a 37-year-old cabin on the shore of Red Lake. Her hobby is collecting salt shakers —she has 4,400 pairs, some dating back 200 years. Her most prized possession is a white bearskin rug measuring 14 by 12 feet.

Banana Cake

Made Again for a Birthday Party

by Mary Moore

quests for banana cakes of one kind or another. The Banana Cake with Crunchy Topping and Marianne's Banana Cake seem to be the ones in demand.

I thought we should make a banana cake again so we had a birthday party coming up and it turned out to be the cake for it. Very popular with our crowd.

MONDAY

Dinner Menu

Barbecued Sausages; Boiled Potatoes with Parsley Butter; Creamed Onions; Fine Cole Slaw; Ice Cream with Fresh Frozen Raspberries; Coffee.

BANANA CAKE (repeated):

½ cup butter, ½ cup shortening (or use ¾ cup butter and no shortening), 1½ cups granulated sugar, 2 medium-large eggs, 2¼ cups sifted cake flour, ½ teaspoon single-acting baking powder, ¾ teaspoon baking soda, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 cup mashed bananas (3 medium), ¾ cup buttermilk or sour milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Cream butter, and shortening (or butter) thoroughly, gradually adding sugar as you beat until both are very light and fluffy. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well between additions. Sift together, the sifted flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt. Mash and measure bananas. Fold mashed bananas and buttermilk into butter mixture alternately with the sifted dry ingredients. Add vanilla.

Turn into two 9" layer cake pans, bottoms of which have been lined with buttered paper. Butte, sides of pans too. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 35 to 38 minutes, or until when tested with finger tips at centre, cake springs back. Let stand in pans 5 minutes, then turn out on cake racks to cool.

Now there are two ways to finish this cake:1) Put layer of sliced bananas (it takes 2) on top of bottom layer. Cover bananas with small recipe of cream filling (see below), put on top and frost with Lemon Frosting: Cream ¼ cup butter with 2 cups icing sugar and beat in 2 tablespoons lemon juice and 1 tablespoon milk. Add 10 drops yellow food coloring to intensity color.

Cream Filling (small amount): One and one-half teaspoons cornstarch, 2¼ teaspoons flour, ⅛ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons sugar, ½ cup hot milk, 1 egg yolk, 1½ teaspoons butter, 1½ teaspoons vanilla. In top of double boiler mix together dry ingredients: cornstarch, flour, salt and sugar. Over boiling water, stir in milk until thick. Beat egg yolk and stir some of the hot mixture into it then return this to double boiler and stir 1 minute. Remove from heat and add butter and vanilla. Cool before spreading over bananas arranged over bottom layer. Put on top layer and frost top with Lemon Frosting (above). Or 2) Put Lemon Frosting only (above) between and on top of cake.

Albert College Guild Enjoys Talk by Pastor

The newly-elected president of Albert College Guild conducted the first meeting of her term of office, when the members gathered in the Old Manor for the February meeting.

The major item of business was the decision to hold a dessert bridge in April. Plans for this are in the hands of the convener, Mrs. F. Wilson, and a co-convener, Mrs. H. McKay.

Mrs. E. Hickey gave a period of meditation centering thoughts on Lent and the best use of these 40 days leading up to Easter, in prayer and self-discipline.

Richard McLean, boy chorister at Christ Church, accompanied by Mr. John Withers, organist of that church, gave messages in song, in keeping with the worship service.

GUEST SPEAKER

Mrs. R. Hickey, who arranged the program, introduced the guest speaker, Rev. James Smith, who came from Tasmania as a delegate to the recent Anglican Congress in Toronto. He is spending a period in Belleville as assistant rector of Christ Church, before returning to Tasmania.

Mr. Smith, with the aid of beautiful colored slides of Australia and Tasmania gave a most interesting commentary, which acquainted the members with these fellow-members of the Commonwealth.

It was a geography lesson that held the attention, of Mr. Smith told of the mines, noted for their great production of copper, and the industries that provides large exports of wool, lamb and apples.

The pictures emphasized some of the contrasts between Australia and Tasmania, and Canada. All the native trees in Tasmania, except one, are evergreen. Two-third of the population of Tasmania live in the six capital cities.

APPLE ORCHARDS

The last slide was an apple orchard in bloom, which brought the audience right back to Edward County and its orchards. Coming from an apple-growing country, Mrs. Tasmanian felt that the highest praise for Canada's McIntosh Red.

Mrs. R. May expressed thanks to Mrs. Hickey, Rev. James Smith, Mr. John Withers and Richard McLean.

A question and answer period followed, Australia and Tasmania overflowed into the social hour when Mrs. T. F. Bowen and Mrs. F. Wilson presided at the tea table.

Grade one was represented by Deborah Grass playing "A Dance" by D. G. Kelley and Nancy May, playing "Marching Trumpets" by Frederick Nosko. A grade three student played Bobtes by Handel. Allegro from Sonata Kuhlau, grade four selection was rendered by Karen Johansen. Four grade six pupils brought the following selections to the program. Courante (Lully) by Donna Grass, Minuet (Ingelbrecht) by Bonnie Faulkner; Courante (Handel), Susan Sweet, and Minuet (C. F Scale) by Penny Rose.

Stanzat's "Study in Dupie Time" was played by Karen Terry, a grade seven student. Kathrine Sine, also a grade seven student played "The Waltz" by Schubert. James Nosko, a grade nine pupil played two selections, "Air Fast-Invention by J. S. Bach and Minuet by Schubert. Part way through the program, Mrs. Veley conducted a theory contest. Jim Nosko was the winner.

For music appreciation Mrs. Veley and Jim Nosko played "The Storm King" by E. T. Paul in duet. Mrs. D. Shorey served light refreshments.

B. C. Girl Makes Good As Model

One of the few Canadian models to have made good in New York, Gail says she must be perfectly groomed on every occasion.

"It's a demanding life—where one must be on stage at all times," she said.

Gail says a girl with stars in her eyes and clutching a dollar bill in her hand sometimes is unsually finished before she starts in New York.

Models must be prepared to deal with tough-minded men and women who are tops in their field, and must have plenty of hard-headed sense, self-confidence, common sense, ability to make and maintain personal contacts and a pleasant personality and good looks.

And the main thing is to keep one's eye on the goal ahead—dollars and success.

Gail, who has been in New York only a matter of months, says "lots of the top girls make more than $25,000 a year. I'm not near there yet, but watch out."

GO, GO, GO

A tall, willowy, 120-pound brunette, Gail is "on the go all day, flying about like a big bird. Man, it's a real rat race in there."

There are jobs in New York for all kinds of looks and for no looks at all.

"They have to decide what type you are. They're always in the sportswear type, hair flying in the wind, the seashore, sports cars, cigarettes, that type of thing."

She has concluded that it isn't true that everyone is on the make in New York. They're too busy.

PRESBYTERIAN CLUB

IVANHOE — St. Andrew's Presbyterian Club met in the Ivanhoe Cultural Centre for a delicious turkey supper to members of the congregation and guests on Friday evening.

Following supper Mr. Thomson Dodds conducted the worship service.

Mrs. Harry Benson spoke briefly on the benefits of sharing. Neil Sills, president of the group for the fine work done by the group during the year.

Mrs. Benson introduced the guests, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Parrott of Belleville, who showed slides on their recent trip to Russia and the Scandinavian countries. Mr. Parrott, who acted as narrator, described pictures of the Kremlin's old churches, new apartments and new apartment buildings.

These slides proved most informative and interesting.

Mrs. Barton Haggerty on behalf of all present, thanked Mr. and Mrs. Parrott for sharing their travel experiences with them.

Ice Skating Recreation for Blind People

VANCOUVER (CP)—Ice skating has become part of the physical education program at a school for the blind here through the efforts of an instructor at the University of British Columbia scene.

Mrs. Henry Deering began with five blind children as an experiment. It was a success and today she has 50 blind pupils.

They're easier to teach than sighted persons because they're so eager, she says, adding that once they are taught to fall relaxed they are over their greatest fear.

"The first thing I do with the pupils is to make them tough the ice. Most of them have never felt it before. Then I show them how to sit down and stand up on the ice, and teach them how to fall relaxed."

She guides their hands through patterns so give them an idea how their feet should move.

The results have been impressive—"some of them are excellent skaters," she says, modestly says "it's the most rewarding thing I've ever done."

Ann Landers

Dreams May Indicate Subconcious Desires

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I'm a respectable married woman with a good husband and two nice children. The problem is this: Almost every night I dream about my boss.

I admire this man very much. He is the kindest and most generous person I have ever known. He is also old enough to be my father so I have no romantic interest in him whatever — at least not during the daytime. But when night rolls around it's a different story.

ANN LANDERS

The next day in the office I can hardly face him. I keep telling myself a person can't help what he dreams, but the boss must wonder why I act so self-conscious. When he speaks to me I always pretend to be fussing with a hangnail or a loose button on my blouse — anything to avoid looking him in the eye.

The boss' wife does not treat him very nicely which makes me mad, but of course this is none of my business and I would never let on that I notice. In my dreams he is always seeking consolation from me.

My embarrassment is beginning to interfere with my work. Do dreams mean anything? Can you help me? — DOUBLE LIFE.

* * *

DEAR LIFE — Yes, dreams do mean something, but I'm no interpreter of dreams and would not presume to tell you what they mean.

At the subconscious level you unquestionably have some suppressed desires in connection with your boss. If these dreams disturb you perhaps you'd better get another job before your subconscious desires turn into conscious ones.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Our daughter married a young man with whom she had kept steady company for four years. During their courtship the parents of the young man were polite but cool to us. We were never invited to their home for dinner although we accepted two invitations to ours.

Recently I had occasion to call at their home. They did not suggest that my husband come, too, although other couples were present. He was crushed and now says we must have nothing to do with these people since it is apparent they don't care for our company.

We have planned several family affairs this year and have decided not to invite them. Our daughter is hurt and embarrassed by the attitude of her in-laws but we do not speak of it. Are we right in excluding them? — WOUNDED MOTHER.

* * *

DEAR HEAVY HEARTS — Being related is not a good enough reason to invite people to your parties. Furthermore, these people are causing your daughter's relations, not yours.

Since they have indicated no desire to count you as social friends, take the hint. Invite them only when their absence would embarrass your daughter and son-in-law, such as a christening party for your grandchild or your children's wedding anniversary.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — A very good friend of mine is under 30 years of age. She is beautiful, bright and holds a responsible position. This woman has just married for the third time — another handsome, mean, abusive sweet-talker with an alcoholic problem. Her first husband and the third husband look enough alike to be brothers.

I would be willing to bet my bottom dollar that this marriage will end up as the others did — in pieces. Why would such an intelligent, beautiful woman be stupid enough to make the same mistake three times? — DISTRESSED ONLOOKER.

* * *

DEAR LOOKER — Your friend's choice of husbands has nothing to do with brains. The woman marries punitive, abusive men because she has a personality problem.

Ann Landers' frank and informative new book, "Teen-Agers and Sex" ($2.95) is now available at your book store.

Film to Help Young Patients Overcome Their Fears of Hospitals

WINNIPEG (CP) Winnipeg Children's Hospital is planning to make a film to help young patients overcome fear of hospitals and ease the nervousness of their parents.

"We find parents don't tell their children they are going to have an operation, then bolt them into the hospital situation and are surprised the child is disturbed by the experience," a hospital spokesman says.

"Sometimes the youngsters are told they are going to the circus to see some pleasurable event. Then they are taken to the hospital and abandoned.

"We've had cases where patients reverted to the infantile stage of development after coming home from the hospital, bed-wetting or showing other signs of disturbance. In one other case a child had nightmares two months after coming home."

To reduce such side effects, patients and their parents in recent years have been shown a 15-minute educational film from a Los Angeles children's hospital. Films have also been made by several doctors of the hospital for patients-to-be.

Now the hospital here is to have its clinical photography department make its own film, using frightening shots of doctors, nurses or such equipment as oxygen tents.

Children respond much better to efforts to help them if they aren't afraid and understand what hospitals are trying to do, a doctor said.

FABRIC EFFECT ON FASHION

When chemically blended fibres, woven into fabrics, were first introduced to the buying public in ready-made fashions and in materials by the yard, the people selling these products assumed that every woman who bought them was as vitally concerned with their chemical nature as they were. I can remember sitting through fashion shows in those days when the commentator sounded like a chemistry professor. The new and novel names for some of these materials fell strangely on ears, that were used to the soft sound of silk and the warm tones of wool.

By now, we have thoroughly adapted to our changing world and we know, by actual experience, that the research laboratories have produced a vast array of timesaving, practical and beautiful fabrics. Homemakers and women will willingly sacrifice beauty in fashion just because its ascribed to man's genius. Today, we know, of course, that no such sacrifice is necessary with the long list of fabrics available.

Arnel, one of these fabrics, has been given credit for the resurgence of white in the summer wardrobe. Up until arnel introduction, white summer wear was a luxury that most of us yearned for, but few could afford because of the heavy cost of upkeep. After all, "two weeks with pay" at a resort called for more than one white dress, especially if that skirt became soiled or met with an accident before the two weeks were up. But the washability of all these new fabrics removes such worries.

NYLON STOCKINGS

Nylon stockings were first introduced just before the second world war, and then withdrawn for industrial use. But nylon had so firmly entrenched itself in the minds of women that, when it came back again, its arrival was heralded with mob scenes and near riots. Some stores thought it necessary to hold "N-Day" sales to reintroduce it to their customers. The results were terrifying. Some of our younger readers will find this hard to believe but one of the few times in my life when I actually felt real terror, was when I found myself between an avalanche of determined customers and a counter of nylons.

Pegg Rogers, girl reporter, took to her heels and the safety of the nearest telephone booth. The stock of nylons was sold out in two hours, glass counters were smashed and the police had to be called. Sometimes a sale can be too successful.

Now we have the advantages of chemistry in the field of fashion more calmly now. We see evidences of it in well-styled handbags, foundation garments which effect dramatic figure improvements, and the ease with change color "as easily as you change your nail polish."

If you have a question on fashion, just write Pegg Rogers in care of this paper.

Dean of Women at Brandon Is Bright, Stylish Person

BRANDON, Man. (CP) If you have a stereotyped image of a dean of women as a middle-aged old-fashioned individual with an ivory tower attitude toward education, it is time for you to haven't met Flora Cowan.

There is nothing dry, distant or vague about this charming woman, a stylish, bright person who is intensely interested in all about her.

And a mark of her eagerness to take part in all aspects of life around her is the fact that not only is she dean of women at Brandon University, but she serves as the only woman member of city council.

Born in Edinburgh, she came with her parents to Canada and they settled in Transcona, now a part of Metropolitan Winnipeg, where her father entered the construction business.

After graduating from a business course, she gained a prized position for women of the time, secretary to manager of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange.

It was there she met and married Frank Cowan whose work as a civil engineer took them on a round of small Manitoba centres. During this time she had a son and a daughter and became intensely interested in community work, attaining a position on the national executive of the IODE.

CHAMPION GOLFER

She also had a lively interest in sports and managed to win the Western Open women's golf championship one year.

But in 1945 her husband was drowned while trying to save another man in Clear Lake and the first of her tragedies was upon her.

She joined her son Frank here in the lumber and construction business. Again tragedy struck when, in 1951, Frank was killed in a highway accident.

It was then that Brandon Col-

Garden Notes

You Can Test Plant Seeds

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

The longer days and the stronger sun start the gardener on seed lists and garden plans. If you are in the habit of saving seed from special plants you can test them now for viability.

If they do not sprout there will still be plenty of time to buy new seed and you will save yourself the time and effort of planting useless seed.

Some perennial seed must be planted within a few weeks of ripening or they will dry out and the embryo dies. Most annuals will be viable for at least a year. Some retain the spark of life for several years. They should be stored in a dry place in a temperature between 30 and 70 degrees. A glass jar with tight fitting top is ideal.

To determine the percent of seeds that will sprout take a shallow dish, pie plate, or a glass covered casserole dish. Spread clean, damp sand half to one inch deep in the dish. On top of the damp sand place a piece of damp blotting paper or cotton. The cotton should be sterilized by boiling or ironing with a hot iron. The cotton should be big enough to tuck under to the bottom of the dish. This will act as a wick to draw the moisture up to the surface for the seeds.

MAKE TEST KIT

Mark the blotting paper or cotton into 12 squares or a dozen circles with a pencil. Put in seeds of one kind of plant in each section. Space them conservely. This makes a test kit for 12 kinds of seeds. Cover the dish with another of the same size so the kit is almost air tight. I prefer to cover the dish with a plastic bag. Keeps the moisture in and allows exchange of air, which is necessary to all growing plants. Keep at 60 to 80 degrees.

Keep the surface damp but not wet. Too much moisture will cause mold and the seeds will rot.

As the seeds sprout remove them promptly with tweezers. Left to they would take the moisture from the air and dry out the cloth spoiling the test of the slower seeds. If mold appears scrape it off with the seeds in that section to keep it from spreading. Start a new test of that kind of seed in another dish.

KEEP RECORDS

Keep a record of the number of seeds planted and the number germinating. It will tell you how many seeds to plant to keep your seeds for spring planting.

This test will not apply with hybrid seeds. Commercial aquedigia (columbine) Canterbury bells of Ireland, lupines, lantanas, mallow flowers, morning glory verbena and violets.

Sow these and other slow germinating seeds in a pot of sterile soil. Cover with a piece of glass or poly bag and a dark cloth or put in a brown paper bag and close the bag to keep out the light. Keep at 70 to 75 degrees and just slightly moist.

Monkshood, adonis, dictamnus (gas plant) plantain lily, evening primrose, perennial phlox, painted daisy (pyrethrum) are slow germinators. They take from 100 to 180 days to germinate. You can hurry the process somewhat by soaking the seeds for from 15 to 20 minutes in double strength rapid-gro before planting. This works well with other seeds too.

Cold Weather Care Starts Under Hood

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

On these icy mornings, you're bound to have starting troubles if battery or ignition system is handicapped by, contaminants such as water, corrosion, grease oil, etc.

Battery power is considerably affected by frigid temperatures, as you realize, so we can't allow anything else to weaken it — but we often do. Corrosion between terminals and battery post can be enough to prevent adequate power flow and easy starting — and a battery is frequently run down before this condition is uncovered.

Moisture or dampness can wet plugs, distributor cap, cable connections, etc. — or form a film for starting on them which will prevent starting. Until they are dried out, you can't expect the strong spark you needed to bring that cold engine to life. And then you have lead and-or carbon crusts which insulate spark plug firing ends. This interference with the spark's ability to produce that fat spark and start engine action.

Finally, don't overlook what dust can do. On points, at plug connections or coil and distributor sockets, it forms a dirt or grit wall that blocks off part of the voltage needed to fire the combustible mixture in the cylinders.

From S. W.: "Something seems to be blocking my oil filler pipe. I must pour the oil in slowly, otherwise it backs up."

A clogged crankcase ventilating system, air intake or choked pipe will show up via an abnormally slow oil fill.

H. F. writes: "My fuel gauge is apparently broken. The arrow stays over past the full mark even if the tank is down to the last gallon of gas."

A short in the wiring, the tank unit, or the dash unit is likely the cause. Your service station can pinpoint it with a jumper wire.

T. E. asks: "Recently, you said a sticking manifold heat valve causes slow engine warmup and I found out that this has been my trouble. How about advising a treatment to prevent this valve from sticking?"

From D. B.: "After just 600 or 700 miles my plugs are coated with carbon on the electrodes. Would this indicate worn piston rings, despite the facts that the car is a low mileage 1962 model?"

of murder in the first degree in other states. It carries a maximum penalty of execution in the electric chair. The minimum is two years in prison.

Wade says he will demand the death penalty for Ruby. Out of 25 murder trials, Wade has obtained 24 convictions.

It appears that Ruby's trial will develop into a battle of psychiatrists.

His defence will pivot on a claim of temporary insanity, the assertion that he became unhinged with grief by the death of the president.

His chief defence counsel, Melvin Monroe Belli of San Francisco, pictured Ruby as a victim of psychomotor epilepsy, subject to blackouts, which could be touched off by rage, shock, or a powerful emotion.

He said he did not know whether he would put Ruby on the witness stand, but he said: "If he's on the stand a long time, you'll see a definite dysfunction. This guy, if you keep him there, on the stand or in jail much longer, you won't have to take him any place to show he's wacky."

The state contends that Ruby was completely sane when he shot Oswald.

One is the speculation that Kennedy's death was the result of a monstrous conspiracy, and that Ruby killed Oswald to "keep him from talking."

The other is Belli's contention that Dallas is so saturated with prejudice and feelings of guilt that Ruby cannot get a fair trial there. He says people in Dallas want a "sacrifice" to purge the name of the city.

Belli is the specialist who has the trial moved to some other city.

The top team, and the runners-up in the mixed bonspiel for which the Prince Edward Curling Club was host, are pictured above. Back row, the Champs, left to right, Glen Jerome, skip, Barbara French, vice, Alan French, second, and Betty Jerome, lead. Front row, the runners-up, left to right, Grant Millar, skip, Laura Millar, vice, Gordon Stockwell, lead, and Mae Stockwell, lead.

bombs exploded under the bleachers of a softball field near Saigon airport, killing two U.S. men and injuring 23 other Americans.

Although police declined to discuss the rickshaw boy's suspected role in the bombing, the shooting and blast apparently were the work of a highly skilled terrorist team.

ATTACKERS SEEN

Witnesses saw at least two terrorists. They said one shot the military policeman at close range, commandeered a jeep in the theatre with a canvas satchel. A third man—or woman—also was reported involved.

A U.S. military spokesman said the lone Vietnamese civil guard on duty while the theatre was seen pedalling away on a bicycle shortly before the attack.

The MP was killed by a single bullet through the neck. At least 1,000 persons were in the theatre, indicating the soldier may have got off some shots.

The explosion was rocked by two terrorist bombs placed against a wall last Sept. 21, but there were no American casualties. The theatre is on one of the most heavily guarded streets in Saigon, and only persons who show U.S. defence department identification cards are allowed into it.

The audience, which included U.S. servicemen, civilian officials and American dependents, was watching The List of Adrian Messenger. Army M.I. William Koch, a patron, said most of the audience ducked under the seats when the first bomb went off.

The warning probably prevented even more casualties.

WANTS ACTION

BALTIMORE (AP)—Dr. Eugene H. Guthrie, director of the U.S. surgeon-general's special committee on smoking and health, wants the American Medical Association to take a stand against smoking. He said "It's time for physicians, individually and as a group, to stand up and be counted," Dr. Guthrie told a medical meeting here Sunday.

Napanee Rink Winner in Mixed Spiel

PICTON (Staff) — On Saturday, the Prince Edward Curling Rink were hosts at the first invitational mixed bonspiel in their new premises, which was voted by those attending, as an outstanding success.

When the final scores of the three draws had been completed, Glen Jerome, of the Napanee Curling Club with Barbara French, Alan French and Betty Jerome were the winners of the three-game high. Glen Miller of the Trenton RCAF were runners-up; he had Laura Miller, Gordon and Mae Stockwell as his team.

In the two-game high, Bill Rayeroft, Trenton RCAF, and his rink of Maureen Rayeroft, and Laura and Paul Brady were tops. In the runner-up position was Wally Bryant of Picton, with Edith Bryant, Teresa Fletcher and Jerry Rabnett.

Roger Maybee of Trenton RCAF was tops in the one game high. Roger had Irene Morlarity, Hans Stokes and Nina Hudgins as his team. Runners-up in the one-game high, Ron Henry of Marmora, with Lorraine Steenburgh and Bernice and Raymond Smith.

TRENERS HIT TRAIN

ELGIN, Okla. (AP) — Four Oklahoma teen - agers were killed Sunday when the car in which they were riding collided with a train inside the city limits of this southern Oklahoma city. The victims were identified as Robert Hewitt, 16, the driver; Willie Jay Jr., 17, Myrtio Schrader, 17, and Marie Nance, about 15.

Hotel Fire Was Quickly Extinguished

PICTON (Staff) — Fire of undetermined origin, but believed to have been started by a carelessly thrown cigarette, forced the occupants of the third floor of the Royal Hotel to evacuate their rooms at about 1.45 a.m. Sunday.

Most of the occupants were participants or viewers of the Ontario Bantamfinal, championships being played at the Armories here. They huddled on the sidewalk in front of the hotel, clutching their racquets and suitcases. Most of them had not retired when the fire started.

The fire was in the huge floor length drapes and although it was quickly extinguished with hand equipment, the Picton Fire Department checked out the entire hotel, before the guests went back to their rooms about 15 minutes later. The smoke was quite heavy on the third floor. Damage was not heavy, some scorched woodwork and a pair of drapes.

POET DIES

VANCOUVER (CP)—Thomas Brooks, 82, pioneer, poet and sourdough, has died at Carcross in the Yukon. Word of the death of the author of Ballads of the Northwest was received Sunday. Mr. Brooks was born in Scotland and came to Canada at the age of 16. He had lived in Carcross for the last 40 years.

Minor Hockey Leagues Scores

PICTON (Staff)—There was the usual excitement at the local arena on Saturday morning as the Atoms, the Peewees and the Bantams played their usual league games.

To some people, these games are not important, but the winning of the Stanley Cup pales into insignificance compared to just winning one of these games to the youngsters.

On Saturday, in the Peewee division, the Bisons dropped the Bobcats 3-1, the Aces shellacked the Indians 7-2, and Milford beat out the Beavers by a close 2-1 score.

In the Atom league, the Royals rode roughshod over the Blades dropping them by a lopsided 7-1 score. It was Milford over the Canucks 3-2. The Quakers and Waupoos score was not posted on the board.

In the Bantam league, the Black Hawks and the Teepees played to a one all draw. The Bisons dropped the Marlboros 4-3, the Rangers over the Marlboros by a 4-2 score and the Canadiens whitewashed Milford, 2-0.

Successful Living

Night Owlish Tactics Of Toddler Upset Dad

DEAR DORIS — We have done everything it says in the book. Just the same our 17-month-old daughter wakes up in the middle of the night, starts to sing, to talk, to cry — anything so long as it's noise — and keeps us awake for hours.

I tried slapping her to stop her. Then my conscience pricked me and I lay awake worrying about it. Was I wrong? What would you do? — PAPPY.

DEAR PAPPY — Trouble is, you can't just read a book and proceed to raise children. Then go to sleep (on or off the job, as it were).

Try:

(1) Keeping her up later.
(2) Giving her more exercise, such as a walk ahead of bedtime.
(3) Going to bed earlier yourself to make up for midnight sessions.
(4) Helping her learn to be quiet when she wakes up in the night.

Slapping is no good, according to me. She has no idea she's being bad; just doing what comes naturally. It's your job to learn what that is!

DEAR DORIS — I have been trying to develop an all round nice personality, but seem to be going from bad to worse. My real problem is getting along with people. Up until three or four months ago I got along fine with my parents. But as of late they always seem to be nagging at me. I suppose it is my fault but I can't seem to change it.

I am just an average person but would always like to have a nice personality (kind, gentle, not loud, but really alive and live for the joy of it).

Could you possibly give me some hints? I know this will not help me unless I help myself. — WILLING TO TRY.

DEAR WILLING — Then I'm willing to help. And my first suggestion is that you talk seriously with your parents; ask for their encouragement rather than nagging.

Then delve in yourself more. Think positive thoughts: "I can do it; I know I can!" And read a book I am sending you the name of.

Develop imagination in how the other person feels, and give him (or her) your willing sympathy. Don't mind showing concern. Be sure you know it: you'll have given someone a life — and yourself a first lesson in Personality Plus!

* * *

DEAR DORIS — I have decided to become a nurse but don't know exactly what to do. Is it better to take grade 13 and then three years' training or take a university course?

I have read your column several times and place much faith in your counsel. — STUDENT.

DEAR STUDENT — What you do depends on how you are doing. If your grades are high, keep on with the academic studies and get a university degree in nursing. If studying takes hard plugging, you'd be better to get into practical training sooner.

With a degree you learn hospital management and nurse-teaching as well as nursing. If you'll settle for bedside nursing — which is a noble, rewarding job — there's plenty of it for grade 13, hospital trained nurses without degree.

Wild Blizzard Hits Maritimes

HALIFAX (CP) A wild snowstorm continued to pound the Maritime provinces today with high winds and driving, blinding snow.

It began Sunday with heavy snow and 60 - mile - an - hour winds. The resulting drifts halted ground transportation in most areas, and airline flights were cancelled.

Yarmouth, N.S., got the heaviest snowfall—17½ inches. Halifax got 13 inches and Charlottetown 14. Snowing stopped in all areas but Sydney about dawn.

At Fredericton, on the fringe of the storm, about four inches of snow fell and winds gusted to 40 miles an hour. All highways in that area were open today.

Beatles Wildly Welcomed at Miami Beach

MIAMI BEACH (AP)—Shrieking teen - age girls wildly welcomed the Beatles Sunday night but the situation remained in hand. Not a thing was broken.

The youngsters were outnumbered by middle-aged folks viewing the English rock 'n' roll quartet's appearance at a Miami Beach hotel. This didn't restrain the youngsters' enthusiasm but they were outnumbered.

The older people in the audience seemed to get as big a kick out of the teenage girls' reactions as they did from the Beatles' act.

Successful Living

Night Owlish Tactics Of Toddler Upset Dad

DEAR DORIS — We have done everything it says in the book. Just the same our 17-month-old daughter wakes up in the middle of the night, starts to sing, to talk, to cry — anything so long as it's noise — and keeps us awake for hours.

I tried slapping her to stop her. Then my conscience pricked me and I lay awake worrying about it. Was I wrong? What would you do? — PAPPY.

DEAR PAPPY — Trouble is, you can't just read a book and proceed to raise children. Then go to sleep (on or off the job, as it were).

Try:

(1) Keeping her up later.
(2) Giving her more exercise, such as a walk ahead of bedtime.
(3) Going to bed earlier yourself to make up for midnight sessions.
(4) Helping her learn to be quiet when she wakes up in the night.

Slapping is no good, according to me. She has no idea she's being bad; just doing what comes naturally. It's your job to learn what that is!

DEAR DORIS — I have been trying to develop an all round nice personality, but seem to be going from bad to worse. My real problem is getting along with people. Up until three or four months ago I got along fine with my parents. But as of late they always seem to be nagging at me. I suppose it is my fault but I can't seem to change it.

I am just an average person but would always like to have a nice personality (kind, gentle, not loud, but really alive and live for the joy of it).

Could you possibly give me some hints? I know this will not help me unless I help myself. — WILLING TO TRY.

DEAR WILLING — Then I'm willing to help. And my first suggestion is that you talk seriously with your parents; ask for their encouragement rather than nagging.

Then delve in yourself more. Think positive thoughts: "I can do it; I know I can!" And read a book I am sending you the name of.

Develop imagination in how the other person feels, and give him (or her) your willing sympathy. Don't mind showing concern. Be sure you know it: you'll have given someone a life — and yourself a first lesson in Personality Plus!

DEAR DORIS — I have decided to become a nurse but don't know exactly what to do. Is it better to take grade 13 and then three years' training or take a university course?

Biculturalism Lesson

Respect Plus Compromise Brings Equality, Success

By HARVIE GAY
of the Regina Leader-Post

GRAVELBOURG, Sask. (CP) — Biculturalism is a two - way street paved with compromises in this southern Saskatchewan farming community of 1,500.

There is an atmosphere of unity between French and English residents although the French say they bear more of the load on the road of compromise.

Gravelbourg is the largest of the French-speaking communities sprinkled throughout Saskatchewan. Three islands of French culture were established by 20,000 settlers lured to the province between 1911 and 1929 from Quebec and the Eastern United States.

Gravelbourg's population is 76 per cent French and 95 per cent Roman Catholic. If biculturalism is to be equality, it is found here; if it means practical knowledge and respect for the other culture, it has found a considerable measure of success.

Businessmen admit there are differences and conflicts. They say there are sentiments in both cultures who favor isolation but the disagreements are more among the groups themselves than between French and English.

The main conflict within the French community is over how much integration—if any—there should be with the English.

SPEAK ENGLISH

The French speak English fluently and most English speak enough French to get by. Evidence of coexistence is found in various situations.

The community only English doctor is physician for the French convent. Sermons in Our Lady of the Assumption Cathedral—built by the French in 1918 —are in English and French.

Town council meetings are in English although only one or two councillors at any one time have to be English. Service clubs hold their meetings in English but the Knights of Columbus read the minutes in both languages.

The United Church minister, only representative of another faith in the community, is permitted to give religious instruction in the schools if he wishes.

D. L. Hubbard, lay minister of the United Church, says the Protestant minority is more than pleased with the education its children are receiving in the Catholic schools. There is no agitation to form a separate Protestant school system.

"People here are very broad-minded. If we put on a church function the largest patronage comes from the Roman Catholics."

MAY LOSE LANGUAGE

The French have attempted to encourage use of the mother tongue but have met strong competition from television and the influence of the English-speaking world that surrounds them.

Prominent French community leaders fear loss of the language eventually, unless action is taken to preserve it. And they are afraid loss of the language would mean loss of their cultural identity.

French children are taught in English, their entertainment is in English and the cultural tendency is to speak English. Parents encourage the use of French at home but say they sigh, losing ground.

Gravelbourg has a French radio station and its manager, Jean-Marie DePaul, thinks radio programming plays a major role in maintaining French culture.

But he says one hour a day of French instruction in school is not enough. He advocates teaching children French for the first three years in school so they will preserve their mother tongue and suggests English children should receive French instruction for an hour a day.

SCHOLARSHIP NEED

Rev. Dominique Dugas, rector of the Roman Catholic cathedral, says that when Quebec welcomes financially independent—and he is confident it will—it will be able to channel more money toward scholarships for students in Quebec.

"I feel the best we can do in Saskatchewan is hold our own," Father Dugas says. "We could do better if we had a coast-to-coast French television network."

Most townspeople say there are no separatists in Gravelbourg although A. L. Sirois, president of Association Catholique Franco-Canadien de la Saskatchewan, declares: "What Quebec is clamoring for—status and equality—we are sympathetic to, as any minority group would be."

ferent from those of the past."

He said Donald C. MacDonald, leader of the Ontario New Democratic Party, and Mike Fenwick, vice-president of the OFL, both of whom spoke earlier, had not come up with a single new idea.

STEEK RE-ARRANGEMENT

"All you keep calling us is to re-arrange the old Mess," he said.

Gower Markle, education director of the Steelworkers, said traditional practices and industry can serve as dead weight on the labor movement. Unions must become more flexible and receptive.

Discussing problems of automation, Miles Endicott, research director of the United Packinghouse Workers of America (CLC), suggested a closer approximation of work to leisure.

"Automation requires that we change the basic concept of no work-no pay," he said. "Sedentism is in his seens. Whatever counter to calvinistic ethics, we must accept the principal of income unrelated to work."

Mr. Endicott said that while shorter work-weeks and periods of takehome pay have become an acceptable form of income without leisure, he favors pay for "non-work" at the plant or community centres.

Mr. Endicott's plan calls for such projects as a brewery worker using his extra leisure time and equipment to brew his own beer or an auto worker using his paid leisure time to hand-build a car.

He told the conference that his plan would take care of increased spare time and it would counter objections that unemployment benefits or pensions destroy moral fibre by providing something for nothing.

He said in an interview that tax concessions-to-employers using such a scheme is a better way of handling the cost of the idea.

R. D. Anderson, general manager of the industrial Accident Prevention Association, said labor's attitude has been responsible for an increase of industrial accidents.

He said labor representatives complain about management's domination of safety organizations but don't attend open meetings of the IAPA to present suggestions.

Donald J. Clough, executive director of a steering committee to establish the Ontario Foundation of Automation and Employment said employees as well as employers should be given the right to elect the directors of the firms they work for.

Mr. Clough, assistant professor of industrial engineering at the University of Toronto said that at the risk of being labelled a crackpot he would suggest one way to bridge the gap between labor and management is to give employees a stronger vote in the major decisions affecting their lives.

Billy Rose

thropist and stock speculator. "A lot of people say I ought to 'call myself an investor,'" said Rose. "But in the days of the nuclear bomb we're all speculators."

He has no idea how many millions he's worth, or how much he's given away to date.

What he does know is that most satisfying of his careers was as a writer. He wrote all the words to some 500 tunes and about 35 are still fairly popular. They include "It's Only a Paper Moon, That Old Gang of Mine, More Than You Know and Million Dollar Baby.

Rose has cut down considerably on his activities in recent years, but keeps busy "because I'm not ready to sit by the fireside and read my scrapbooks."

He recently reduced his weight to 127 from 137 pounds, through exercise and the "hard-candy diet. If it tastes good, don't eat it."

$50 Billion U.S. in Space

A Costly Playpen Among the Stars!

By BEM PRICE

WASHINGTON (AP)—At age five, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration has the solar system for a playpen and dollars for building-blocks.

NASA's accomplishments in placing satellites into orbit and the man-in-space program are impressive but there is official concern here about the high cost.

By 1970, the U.S. space agency will have spent—at the current rate of expenditures—somewhere between $35,000,000,000 and $50,000,000,000 in establishing a space program which looks toward a manned landing on the moon.

In its first five years NASA's budget has expanded to $5,100,000,000 from $340,000,000 and the agency is asking for $5,300,000,000 for fiscal 1962.

PAYS HIGH SALARIES

NASA has approximately 32,000 employees. It pays the highest salaries of any federal agency and has more people (349) in jobs paying $18,500 to $21,000 annually than any other two federal agencies.

In a report to Congress the House of Representatives space committee said it is concerned that "our national space program is one probing into many unknown and uncharted areas and that NASA must be allowed a certain flexibility in the management of its funds."

Centaur was scheduled by NASA for its first flight in Jan-uary, 1962, but was delayed to Nov. 27, 1963—two years and 11 months behind schedule. The Centaur has cost $237,000,000 so far.

ESTIMATE WRONG

Nevertheless the upcoming office released a report last October which said a miscalculation would cause the Centaur could lift had forced cancellation of the defence department's Advent project.

While waiting for development of the Centaur the defence department is paying Hughes about $4,000,000 a month on Advent, designed to carry out 15 scientific experiments in space.

Beyond this, NASA has had some unfortunate failures.

Six of the Ranger shots, designed to send operating television cameras to the moon, have failed. Each failure has cost around $18,000,000.

Mariner 1, launched Mariner 1, which was to investigate the atmospheres around Venus. Failure to key a typhoon in the guidance formula, NASA has said, caused the rocket to veer off course and be destroyed. Cost: $20,000,000.

The year-by-year record established by NASA shows that the space agency has yet to complete a major program on schedule or at the original cost estimate.

MERCURY YEAR LATE

For example, Project Mercury, which put all astronauts into space, was roughly a year behind the original schedule. It was expected to cost $200,000,000. The final NASA report said it cost $384,000,000.

The report involves Project Ranger failures.

Rep. Edgar A. Cortwright, deputy director of the office of space sciences, commented in testimony to the House space committee on Ranger setback:

"... Quality controls and the uniformity of standards were spotty."

Ranger is the responsibility of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory at Pasadena, Calif. It is a corporate subsidiary of the California Institute of Technology.

There are scientists at Pasadena qualified to discuss industrial standards. They feel, however, that such a discussion should not be attributed to them by name.

They reported launch vehicles had been delivered with water in the fuel tanks and 'loose nuts' rattling around which in the weightlessness of space would float and cause short circuits.

One physicist commented that NASA had become a training ground for scientists, fresh from the universities, and the young scientists often were described "to push the state of the art."

"The temptation to undertake advanced things is so great," he said, "that few are willing to be restrained by considerations of technology."

AVON JEWELLERY

First complete showing of Avon Jewellery's 1964 line will be next week, at the Gift Show in Toronto. The line was introduced Jan. 10, but the show will be the first time all 1,500-plus items have been shown together. Robert Fargey of Belleville will handle Avon's booth at the four-day show.

Belleville people will get a good look at the Avon line Feb. 26, at the "Fantasy in Fashions" show, presented by the Women's Auxiliary to the Hastings and Prince Edward County Medical Society. All jewellery at the show will be by Avon.

Two definite trends are showing in jewellery for the coming year, according to Joel Maser of Avon. First is in earrings for pierced ears, which should gain about 25 per-cent over the market for the same item last year.

Avon is an early bird with this type of earring though, and may sell three times as many of them as it did last year.

The other trend is to abstract designs, ("the beatnick line", employees at Avon call it). Some of these designs represent animals and flowers, others are just shapes.

Reception at the Gift Show will determine Avon's prospects for the coming year, but the firm already has indications those prospects are good. Pre-show orders are above last year's level.

DELORO STELLITE

Samples will be tested for about three months by a U.S. firm interested in signing a contract that might mean an extra half-million dollars a year for Deloro Stellite. Negotiations have been going on with the unidentified prospect for more than a year now. All that remains is proof that the Stellite products perform as well as Deloro's tests show they will.

Deloro sales manager Bruce MacKenzie is in England now, talking sales plans with J. E. Carter, newly appointed managing director of Deloro Smelting and Refining Ltd. Mr. Carter joined the Deloro firm in 1945, in Deloro and was sent to England to manage Deloro Ltd. in 1948. Now managing director of the Canadian parent firm, he is responsible for Deloro operations in Canada, England and France. Pat Houston of Belleville remains as general manager of Deloro Smelting and Refining and of the Deloro Stellite plant in Belleville.

ELECTRONIC CONTROLS LTD.

Somebody goofed in a post office somewhere in Canada, the U.S. or Venezuela, and part of the specifications for an Electronic Controls Ltd. quote on a job in Venezuela were lost. E.C.L. sales manager Bill McPherson found out about the mistake last week, when the Venezuela representative phoned to ask about the missing details. Replacements for the missing papers have been sent.

ALUMINUM STAR

Aluminum Star Co. made the new sign for LaPalm's Moving and Storage, erected last week by men from Foley's Foundry and Machine. Letters in the sign are four feet high, cast aluminum, enamelled.

ONTARIO HYDRO

PERCY PICKERING

Percy W. Pickering of Belleville, has been named Electrical Inspection Superintendent for the Easter Region of Ontario Hydro, effective today. Before the new year he was Electrical Inspection Superintendent for the East Central Region; from the new year to now he has kept that title — even though the East Central Region no longer exists.

Mr. Pickering's job involves, among other tasks, on-the-spot inspection whenever a fire is attributed to electrical causes. This means he inspects at the scene of about one-quarter of all the fires in the district—but he finds that only about one in ten of these is actually due to an electrical fault. Often, he explains, a fire caused by carelessness, such as leaving inflammable material near an electric heater, is called an "electrical fire." In such a case, though, the cause of the fire is not an electrical fault. Mr. Pickering says that five times as many people drown in their own homes as are electrocuted at home.

COCA COLA

JOHN FOY

New plant manager at the Coca Cola plant in Belleville is John Foy, a Kingston man who started with Coca Cola six years ago in Kingston. He was transferred to Ottawa, then worked in franchise bottling plants around the country, coming to rest for a few years in Barrie. From Barrie he was moved to Toronto, as assistant sales manager for Coca Cola's Toronto Broadview plant, and from Toronto he came to Belleville. After four moves in the past five years, he hopes he's settled for a while in Belleville.

Married, Mr. Foy is the father of three pre-school age daughters.

Office manager at the Coke plant for quite a few years now, Jim Ketcheson is home with pneumonia. No complications are reported.

CANADA CEMENT

J. M. Legate of the Canada Cement plant at Point Anne was in Montreal all last week, in conference with superintendents of all other producing plants owned by the firm. Main purpose of the conference was to decide production and other plans for the coming year.

CANADA CEMENT TRANSPORT

Captain H. H. Thorn of the Cement Karrier retires tomorrow, after 22 years in command of th eship. He was hired by the firm during September of 1953, and has since carried cargo to nearly every port between Toronto and Halifax. Most years he sailed from Belleville to Toronto in the spring and moved down east to help other company ships in that area when his own work was done.

Official recognition of the value of his service to the company came Friday, in Montreal, when he was presented with a watch at the annual superintendent's convention. His crew gave a party for him in December, after his ship was laid up for the winter.

Married and with two adult children living away from home, Capt. Thorn is free now to do the travelling he has planned for years. Around home, his hobbies include fishing and gardening.

THIS NECKLACE SET with matching earrings is one item of Avon Jewellery's new line, going on display next week at the gift show in Toronto. Modelling the set is Miss Mary Minaker, 19, of Farley Avenue. Miss Minaker is an office employee of Avon Jewellery Company in this city.

Hoffa Freed On Charge of Jury-Tampering

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) Teamsters Union President James Hoffa was freed of a jury-tampering charge Saturday, but was directed to begin his defence against three other counts today.

U.S. District Judge Frank Wilson, acting at the government's request, entered a directed verdict of acquittal to a charge that one juror in Hoffa's 1962 conspiracy trial at Nashville was offered $10,000 to vote to acquit him then.

Chief prosecutor James B. Neal had requested the verdict after the government rested Friday. He said the court's rulings had prevented the prosecution's proving the alleged offer to Nashville insurance man James C. Tippens.

Wilson agreed, saying evidence of Hoffa's connection with the alleged incident was insufficient to warrant submitting it to the jury.

However, he overruled defence motions for directed verdicts of acquittal for Hoffa and his five co-defendants on the remaining three counts.

New Formula To Settle Canal Dispute Drafted

PANAMA CITY (AP)—Diplomats of the Organization of American States have drafted a new formula aimed at settling the dispute between the United States and Panama.

A Latin American diplomatic source said the proposal to end the deadlock over the Panama Canal was being presented today to Panamanian Foreign Minister Galileo Solis and U.S. special representative Edwin M. Martin.

The OAS committee, here since last Tuesday investigating Panama's charges that the United States is guilty of aggression, plans to leave Tuesday unless the new peace plan gets a favorable reception. Such a reception appeared unlikely, and the committee was expected to continue its conciliation efforts in Washington.

The new formula was said to differ in some respects from the unsuccessful OAS peace commission plan last month, which foundered on one word after apparent acceptance by both sides.

Panama said it would resume diplomatic relations with the United States, if the latter would "negotiate" changes in the 1903 canal treaty. The United States said it was ready only to "discuss" the treaty.

Communist China Is Almost Ready to Push Quarrel With Russia to Point of No Return

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

Recent developments hint that Communist China is almost ready to push its quarrel with the Russians beyond the point of no return with a blast that could shake world communism to its foundations.

China's leaders seem to be edging closer to the day when they will deliver the final blow to the already damaged Moscow-Peking axis.

The blow will fall if the Chinese government decides to denounce the Soviet leadership as colonialist. Repeated recitations of Chinese territorial grievances against the Russian may be paving the way for this outright accusation.

The Chinese in their Feb. 2 broadside against Khrushchev again brought up the question of China's Sinkiang province. When they do this and when they discuss "unequal" Russian-Chinese treaties, the goal seems not the hope of regaining territory but the expectation of applying pressure against Soviet Premier Khrushchev's leadership of world communism.

INCIDENTS 'PROVOKED'

Peking said Moscow "provoked incidents on the Chinese-Soviet border and carried out subversive activities in Sinkiang."

This evidently refers to incidents in 1962. Peking claimed the Russians fomented an uprising among Chinese in the mountainous Ili area of Sinkiang, near the border.

Sinkiang is huge and sparsely settled. Apart from wheat, cereals, cotton, sheep, cattle and the like, it has textiles, salt, gold, silver, lead, zinc, oil, jade and uranium. It is the site of the "new city," so named by Marco Polo, connecting China with India to the east and Iran to the west.

There are many other points of abrasion in Chinese-Soviet relations. It has been asserted the Chinese Communists were publishing maps and talking about revision of unequal treaties.

The abrasions go back a century, when Czarist Russia obtained Chinese Pacific territory which now includes the important Soviet port of Vladivostok. Much of what once was Chinese-dominated Central Asia now is Soviet territory.

Before the Communist revolution succeeded in 1949 in China, the Chinese Communist party is believed to have signed secret agreements with the Stalin regime for special Soviet concessions in Sinkiang.

In 1950, Stalin and Mao Tse-tung signed a 30-year friendship pact, apparently to carve Asia into Soviet and Chinese spheres. This pact promised to return Port Arthur and Dairen to China by the end of 1952. Stalin reneged.

34 Fatalities Across Canada During Weekend

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Traffic accidents in eight Canadian provinces accounted for about two-thirds of the 34 accidental fatalities reported in Canada during the weekend.

A survey by The Canadian Press from 6 p.m. Friday to midnight Sunday local times showed 22 traffic deaths, six drownings, three fire deaths and three unclassified deaths—an accidental shooting, a household fatality and an electrocution.

Ontario led with 20 deaths—12 traffic, four drownings, two in the fires and two unclassified.

Quebec had two traffic, one drowning and one unclassified. Nova Scotia and New Brunswick had two traffic each. Manitoba had one traffic and one fire; British Columbia one traffic and one drowning, and Alberta and Newfoundland one traffic each.

The survey does not include known suicides, slayings or industrial deaths.

Church Annuls Marriage of Princess

VATICAN CITY (AP)—The Roman Catholic Church has annulled the previous marriage of Princess Lee Radziwill, sister of Mrs. John F. Kennedy, and she her present husband since have solemnized their present union in a church wedding ceremony.

Vatican officials reporting this Sunday said the annulment was granted more than a month ago that the church marriage was performed shortly afterward in London.

The action annulled the 1953 church marriage of Mrs. Kennedy's sister to Michael Canfield, former U.S. diplomat who now is a publisher in England. This union ended, after a year, in divorce, which the church did not recognize.

The princess, the former Caroline Lee Bouvier, then married Prince Stanislas Radziwill, Polish nobleman, in a civil ceremony at Fairfax, Va., on March 19, 1959. She had been seeking a church annulment of her marriage to Canfield since 1958.

(The New York Sunday News said in a dispatch from Vatican City the annulment was granted on the claim that Canfield, a non-Catholic, had no intention of having children when he married. "Since having children is regarded as a primary aim of marriage in the Catholic church, Canfield's reservation was construed . . . as constituting grounds for annulment," The News said.

UN Moves To Prevent Cyprus War

By WILLIAM N. OATIS

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—The Cyprus dispute goes before the UN Security Council today as Britain and the United States seek to head off military intervention by Turkey and Greece. The council debate, requested by both Britain and Cyprus, was expected to launch negotiations for an international force linked to the United Nations. Its purpose would be to prevent another general outbreak of fighting between the Greek-and Turkish-Cypriot communities.

The United States and Britain fear that another serious outbreak would prompt Turkey and Greece to send in troops to back up their Cypriot kin. The result could be a war between Turkey and Greece, eastern anchors of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Archbishop Makarios, Greek-Cypriot president of Cyprus, broadcast an appeal to both Turkish and Greek-Cypriots for restraint. But Makarios warned that his government—meaning the Greek-Cypriots—would "not give in to threats, pressure or blackmail."

"We shall fight courageously and resolutely against the designs or attacks on our island," he said. Since the communal fighting during Christmas, there has been virtually no governmental co-operation between the Greek-Cypriot majority and the Turkish-Cypriot minority.

Britain's chief UN delegate, Sir Patrick Dean, was expected to tell the 11-nation Security Council an international peace force is urgently needed on the Mediterranean Island, where about 3,000 British troops have been trying to enforce a cease-fire.

SENDS MORE TROOPS

Britain ordered about 300 more troops, including an armored squadron, to Cyprus to give its force more mobility.

Secretary of U.S. undersecretary of state, returned to Washington Sunday night after failing to persuade Makarios to accept a U.S.-British proposal for a 10,000-man peace-keeping force supplied by NATO nations. The archbishop said he would only accept a force approved by the UN and made up of British Commonwealth nations.

Ball, who won acceptance of the UN plan from Greece and Turkey, described Cyprus as a "very critical problem."

The first order of business is to restore law and order to that "unfortunate land," Ball told reporters. "The bloodshed must be stopped."

U.S. officials were banking on the council debate to increase diplomatic pressure on Makarios to take a more amenable stand.

Cypriot Foreign Minister Spyros Kypriandou was expected to tell the council an international force would be futile if it is placed under the council and does not consist of NATO troops.

Helicopter Being Sought In Far North

TRENTON, Ont. (CP) — An Okanagan Airways helicopter with two unidentified men aboard, reported missing Sunday north of Fort Reliance in the west coast of James Bay, was the object of a widespread search today.

An air force official at Trenton said the craft left Fort Albany at 2:46 p.m. Saturday for Winisk, 256 miles northwest of there.

The pilot radioed a distress call at 3:45, saying he was going down.

A civilian aircraft pilot in the area, Mr. Appleton of Timmins, picked up the signal and relayed it to a Boeing 707 flying overhead.

The search was relayed through Sudbury and Winnipeg to RCAF Trenton Search and Rescue headquarters.

The RCAF dispatched an Albatross aircraft, but a two-hour search Sunday night failed to uncover anything.

The search continued today.

The RCAF said the distress call locates the helicopter about 85 miles out of Fort Albany, in a desolate, snow-covered area.

New Q-Book for Eskimos Produced by the Welfare Division of Northern Affairs

OTTAWA (CP)—Most do-it-yourself manuals confine themselves to one subject—and that is where Q-Book has them licked.

In what other single publication, for instance, could you learn about Canadian mining regulations, how to make a will, how to deliver a baby. Actually, it offers advice in about 60 different situations.

Since it's aimed at Eskimos, it is bound to produce answers to problems that some Eskimos haven't even invented yet.

The 202-page book, written in English and Eskimo and produced by the welfare division of the northern affairs department is designed as a ready-reference for the developing Eskimo, telling him hundreds of things in the interest of better health, the law and economic success.

"Q" stands for Qaujivaallirutiit—"something that will let you know more." And it does that. "The world is a large place," it points out as a more fundamental observation. A few hundred pages later it deals with the tiny distributor points in a boat engine.

". . . they should be smoothed with a fine oil stone."

LAW EXPLAINED

There is hardly a situation in which an Eskimo could find himself that isn't covered in the book. If someone tells him he should write a will, he can turn to page 200 to find out what to do.

Or when he gets his first introduction to income tax, he can learn the reasons on page 202. . . . Taxes are used to pay relief, family allowances and old age pensions. . . ."

The book offers recipes for baked beans and maizoreal—with canned tomatoes. It tells how to care for gunshot wounds, the workings of banks and the value of women learning how to handle money.

"Women should learn about money. It is important because the family allowances is paid to the mother. . . ."

Many of the hints appear to be directed at Eskimo readers, but they are aimed at persons who may never have heard the topic discussed before.

On keeping clean: "Germs can't travel by themselves, they have no legs for walking or wings for flying, but they are very clever about getting other things like dirt, food, water and bad air to carry them right into people's bodies."

On housekeeping: "Beds are easier to keep clean if people sleep between sheets."

On prisons: "This building is kept locked so that prisoners are not free to leave when they want."

COULD SAVE LIVES

The northern affairs department plans to distribute 5,200 copies of the book free to Eskimos and other copies can be bought in Ottawa at $5 each. They are bound in heavy cardboard so they can survive the hard knocks of dogsleds and igloo life.

Northern Affairs Minister Laing thinks the book, two years in the making, will play a big part in reducing the hardships of Arctic living.

"It can be translated into a simple hunting accident—or fatal without knowledge of first aid; a community can be wiped out by sharing the infected flesh of a walrus without an understanding of health rules, a motor boat engine will fail without adequate care."

The Eskimo text is written in two scripts—syllabics, in common use in the eastern Arctic, and the new orthography in Roman letters, which is expected to become standard in all parts of the North eventually.

The book's editor was Phyllis Harrison, now writing with the Ottawa Citizen. She had been a social worker in the north for 20 years before tackling the book.

Famous Rubens Painting Stolen

BRUSSELS (AP)—A famous Rubens painting—The Head of a Negro—valued at $1,000,000 was stolen during the weekend from the Brussels Museum of Ancient Art.

Museum conservator P. H. Roberts-Jones told reporters the painting was worth at least 50,000,000 Belgian francs ($1,000,000). But he said this figure would probably be greatly exceeded in the unlikely event the painting was put up for sale.

The thief or thieves entered the museum through a glass roof from a scaffolding on trees being built behind the museum. They climbed down a 30-foot ladder, took the painting and escaped by the same route.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

The fanatical die-hard fishermen who like to enjoy their piscatorial pleasure in almost year-round doses got a big break this year.

A Toronto outdoors writer quotes the Ontario Lands and Forests Department to the effect that the opening ice and fishing season of trout in this district has been set for February 20th.

Ross Whitfield of the Trent headquarters of the Department tells me there has been no official announcement as yet but it is the general consensus that the date above is correct. At least there has been no official denial.

If last year's inaugural March 1st opening can be judged a criterion, the brookies, lakers, rainbows and brownies are due for the invasion shock of their lives.

A lot of these fellows who groove their heads off the minute ads them to post a letter at the corner of the block, or a blustery night, look to the more immediate terrain and frozen lakes of the northern trout haunts like Jubilee leaves school cover vacation time.

Blocked highways and byways didn't bother them a trifle. Some, I'm told, included snowshoes in their fishing equipment. Resort owners opened doors and hospitality with menu items like "skidoo" and other types of motorized sleds ringing up a gladsome tune on cash registers.

With the early season opening including browns and rainbows, department officials look for an even greater invasion of the trout hideaways.

The success of last year's inaugural experiment in the March 1st opening, prompted government officials to extend it to all species of trout. It did not, they claim, have any effect on hauls taken in the spring and summer.

Meanwhile, the ice-fishing fraternity who shack up on the frozen surfaces have enjoyed good fishing. Hauls were particularly good on the Trent and not a few northern lakes, especially in January. They tapered off somewhat after that but generally speaking the hot season was good.

The behavior and attitude in general of the fishermen toward department officials was good," Mr. Whitfield pointed out. "We had to check on a few who said they were not aware of new regulations such as placing their names and addresses on the huts, but they were greatly co-operative."

In the main the "housekeeping" was good, the official said. "We ran across some who carelessly littered up the ice with garbage, and such, but they swung easily into line and cleaned up their localities."

As was noted the winter die-hards can carry on their favorite sport with no loss of time or any waits. The ice-fishing for batmen closes on March 1st and all shacks must be off the ice by that date. A lot of them will be out of their huts and trout-seeking before then.

FISH AND GAME

A new president takes over office at the monthly meeting of the Belleville Fish and Game Club tomorrow night at Club Canara. He is William (Bill) Phillips, who was elected chairman of the board by his fellow directors. Mr. Phillips' appointment is a popular one. He has worked long and hard for the club and is exceptionally well qualified to take over the presidential chair.

The 1964 vice-president is Fred J. Fisher with that highly ability secretary Ken Yorke and treasurer Fred Clarke again back in office.

An interesting feature of the meeting will be the report on "Operation Greenhead," given by director George Woodhouse. He will show a short film on ducks. Also interesting should be secretary Yorke's report on the "New Land Deal" and operating costs of the club. Three hunting and fishing films will be shown.

'Moose' Horns Into Chicago Hassle

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Moose may be feeling the tension.

His Chicago Black Hawks clipped Boston Bruins 5-3 Sunday night, continuing their wire-to-wire duel with Montreal Canadiens for first place in the National Hockey League, but the Moose was stirred up.

He gets his share of penalties, but it's usually for hanging down one of those slippery little forwards rather than for fighting.

But there he was, in the thick of battle, trading blows with Ocean Land Kurtenbach in a second-period donnybrook at Chicago.

Black Hawks and Canadiens emerged from the weekend games with 69 points each, but Canadiens have the schedule working for them now. They have 15 games left to play, Chicago only 12.

SIGNIFICANT FACET

A breakdown of over-all play this season would tell how significant this facet is. In 166 games, apart from 29 ties, the visiting club has won only 61 times, losing the other 94 times.

A surprise twist in the statistics came in the home-and-home set between Montreal and Detroit, each club losing on home ice.

Detroit stopped Montreal 4-1 Saturday night and Montreal rebounded to a 5-3 win Sunday night. Chicago was shut out 4-0 by Toronto Maple Leafs in Toronto Saturday. In the other weekend game, New York Rangers defeated Eddie Arrats' Maple Leafs 4-2 Sunday night in New York.

Before a crowd of 15,326 in Chicago, Black Hawks, led by a suddenly-potent Chico Maki, came from behind twice to nip Bruins in a game marked by a whopping 96-minute penalty imposition by referee Frank Udvari in the second period.

Bobby Hull's 35th goal of the campaign and Stan Mikita's 31st helped carry the Chicago attack. Maki's goals and switching one by Ron Murphy that Chico helped set up pulled Chicago out from behind 3-2 trouble in the final period.

Doug Mohns found the mark twice for Bruins and Dean Prentice got Boston's other goal.

Mikita, who seems to pop up every time there's trouble by contrast, and Aubrey Erickson were the other Chicago combatants in the Vasko-Kurtenbach dispute, squaring off against Ivan Johnson and Teddy Green, respectively.

No one was hurt evidently but Udvari perched down hard on the principals with majors and misconducts, dishing out a raft of minors later when things got chippy.

JEAN BELIVEAU

Jean Beliveau, his play impeded as of late by a sore wrist, boosted his season's production to 22 goals with his three-goal splurge for Montreal before a good house of 14,291 in Detroit.

RULES SAWZBUSH

It was actually a tight struggle until the final minute of the final period. With Montreal ahead 3-2, coach Sid Abel of Red Wings removed goalie Terry Sawchuk for a sixth attacker and Claude Provost dumped the puck into the empty net at 19:23 on Beliveau's setup. Sawchuk returned and Beliveau potted his third one of the night eight seconds later.

Bobby Rousseau, 20, Montreal's other goal to reach the 20-goal plateau and Ilio Bellveau has beaten Red Wings now for 10 of them.

In Toronto before 14,236 fans Saturday night, Rudy Hawes were overwhelmed by Toronto's defensive-play. Punch Imlach, the irrepressible coach of Leafs, resulted Frank Mahovlich on a line with Red Kelly and Bob Nevin and the club responded with an impressive display.

Kelly and Nevin both scored. Dave Keon and Bobby Pulford were the other goal - getters. Johnny Bower turned in a 25-stop performance for his fourth shutout of the season.

Gordie Howe's pair of goals before 14,926 in Montreal Saturday night lifted the 35-year-old right winger to the 20-goal plateau for the 15th consecutive season.

OVERCOME LEAD

Norm Ullman, the wide-ranging ace of Red Wings, crashed heavily into the goal post on a scoring thrust in the second period and suffered a bruised rib, leaving the ice inert on a stretcher. He returned to take his place in the lineup for final 20 minutes and played strong defensive hockey on both of MacDonald's goals.

At New York Sunday night, Leafs outdoor Rangers 4-2. Bob Nevin Plante was superb and Camille Henry clicked at 5:57 of the final period for the game-winner—his 18th goal ending a five - game winless string for Rangers.

Skier Whips Gold Medal Stars

American Wins Famed Trophy

Heuga flashed through the gates on two runs of about 600 yards each. He was timed in 90.88 seconds for the first drop down a 63-gate course and was clocked in 85.52 for a 56-gate course.

His total time was 1:46.50, and with his second-place finish Saturday in the giant slalom, was him the combined trophy. Leo Lacroix of France was the runner-up with 3.14 seconds off his time of 1:47.06 and took second place in the combined standings. France's Guy Perillat was third.

CANADIAN 12TH

Skiing Columbus skier Rod Hebron, who placed 17th in Saturday's giant slalom, came in 12th in Sunday's special men's slalom.

Many of the top alsalom specialists were disqualified Sunday for missing gates and some took tumbles and were eliminated during the two days of competition.

Among them were Canadians Scott Henderson and Garry Battleson.

But it was Marielle Goitschel, 18, the younger of the two amazing French sisters, who won the women's Kandahar combined championship. She finished second to Miss Saubert Saturday and was second in the giant slalom Friday to win the combined crown. Miss Saubert, eighth in the giant slalom, was second in the combined.

Nancy Greene of Rossland, B.C., Canada's top female skier, finished fifth in Saturday's special slalom and, with her sixth-place finish in the giant slalom, was fifth in the combined.

Crothers Grabs Win At Frisco

SAN FRANCISCO (AP-AP)—Canadian Bill Crothers and Ryhle Van Der Wal captured events at the Golden Gate International track and field meet Saturday.

The expected record-threatening 880 turned into a standoff from-behind win for Crothers as the U.S. National Collegiate Athletic Association champion, Norm Hoffman of Oregon State, bolted to an eight-yd lead with only a lap and a half to go. The 23 - year - old Toronto runner caught him 18 yards from the finish and won in 1:47.6.

Van Der Wal, of Hamilton, tore off a 4:22.5 in the mile steeplechase and officials called it a world-best for the seldom-run event.

Australian world record holder Ron Clarke shook off high school sensation Jerry Lindgren and won a standout 8:36.9 two-mile victory.

Third in 8:47.8 was Chris Wilkinson of Fredericton, a student at the University of New Brunswick.

In the mile run U.S. distance ace Jim Beatty suffered his first indoor loss in four years when he sagged to a fourth place.

Morgan Groth of Oregon State won the event in 4:07.8. Beatty ran third.

Finley, Kansas Deal

Cronin Calls Owner Meet

BOSTON (AP) — American League president Joseph E. Cronin Sunday called a meeting of team owners for next Friday to act on the matter of Kansas City Athletics owner Charles Finley.

Cronin's statement also hinted that Finley's ouster from the league might be considered at a later date.

His statement said:

"The purpose of the meeting will be for the league members to consider negotiations between Charles O. Finley and company, Inc., and Kansas City for a lease of the Kansas City Stadium and to determine, after a review of such negotiations, whether a further meeting should be held to consider the termination of membership in the league of Charles O. Finley and Company, Inc."

Cronin and Finley have been invited to appear Tuesday before the Senate anti-trust committee.

Cronin said he was prompted to call the meeting by Finley's failure to come to an agreement with Kansas City officials over a stadium lease.

Lose To Oxford In Big Upset

Proud Blackburn Beaten 3-1

LONDON (Reuters)—Fourth-division Oxford United, newest recruits to the English Football League, caused the big upset of the day in the fifth round of the English Football Association Cup Saturday.

Oxford, which joined the league in 1962, beat Blackburn Rovers, one of the leading first-division clubs, 3-1 before 31,000 wildly excited supporters, who mobbed the home team at the end.

The hero was United's 25-year - old Tony Jones, who scored the first two goals. Jones was moved from wing-half to inside-left in a surprise move before the match. Oxford were two up after 51 minutes and although Ferguson made it 2-1 after 69 minutes, Calder got a third for Oxford with a minute to go.

Manchester United, the bold-ers and 4-1 favorites, had an easy passage at Barnsley, where they won 4-0.

It was a tough, unrelenting struggle between the two first-division teams, Arsenal and Liverpool, in London. A headed goal by Liverpool's Ian St. John after 13 minutes ended Arsenal's cup hopes in a game marred by the sending off, in the 30th minute, of Joe Baker, the Arsenal centre forward, and Ron Yeats, the Liverpool centre-half.

A crowd of 63,000 saw Sunderland, second-division promotion challengers, knock out league champions Everton. Sunderland established a 3-0 lead after 32 minutes.

In league play, Tottenham Hotspur, the leaders, collected a point, but there was not much inspiration in their scoreless home tie with Sheffield United. Spurs have a three-point lead over Blackburn Rovers.

Little Ayr United, a second-division club, provided the shock result of the Scottish Football Association Cup third-round matches by beating first-division leaders Aberdeen 2-1 on their own ground. Ayr got the winner three minutes from the end.

Belleville Juveniles took an 19-0 whipping at the hands of Kingston in the Limestone City Saturday afternoon, getting toggled out of the O.M.H.A. Juvenile "A" major series by a 29-3 goals total.

A federation spokesman said the performances of Pennel and Hayes would be considered at the next conference of the IAAF to be held in October at Tokyo during the Olympics. He said they were not recognized because they were set on asphalt instead of the conventional cinder track.

Pennel's vault of 16 feet, 10 inches was made at London Aug. 5, was given official approval. He cleared 17 feet, ¾ inch Aug. 24 at Miami.

Hayes, latest claimant to the title of world's fastest human, was clocked in 9.1 at St. Louis June 21.

Gump Posts Shutout Number 4

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Nobody consulted Quebec Aces last summer when Montreal Canadiens swapped goal tender Jacques Plante to New York Rangers for Lorne (Gump) Worsley. But as far as they're concerned, the deal between the two National Hockey League clubs turned out to be a vital shot in the arm for their championship prospects in the American league.

On Sunday the Gumper posted his fourth shutout of the season for Quebec as his club downed Hershey Bears 5-0 to widen their gap over the losers to six points in the Eastern Division standings.

Ed Giacomin shared the goaltending spotlight with Worsley, notching his third shutout of the season as Providence Reds whitewashed Pittsburgh Hornets 6-0.

Buffalo Bisons, although buried deep in the Western Division cellar, were the lone double victors on the weekend. The Bisons shaded Cleveland Barons 3-2 Saturday night and edged Springfield Indians 3-2 Sunday.

The only other Sunday game saw Rochester Americans nip the slumping Barons 3-2. The previous night Pittsburgh downed Providence Reds 3-2 and Springfield took the Bears 6-3.

Hogan Gets Second Hat Trick

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

If Jack Hogan's last two Ontario Hockey Association Senior A games are any indication, he must be a mighty popular fellow with Galt Hornets.

Friday night Hogan came up with a hat-trick performance, including three goals, as he led the Hornets to an 11-1 drubbing of Port Colborne Sailors.

Sunday night Hogan, third in individual scoring, once again made the three-goal column as the Hornets edged Oakville Oaks 6-4 to retain a share of first place.

The only other league outing saw Guelph Regals move within one point of Oakville with a 4-1 win over the Sailors.

DRIVER KILLED

BUENOS AIRES (AP)—Driver Alberico Pastadoro of Uruguay was killed Sunday in this Argentine capital in the spinning crash of his racer midway through the Buenos Aires Grand Prix. Pasadoro, 32, was leading on the 21st lap of the 40-lap race when his little black Lotus spun out of control on a hairpin turn. Silvio Moser of Switzerland, also driving a Lotus won the race.

Britons May Lure Back Lost Coach

LONDON (CP) — Britain's Amateur Athletic Association may soon attempt to lure back its lost coaching leader—Geoffrey Dyson.

Dyson, who now heads the Royal Canadian Legion's training program, quit the AAA a year ago after a long series of struggles with athletic officials.

Reports in British newspapers say that several top athletes and coaches are keen to tempt Dyson back. The trouble is the coach is said to be happy with Canada and would only consider returning after considerable changes in the administration of British athletics.

Dyson departed in a burst of controversy. Most track stars said they would miss his "massive enthusiasm" and called Dyson an "outstanding coach." But an AAA spokesman said Dyson couldn't adapt himself to officialdom.

All three claimed their efforts were frustrated by Victorian-minded administrators who resented their advice.

At the time several athletes said they were jealous of the authority and control that Dyson had here.

Canadian Television Losing Another Creative Catalyst

By DAVE PIKE

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian television is losing another of its creative catalysts, and it's unlikely the weekly half-hour series that is so much an expression of his personality will return next season.

This time it's Daryl Duke, 34-year-old Vancouver native who is executive producer of CBC-TV's one of North America's most provocative TV series.

Duke left for Hollywood two weeks ago and returns at the end of February for a final week of production. Quest (Tuesday Nights) has four more shows definitely scheduled before the National Hockey League playoffs take over the CBC network.

While there seem no reasons why Quest can't be done under another producer, Doug Nixon, CBC English-language programming director, says its success has been essentially because of Duke. He won't confirm Quest's demise but says that if it doesn't return in the fall, another series with the same experimental format will replace it.

QUEST PRODUCER LEAVING CANADA — Daryl Duke, 34-year-old Vancouver native who is executive producer of Quest, provocative Quest television series, leaves Canada shortly to take over production of the Steve Allen Show in the United States. He says the lure includes the high calibre of talent on the American show, the chance to work with Allen, and more money.

(CP Photo)

SALARY TRIPLED

Duke, who was being paid $17,000 for the season by the CBC, is believed to have signed for more than triple that amount with the Allen show. He was approached last December on the strength of his Quest reputation and has a three-year contract with outs for both sides.

He says he was attracted by "the challenge and exciting professional talent" of the Allen show and also by the chance to work with its highly literate star.

Last summer Duke was offered a reported $24,000 to take over the BBC-TV's Sunday night drama showcase. He turned it down at the last moment.

Duke has likened Quest to "a commando force that might strike anywhere at moral problems" and trying to fulfill a duty to take "irreverent and flippant" looks at life.

It has grappled with topics ranging from racial intermarriage and the problems of the Canadian Indian to Norman Mailer discussing the sexual frustrations of the North American male.

SPOOF OF ROYALTY

On the irreverent satirical side, it has presented The Establishment spoofing the Queen, and The Leprechaun Menace from United States, which has begun including racial mores.

But its consistently superlative artistic accomplishments have been in its drama productions. These have ranged from adaptations of works by Henry Miller and Philip Roth to original plays by Canadians and international version of the improvisational off-Broadway play The Brig.

His love of drama, to work, has to have shock in it," Duke says. "There must be an electric flash. . . You have to . . . try to confess, explore, shock, be prophetic, be concerned."

When Quest was launched "we wanted TV that looked like it had passed through human fingers and through human temperament." It was important "to explore what's going on in this country, to blast open the feelings of the country."

Duke grants that there "always will be, and always should be, a high percentage of family entertainment, or escapism or whatever" in TV schedules. "There's nothing wrong with a good farce, with a good Ed Sullivan Show."

MARRIED NEGRO

But he feels that if North American TV, especially in Canada, doesn't soon start to mirror honest images of man as his varied elements, it is going to sink with hardly a trace into a blandly banal potpourri of panel shows and situation comedies.

Duke is the only child of divorced parents, an English and philosophy graduate of the University of British Columbia who became a director-writer with the National Film Board.

He joined CBC-TV in Vancouver in 1953, leaving five years later for CBC Toronto where he worked in the public affairs department and on the Close-Up series until he took over Quest from Ross Maclean, now producing Telescope.

Duke, who has been compared to Maller's white Negro, is married to Negro singer Eve Smith. They have two children, a daughter by her first marriage and a two-year-old son, with another child on the way. Duke was divorced from his first wife of 10 years in 1960.

Europe Was Stunned, Now Broadway Awaits the Sensation In Play Castigating Pope Pius

By WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK (AP)—The Deputy, a play that has incited cheers, catcalls and commotion in Europe, is getting ready for Broadway, and producer-director Herman Shumlin is ready for almost anything.

"I know there will be great antagonism," he said, "but I know we are doing something important, valid and exciting for the theatre."

Already some Jewish and Roman Catholic groups have protested presentation of the drama that criticizes Pope Pius XII, alleging he did not speak out against Hitler's annihilation of millions of Jews during the Second World War.

"Only those who haven't seen it or read it are against it," Shumlin says. "This is a play about silence—the silence of all of us. And I mean me."

Symptoms of uneasiness have marked the production's development. Billy Rose dropped backing plans, claiming he was too busy. There were reports that owners of several theatres just couldn't find a booking spot. When rehearsals began, Shumlin made an extraordinary gesture to the cast:

If anyone wants to withdraw because of the script's controversial nature, he was free to do so. No one did.

RESENTS PAMPHLET

"The only thing I have resented deeply," says Shumlin of the 3,000-word play's publication by the National Conference of Catholic Welfare of a pamphlet written by an employee of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith."

The tract, which defends the Vatican's wartime record, is, according to Shumlin, simply the opinion of one man, but has been given the guise of an organization report.

Turbulence has marked the play's course since it opened in Berlin a year ago. An uproar of protest ensued. Spectators hurled eggs at the cast when it was done in Basel. Pickets paraded at its London debut.

The fiercest reaction developed in Paris, where intransigent critics and audiences broke up several performances by shouting insults, blowing whistles and jumping on the stage to wrestle with the actors.

Its emotional impact has been felt in Germany, Italy, Australia, Canada in German cities and London on many occasions are reported to have left playgoers silent and stunned. There is no applause.

"You can measure the importance of a play by the amount of controversy it creates," says Shumlin.

RESENT PORTRAYAL

"The place where too many Catholics are offended is in the actual presentation of Pius XII on stage. They wouldn't mind if this Pope had died 200 years ago. No one objects to reference to a Pope in Luther or in A Man For All Seasons."

Shumlin describes Rolf Hochhuth, 32-year-old author of The Deputy, as "a very religious man" (a member of the Confessional Evangelist Church), who spent years documenting the drama. Hochhuth was born in West Germany, and is married to a woman whose mother was beheaded by the Nazis for conspiracy against the Hitler-regime, and whose father committed suicide after notifying officials that he was the one actually involved in the underground movement.

Originally written in a form that would take more than seven hours to perform, The Deputy has been staged in a variety of condensations. The New York version has been prepared by Aeneas Mackenzie, following a call a boration with Hochuth.

Bing Crosby Show on CBS Probably Best He Has Given

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Bing Crosby makes only an occasional television appearance. Each of his shows, however, has been delightful and the most recent was the best of all.

The music was tuneful, the dancing graceful and ingenious, the sketches amusing and the guest stars talented on the Saturday night CBS special.

Peter Gennaro, dancing star of the show, was great as usual. His lightfooted duet with Kathryn Crosby was the hit of the evening.

Crosby was his usual relaxed self, singing with Rosemary Clooney, exchanging the usual insulting banter with Bob Hope and generally keeping things moving.

Another happy weekend note was Friday night's premiere of ABC's western series, Destry, a tongue-in-cheek affair reminiscent of those wonderful early Maverick shows.

Destry, played by John Gavin, is supposed to be hunting down a fellow who framed him, but he's not serious about it. It's just a device to move him to new adventures, preferably comic, each week.

The weekend also had a fantastic NBC documentary showing the blood, sweat and tears that go, twice a year, into the making of a Paris fashion'ier's collections. Paris: The story of High Fashion Sunday night centred on Countess Pierre Cardin from the moment he started making sketches.

"WIVES AND LOVERS" ARE BEEK TONIGHT

Opening at the Park Theatre for its first showing, Hal Wallis' sophisticated comedy "Wives and Lovers" is set against the bright lights of Broadway after-dark and the country club set of Connecticut.

Starring in this new Paramount release are Janet Leigh, Van Johnson, Shelley Winters, Martha Hyer, Ray Walston and Jeremy Slate, with a seventeen-year-old newcomer, Lee Wilcox. (Hollywood insiders say young Miss Wilcox could be the greatest find of the year, if there were a law against scene stealing.)

The trouble starts when Van Johnson, a struggling writer, suddenly scales a novel. Wealth catapults Johnson and his wife, Janet Leigh, from a cold-water flat to a country home, with a flashy sports car and cocktail parties and romantic entanglements. Johnson becomes embroiled with his literary agent, who just happens to be a blonde, sophisticated Martha Hyer. Shelley Winters in a switch from dramatic roles, portrays a star-crashing divorcee, constantly chaperoned by Ray Walston. Jeremy Slate completes the list of co-stars as a dashing young actor who believes in romance on and off the screen.

"Wives and Lovers" was directed by John Rich, known to many as the director of the Broadway direction of the popular Dick Van Dyke Show. On the same program is Technicolor color "Papa's Delicate Condition" starring Jackie Gleason. One complete show starts at 7.30 p.m.

Guthrie Thinks Shakespeare Will Survive Celebrations

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Sir Tyrone Guthrie, Irish giant of the theatre, was in town to say some kind words for an old friend celebrating a birthday.

The old friend is William Shakespeare, born 400 years ago April 23. Guthrie came here as the first speaker in a program for the quadracentennial planned by the University of California at Los Angeles, one of many such celebrations in all parts of the world.

Before taking off for other lectures at Berkeley and The Citadel in South Carolina, the famed director of the classics was asked what he thought of this year's to-do for the bard.

"Oh, I think he'll survive," he replied. "It is a sign of greatness in such figures as Shakespeare and Verdi that they can survive any amount of mauling over the last 4 years."

He conceded that celebration might ever do Shakespeare some good—as long as the plays are accepted for their entertainment value and not as literature. He is appalled at how the young are exposed to Shakespeare.

LAMENTS DULLNESS

"They should not be allowed to experience him too early," he observed. "High school is all right. But it is better for students not to be exposed at all than to be taught Shakespeare by a dull teacher."

Guthrie was also dubious about movies as a medium for appreciating Shakespeare.

"I bought a print of Sir Laurence Olivier's) Henry V was well done, though more cinematic than theatrical. Hamlet never served. "But his Hamlet was to nonsense. It was ridiculous to say that the story of a man who could not make up his mind and then show a kind of mad gentleman elbowing everybody aside.

"As for Orson Welles' Macbeth, it was rather a horror; but as with much of Welles' work, a horror with a touch of genius."

Aside from his lectures, Guthrie's contribution to the 1964 celebration will be a staging of Henry V at the Tyrone Guthrie Playhouse in Minneapolis.

VIGOROUS DIRECTOR

Guthrie, who rose to fame with his vigorous direction in the Old Vic, Stratford-on-Avon festival, the Sadler's Wells and the New York theatre, founded the Minneapolis theatre last year after despairing of the stultifying economics of Broadway. He has directed operas as Hume Cronyn, a native of London, Ont., Jessica Tandy, George Grizzard and Rip Gate to do four plays during the spring and summer months.

How did the first season go? "Marvellously well, after a slow start," said Guthrie. "The opening was nearly a disaster and so doubt I was largely responsible.

"The society of Minneapolis turned out in grand style with garnets shined, pleased and proud of the theatre. What I should have given them was a prize fight, followed by a belly dance, followed by setting the place on fire. They weren't prepared to see four hours of Hamlet in modern dress, and after the first 20 minutes they began to cough and fidget. They didn't realize that they were on trial, as well as the theatre.

"But later in the run, as people discovered it was fun to see an actor playing the king in Hamlet one night and an 18-year-old the next, business was excellent. Also the tourist season helped. We did 84 per cent' capacity, which is very good indeed."

Cournoyer Scores Four

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Recent talk has it that this will be the last season in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A league for Yvan Cournoyer of Montreal Junior Canadiens. If so, opposing teams will breathe a long sigh of relief.

The little right winger, who seems a sure bet to make it with the parent Canadiens in the National Hockey League next season, has scored 51 goals this term.

Sunday, Cournoyer popped in four, one of them at the nine-second mark of the first period, to lead the Canadiens to an 8-3 triumph over Oshawa Generals. Fourteen of his 58 goals have been scored against the Generals.

In other action, the league-leading Toronto Marlboros edged Niagara Falls Flyers 8 - 6; St. Catharines Black Hawks dumped Hamilton Red Wings 6-4 and Peterborough Petes downed Kitchener Rangers 6-2.

BOUDRIAS GETS ONE

Andre Boudrias, the league's top scorer, scored once and assisted on three of Cournoyer's goals. The other Montreal marksmen were Don Lelsmer, Rene Drolet and Christian Bordeleau.

Orr, a 16-year-old defenceman ran his goal - production for the term to 38 and needs only three more to tie the season scoring record for defencemen set by Jacques Laperriere, two years ago.

Rangers Clip Wings, Hit Braves

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It was decided much earlier in the season by the so-called "experts" that St. Paul would not fit in the Central Pro Hockey League. But somebody forgot to tell the Rangers.

St. Paul, the hottest team in the circuit at the present time, dumped the second-place Locks Braves 4-2 Saturday night and followed up with a 5-1 Sunday win over Cincinnati Wings.

The four-point gain gave the Rangers sole possession of third place, three points up on Minneapolis Bruins and only two back of the Braves.

The only other game over the weekend saw the league-leading Omaha Knights stretch their lead to 15 points by virtue of a 4-3 victory over Minneapolis Saturday night.

KRISTINEHAMN (AP)—Russia's Lidia Skoblikova, who grabbed all four gold medals in women's speed skating at the Winter Olympics, completed another four-race sweep Sunday as she won the women's world championship in this central Swedish town.

Miss Skoblikova, a 25-year-old teacher from Siberia, led a Russian sweep of the first three places in the championships by adding the 1,000 - metre and 3,000-metre crowns to previous triumphs in the 500 and 1,500.

She won the 3,000-metre race, approximately 1.8 miles, in 5:11.4 and the 1,000 in 1:34.9. She previously had won the 500 in 46.2, and the 1,500 in 2:22.7.

Doreen Ryan of Edmonton placed 11th in the 1,000-metres Sunday with a time of 1:39.9. She was 14th in the over-all placings.

Schoolboys Ready For Big Contest

Colquhoun, who throws second stone for the Quebec rink, would like to observe the occasion with victories in the opening draws of the 11-team roundrobin championship.

He and his teammates from Shawinigan high school face British Columbia as their first opponent and Newfoundland as their second as a result of Sunday's official draw.

Other first-round pairings pitted Ontario against New Brunswick, Newfoundland against Saskatchewan, Northern Ontario against Manitoba and Nova Scotia against Alberta. Prince Edward Island drew the bye.

Eleven rounds will be curled in the competition, which ends Friday, for a total of 10 games for each of the rinks representing all the provinces and Northern Ontario.

The schedule called for two rounds today, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday and three Thursday.

Alberta drew Manitoba and Saskatchewan as second and third - round opponents. The three Prairie rinks are classed by most experts here as co-favorites. In the school championship's previous 17 years Prairie rinks won 13 times.

Saskatchewan won eight times, Alberta three—including a victory by Wayne Sabo of Edmonton at Guelph last year—and Manitoba twice. Ontario has won two championships and Northern Ontario one.

King of the Hill

A new-old King has been crowned, Rod Petican, a Bewsh winner earlier in the season edged last week's King, Harry Derushie, 602 to 574. Petican 230-269-193, Derushie 206-223-243.

In the qualifying five games Petican had 231-215-283-288 and 338 for a total of 1356, Don Taylor was second with 1256, and Ron Elliott 1197.

Two 300 games were recorded, Jim Begley 336 and Bud Petican 335.

Jim Begley came very close to the 901 of gold, chalking up six in a row, left a corner on the seventh and came back with a strike. The 901 goes up to $45.00 next week.

Fort Wayne Splits Over Weekend

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Not too long ago Toledo Blades looked to be the team to catch the league - leading Fort Wayne Komets in the International Hockey League. But after weekend action, the complexion of the race has changed a little.

The Blades, heading into the weekend, were only five points back of the Komets. Two games later they were seven points behind as a result of a 5-2 loss to Des Moines Oak Leafs and a 5-4 defeat at the hands of Windsor Bulldogs.

Meanwhile, the Komets picked up two points with a 6-3 Saturday night win over Windsor Bulldogs. Sunday they took the short end of 4-3 overtime decision against Port Huron Flags.

However, the Komets are in a good spot to stretch the lead to nine points when they meet the slumping Muskegon Zephyrs Tuesday while Toledo is idle.

The only other weekend game had Chatham Maroons take a 5-3 win over the Zephyrs.

Barry Jakeman, Cliff Bristow and Laurie Langrell provided goals as the Oak Leafs upset the Blades Saturday. Gary Merk and Moe Morissette scored for the losers.

Tucson Open Won By Jackie Cupit

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP)—Jacky Cupit stood off a closing rally by fellow Texan Ken Baxter Sunday to win the $30,000 Tucson Open golf tournament by two strokes with a final-round 71 and a 72-hole total of 274.

Baxter closed the gap to a single stroke at the end of 12 holes but Cupit birdied the 13th with a two-foot putt and his foe from Amarillo three-putted the 14th for a one-over-par score that eventually decided the outcome.

The victory was the first for the 26-year-old Cupit since he won the Western Open in 1962.

Cupit collected $4,000 and Baxter, who shot a closing 69, for 276, received $2,700.

Al Balding of Toronto finished in the money with 70-75-74-69—286 which won him $332.50. He tied for 23rd place.

The Tracks

NEW YORK (CP)—Inclusive, a four-year-old who hadn't won a race in five starts this year and won only three in 21 starts in the last two years, captured the $59,300 San Luis Rey Handicap Saturday for a record $205 betting payoff at Santa Anita Park in Arcadia, Calif.

The unsung hero of what was a rough race nosed out the second betting favorite, Mr. Consistency, and survived a claim of foul quickly lodged by Mr. Consistency's veteran rider, Kenneth Church.

Dusky Damion came in third by 3½ lengths and the betting favorite, South Africa's Colorado King, was two lengths farther back in fourth place.

Inclusive, ridden by Rudy Campaz, returned $205.40 to win, $44.80 to place and $15.80 to show.

RAINY LAKE WINS

In Miami, Fla., Joseph M. Roebling's Rainy Lake, a 9-5 favorite with the crowd of 34,844 won the $32,250 Palm Beach Handicap at Hialeah Park in a driving finish.

With Bob Lussey in the saddle, Rainy Lake sped the seven furlongs in one minute, 23 seconds on a fast track and beat Royal Ascot, the third choice, by a length.

Doctor Hank K. finished third.

Rainy Lake carried 116 pounds and paid $5.20, $3.80 and $3.20. Royal Ascot, top weighted at 119 pounds, with Bill Hartack up, returned $6.40 and $4.40 while Doctor Hank K., ridden by Karl Korte at 114 pounds, was $7.40 to show.

In Bowie, Md., Bonny Johnny, finding an opening between the early leaders on the final turn, rushed to a head victory over Kings Song in the $20,000-added Southern Maryland Handicap.

Richard S. Reynolds Jr.'s colt paid $7.40, $3.60 and $2.40, running the seven furlongs with Danny French aboard in 1:24 3-5.

KILLED ON MOUNTAIN

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Nine persons died and 19 were injured Sunday when horseplay by pilgrims on a mountain caused several persons to tumble down a mountainside. A turbulent landslide buried some of them.

We also sell other makes.

Mainly, our dealers are in business to sell new Volkswagens. So far, they've sold 250,000!

But all makes of cars are traded in for VWs, so they find themselves with all types of used cars on their hands.

The bad ones are shipped off to a last resting place. (Our dealers are sour on lemons.)

Then, when a used car is in choice new condition, they put a Certified Warranty sticker on the windshield.

And fill out a guarantee in writing.

Why do our dealers go to all this trouble to sell a five-year-old Volkswagen or Ford or Chev?

Some day you'll be in the market for a new car. We want it to be a Volkswagen.

And even if you don't want a used car this week, why not visit your Volkswagen dealer anyway. It could be worth the trip just to hear him rave about a Valiant. Or a Rambler. Or any of those strange cars with the engine in the front.

Find Body Of Cubs' Infielder

PROVO, Utah (AP)—At Chicago Cubs' training camp two years ago, with a rookie's cheerful confidence, Ken Hubbs told a reporter: "You don't have to worry about second base here for 10 years."

Today, tragically, the Cubs are looking for a second baseman. The bodies of Hubbs and a boyhood friend were recovered from a nearby lake Sunday near the wreckage of his private plane.

He was only 22, the National League's rookie of the year in 1962 when he set two major league fielding records at second base.

Last Thursday he took off from the airport at this central Utah community where his brother, Keith, had gone to school at Brigham Young University. With him was Dennis Doyle, 23, an orphan who grew up in the Hubbs home at Colton, Calif.

The wreckage of their plane, a single - engine Cessna 172 which Hubbs had bought a year ago, was found scattered in and around a 10-foot hole in the ice on Utah Lake, five miles west of Provo, Saturday.

Their bodies were recovered by skindivers in 15 feet of water under the ice Sunday.

Sally Anns Invade World Of Pop Music

LONDON (AP)—The Salvation Army invaded the pop music world Friday by releasing a catchy religious record featuring army lads and lasses singing, playing guitars and drumming something like the Beatles.

The record, It's An Open Secret, with We're Going to Set The Whole World a' Singing on the other side, has the melody carried by male voices, with responses from the girls, plus a driving twist beat and busy guitars.

It was made by The Joy Strings, led by attractive Capt. Joy Webb, a bouncy brunette who composed the two songs. All the proceeds will go to the Salvation Army.

"They are as near as we dare to go a commercial sound," she said. "I kept two points in mind. The words had to be crystal clear so that the religious message could be understood, and the lyrics had to retain a certain dignity.

"It would not have done, for instance, to pepper the lyrics with yeah-yeahs and woo-woos."

The Trots

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Veteran owner-trainer-driver Bill Harvey of Norwich had a field day at the Western Fair Raceway Saturday, going to the post three times and winning each time with healthy payoffs.

He started his string in the fifth with Harvey Lee H at $41.40, took the $300 featured sixth with Pride's Crossing at $2.40 and the eighth with Dora Harmony for a $27.40 mutuel.

The ninth, the second $300 featured race, was won by Sugar Hill Mont at $3.80.

The largest crowd of the winter racing meets, 3,674, wagered a record $136,733 for the season on the 12-race program. This was the second highest wager in the track's history, exceeded only by the $145,005 set on a Saturday night during the 1963 fall season.

START REFORM

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The first 12 of the ecumenical council's liturgical changes in Roman Catholic public worship went into effect Sunday.

One of the 12 reforms Pope Paul VI ordered to become effective the first Sunday of Lent requires priests to preach a sermon at all masses every Sunday and on major holidays. There was wide agreement in the ecumenical council that more emphasis should be placed on preaching.

Dick Gregory Goes to Jail

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (AP) — Negro comedian Dick Gregory and a white civil rights organizer were arrested early today when they refused to leave a segregated restaurant.

The sheriff's office said they were in the county jail. "They could have made bond if they had wanted to," a deputy said.

He said bond would be $300.

Gregory, whose home is in Chicago, became widely known for the barbs he hurled at segregation in television and night club appearances.

New Session Promises Plenty Of Fireworks

Little Likelihood Of an Early Election

Easy Win For Govt. Expected

TORONTO (CP)—The heavy Conservative majority is expected to swamp traditional opposition voices of non-confidence in the Ontario legislature today.

The Conservative government, with 77 members, will face non - confidence motions from the 34-seat Liberal opposition and the seven-member New Democratic group if Premier Robarts winds up the throne speech debate as expected.

The opposition parties are expected to vote together on each other's motions.

The motions, in the form of amendments to the address in reply to the speech from the throne read at the legislature's opening Jan. 15, were put forward by Liberal House Leader Farquhar Oliver and NDP Leader Donald MacDonald.

Premier Robarts will conclude the throne speech debate after Liberal Elmer Sopha of Sudbury ends an address he began last week.

ATTACKS BUDGET

Liberal financial expert Ross Whicher of Bruce moved his party's non-confidence motion on the budget Monday after accusing the government of manipulating budget figures in an attempt to frighten the people into accepting a less-than-adequate medical plan.

"There isn't a financial institution in the country that would get away with the way figures are twisted around by this government," he said.

Kenneth Bryden (NDP—Toronto Woodbine) supported Mr. Whicher. He charged the government with increasing hospital premiums and leading people to believe the increases were necessary to provide proper medical coverage.

Mr. Whicher also criticized Premier Robarts for his comments on the revised Canada Pension Plan, claiming the premier's election promise to cooperate with the federal government was not in good faith.

The premier's pledge of cooperation, he continued, was apparently window-dressing for his attitude now had thousands of people worrying. He suggested that in Ottawa Mr. Robarts contain his anger with the federal government and discuss his differences sensibly in Ottawa.

URGES TRIBUNAL

Mr. Bryden urged the government to establish a hospital tribunal where patients can air grievances of sub - standard hospital care.

He said grievances were becoming more frequent and cited an incident where a young

OTTAWA (CP)—The new session of Parliament opening today promises plenty of political fireworks but little likelihood of an early election.

Opposition parties already have picked some choice issues with which to belabor the minority Liberal government of Lester B. Pearson.

They'll be looking for more ammunition when the government unveils its legislative program for the session in the throne speech from the throne at the opening ceremony in the Senate chamber by Governor-General Vanier.

Gen. Vanier will start reading the government-written document about 3:30 p.m. EST.

He will read it partly in English, partly in French, in line with the precedent he established at last year's parliamentary opening. Formerly, Governors-General read the entire speech in English and then repeated it in French.

Twenty-one gun salutes will be fired, one when Gen. Vanier's car arrives on Parliament Hill, another when he leaves. A 100-man guard of honor provided by the 2nd Battalion, Canadian Guards, from Camp Petawawa.

The Liberal forces, with 129 Commons members following the two Jan. 24 byelections in Montreal, are still five short of a working majority in the 265-member house.

But despite the expressed desire of Conservative Leader Diefenbaker and many of his followers for an early election, it would require the combined votes of all four opposition groups to defeat the government and force another election.

Both New Democratic Leader Douglas and Social Credit Leader Thompson have argued the country doesn't want an election. They see their role as prodding the government for action along lines favored by their parties.

Besides the 129 Liberals, there are 95 Conservatives, 17 New Democrats, 14 Creditistes and 11 Social Creditors.

The political battles don't start until Thursday when party leaders tee off in the eight-day throne speech debate, which will open the first non-confidence motions of the session to test the government.

Although there will be mostly ceremonial — the traditional exchange of two speeches by Liberal back - benchers praising the customary motion to approve the throne speech. Mr. Pearson and Mr. Diefenbaker conferred for 25 minutes Monday on the opening formalities and related procedures.

Some major legislative chores are on tap for the new session. They include the new contributory Canada Pension Plan,

Oakville Residents Challenge Neighbor's Right to Keep 'Crocs'

MILTON (CP)—Two Oakville residents Monday challenged their neighbor's right to keep 60 pet crocodiles in his yard.

C. Grotte and Doug MacLean are seeking a court order from Mr. Justice S. H. Schatz to restrain Pete and Irene Strickland from raising crocodiles and live vermin on their property.

Mrs. Marilyn Grotte, wife of the plaintiff, said that after rising about 7 a.m. during the summer of 1962 there "was an odour on my clothes next morning." She said she had to go into her house several times because of the strong smell.

Grotte said he had seen Strickland's hand swollen after being bitten by one of his Nile crocodiles. He said he feared for the safety of his three children if the animals were left unsupervised.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis — Cooler air now pushing southward will cause significant drops in temperatures before the day is out.

Another weak storm moving southeast from Minnesota should pass just south of the lower lakes tonight. It is expected to become an integral part of a low pressure system now developing over eastern Gulf states. Consequently, present snow is forecast tonight.

PANICKED! Doe already exhausted after flight through city streets, makes one more leap for freedom in garden behind Great St. James Street, as curious residents — and Ontario Intelligencer photographer — closed in.

Fear Speeding Weary Legs Sends Doe Down City Streets

A wild-eyed deer, fear speeding weary legs, raced down lower Front Street shortly after eleven o'clock this morning.

The animal was a mature doe, which would dress about 125 pounds, Fireman George Woodhouse, an eyewitness, said.

"It was in a sorry condition," Woodhouse said. "Its eyes were protruding and its tongue hanging out. It was soaking wet indicating it could have emerged from the river at a different point."

The doe drove down the pavement on the south side of the street while bug-eyed pedestrians looked on.

It appeared to be desperately seeking an avenue of escape, finally finding one when it turned off the street into the former Pinder parking lot south of the four corners.

"The animal appeared to have travelled a long distance," said Woodhouse. "It was thoroughly frightened and at times seemed to be travelling blindly."

But several private citizens caught a glimpse of it in various parts of the city.

Then followed the telephonic chase as excited residents reported the deer in their localities.

They tracked it from the Pinder lot to Pinnacle Street to the Glen Roy Creamery to Alexander Street to Pine Street School and thence back to Victoria Avenue.

The doe apparently was "flying".

"I'm watching it now" called the excited woman "it is near the Bethel Chapel"

Two eyewitnesses reported seeing a deer which they believed was a fawn on College Street shortly after 9.30 Sunday night.

The animal, they said, was seen crossing the street and becoming scared ran from the flat below Quinte Secondary School into the cedars north of College.

There have been seen in the Wallbridge vicinity of late, also in the northern areas of Prince Edward county.

However, it is believed that the "invasion" this morning from the east was the first time that a deer sought respite from its pursuers in a city environment.

It was the first time the deer had not been located.

Trustees To Hear Charges

MONTREAL (CP) — Two maritime trustees who have been touring Europe on a fact finding mission will arrive home today to learn of charges of attempted raiding among unions under their supervision.

Mr. Justice Victor Dryer and Judge Rene Lippe, two of the three-man trustees board, have been in Britain and Sweden for about a week of talks with marine industry officials concerning maritime problems overseas and how they are solved.

Back in Canada, meanwhile, the Canadian Maritime Union (CLC) has been approaching seamen belonging to rival Seafarers' International Union of Canada (Ind.), by mail and personally, in a membership drive. The CLC said it had the trustees' approval, but a spokesman for the board said the union is mistaken.

"They said we had a perfect right to proceed," William Dodge, executive vice - president of the Canadian Labor Congress, said in an Ottawa interview. He said he checked with the trustees in Montreal several weeks ago.

An appeal for the trustees said if Mr. Dodge "went away with the impression it was a mistake on the board's part."

SENDS LETTERS

The CLC, supported by some CLC officials and organizers, is reported to have sent some 1,000 letters to SIU seamen and then made personal visits to persuade them to switch unions.

The trustees had complained about the difficulties in obtaining a copy of the letter.

"I'm surprised at all the mystery about the letter," Mr. Dodge said and added they could have had a copy simply

Scope of His Mercy Was Sweeping

CP from AP-Reuters

LIMBURG — Dr. Hans Hefelmann, who once headed the "mercy killing" section in Hitler's Chancellery, went on trial this West German city today charged with murdering 73,000 persons, 3,000 of them children.

Hefelmann is the only one of four defendants still around to testify. Two others are dead and the third has fled the country.

Dr. Werner Heyde, the main defendant, killed himself in prison in Hamburg. The day before, the No. 2 defendant, Friedrich Tillmann, died in a fall from an eighth-floor window. A third defendant, Dr. Gerhard Bohne, fled Germany last summer and is believed to be in South America.

Heyde, a 61-year-old medical professor, headed the euthanasia aspect of Hitler's euthanasia ("mercy killing") program and was charged with participating in the death of 100,000 persons.

After the deaths of Heyde and Tillmann, the prosecution sought to have Hefelmann's case postponed until he could stand trial at a later date with several other persons accused of participating in the euthanasia program.

But the judges insisted that the trial take place even if Hefelmann is the only defendant available.

All the victims of the four defendants were mental or physical defectives, people whom Nazi terminology termed "ifyuseless consumers of food."

About 200,000 persons who fell into this category died during the early stages of the Third Reich under a program that served as a stage setter for the mass murder later practiced in Nazi concentration camps.

Ashamed Germans and churchmen brought sufficient pressure on the Nazis to get the mercy killing program ended in August 1941.

There is widespread suspicion that a Nazi underground is organizing escapes for persons wanted for war crimes and even helping with suicides of the accused.

Fritz Bauer, chief prosecutor in the state of Hesse and the man who worked for years to prepare the trial against Heyde and his co-defendants, shares this suspicion.

Bauer disclosed Monday that an escape plan with evidence of outside help was discovered last year in Heyde's cell in Limburg prison.

Favreau Nears Top In Govt.

By KEN KELLY

But the 46-year-old justice minister stopped just short of getting formally acknowledgement as the eventual successor to Prime Minister Pearson.

However, at the same time he shifted Mr. Favreau out of the second row of ministerial desks into the front—to a desk on the prime minister's left separated from it by a narrow aisle.

Apparently from there Mr. Favreau will be free to devote himself as government leader in the Commons and as the present-day Lieutenant of St. Laurent.

Ever since it became apparent Lionel Chevrier would relinquish the post of justice minister and leave Parliament for appointment, speculation has centred on Mr. Favreau as Mr. Chevrier's successor.

WAS LIEUTENANT

Mr. Pearson acknowledged Mr. Chevrier as his chief Quebec lieutenant and the two men shared ministerial duties. Mr. Favreau sits both in opposition and, since last April, on the government side of the chamber.

Mr. Chevrier enjoyed the status which has become traditional for the Liberal "lone" Mackenzie King's chief lieutenant was first Ernest Lapointe and, on his death, Louis St-Laurent. Both Lapointe and St. Laurent held the justice ministry.

However, in the case of Mr. Martin there appear to be two reasons why he won't occupy Mr. Chevrier's old desk at this session.

One is his comparatively short parliamentary service. He only reached the Commons in last April's general election.

There was no hard and fast rule that the senior privy councillor became the party leader's desk mate. But Mr. Pearson apparently has decided to follow the course.

In doing so, Mr. Pearson seems to have kept alive any chance that Paul Martin, another leader which Mr. Martin may harbor. He made a bid against Mr. Pearson in 1958 to succeed St. Laurent.

U.K., Cyprus Now Agreed On Peace Plan

UN Council Postpones Start of Crisis Debate

By MAX HARRELSON

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—Britain and Cyprus are reported agreed on principles for a plan to police the turbulent Mediterranean island with an international force while an impartial mediator seeks peace between the Greek- and Turkish-Cypriots.

The British-Cypriot plan also calls for a consultative committee of United Nations members.

The two countries were reported to have agreed on general terms of a Security Council resolution after the council postponed the start of its debate on the Cyprus crisis until this afternoon.

The resolution would avoid the controversial issue of how the international force should be financed but merely agree that there should be such a force.

It also would appeal to all countries to respect the territorial integrity of the island, an appeal which Cyprus has planned to propose in a separate resolution.

THANT ACTIVE

The council debate, originally scheduled to start Monday, was postponed until today to give Secretary-General U Thant took a hand in the crisis with peace proposals of his own.

Thant's ideas were handed to representatives of Cyprus, Britain, Turkey, the United States and Greece in a memorandum that dealt with establishment of an international peace force for Cyprus and with machinery for mediating the conflict.

Thant hoped to find common ground, especially on the subject of the international force.

One objective was to find a formula that would be accepted by all those concerned and avoid the risk of a Soviet veto, President Makarios of Cyprus indicated he would accept any peace force unless it was under control of the Security Council.

LINKED TO U.S.

Sources close to Thant said he thought agreement might be reached on a force linked to the UN but not directly under UN command. He was understood to be seeking acceptance of an arrangement under which Britain, Turkey, Greece and Cyprus would finance the force.

In Cyprus, a spokesman for Makarios brushed aside British charges that the Cyprus government was permitting gunrunning to the Greek Cypriot British troops were trying to keep peace.

Search for 12 Just Men Commences at Ruby Trial

DALLAS (AP)— Counsel in Jack Ruby's trial begin today the painstaking search for 12 residents of Dallas county to judge whether Ruby committed murder with malice when he killed the accused assassin of president Kennedy.

The defense says it is impossible to get an impartial jury in Dallas.

"Nothing happened this morning to change my opinion about that," said Melvin M. Belli, chief counsel for Ruby after seeing the first 150 prospective jurors in the courtroom of District Judge Joe B. Brown.

Kennedy was assassinated Nov. 22 only 200 feet from the scene of the trial. Two days later, in the basement of Dallas police headquarters, Lee Harvey Oswald, who had been charged with killing the president.

Nine hundred prospective jurors are available for questioning on their qualifications.

No Changes In Paper On Defence

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — Don't expect any revelations in the government white paper on defence, authorities advised Monday.

The paper, they say, was in effect published more than a year ago.

On Jan. 25, 1963, in the Commons, Prime Minister Pearson, then opposition leader, laid down an eight-point defence policy for a Liberal government.

The government now in Liberal hands, informants said, the policy outlined then will be the policy enunciated in the white paper, expected to be presented to Parliament early next month.

MADE POINTS

Mr. Pearson's major points then — they are perhaps even more appropriate now in the light of recent developments — were:

"Canada's defence forces, whether stationed in this country or in Europe, should be so organized, trained and equipped as to be able to intervene wherever and whenever required for United Nations, NATO or Canadian territorial operations.

"We should be especially ready and willing to take part in United Nations peace - preserving operations . . . That means that it must be the first essential of Canadian defence policy to make our forces maximum mobility, especially through the provision of adequate air transport.

"The three Canadian defence services should be fully integrated with maximum efficiency and economy both in operation and administration."

EQUIPMENT HOME-MADE

Mr. Pearson also said Canada's defence policy must be geared to its industrial resources "which means that Canada's defence equipment should be manufactured in Canada to the maximum possible extent."

He said Canada should concentrate on doing things which it could do industrially and politically best, and most appropriate for this country, "avoiding commitments which require expensive weapons, equipment which is, or soon will be, obsolete, and activities which are, or will be, of little meaningless."

Individual defence policy he said, must not hinder or minimize Canada's influence at the United Nations or in the councils of the world.

Guards Watch Over U. S. Children To Counter Red Terror in Saigon

SAIGON (AP) — The U.S. Army maintained special guards on American children's locations in Saigon today to counter Communist terror campaign that has killed three persons and wounded more than 50 in the last two nights.

U.S. and Vietnamese officials also set up a joint security council to work out greater safety for the thousands of U.S. servicemen and civilians and their families in the Vietnamese capital.

American military policemen stood guard at schools attended by American children and rode on school buses with them. U.S.-trained police patrolled other American installations.

Only about one-fifth of the 650 American children in Saigon stayed away from school Monday. As many as six American military policemen guarded each school bus, while three or four MPs guarded each school house.

New Session Promises Plenty Of Fireworks

Little Likelihood Of an Early Election

OTTAWA (CP)—The new session of Parliament opening today promises plenty of political fireworks but little likelihood of an early election.

Opposition parties already have picked some choice issues with which to belabor the minority Liberal government of Lester B. Pearson.

They'll be looking for more ammunition when the government unveils its legislative program for the session in the speech from the throne read at the opening ceremony in the Senate chamber by Governor-General Vanier.

Gen. Vanier will start reading the government-written document about 3:30 p.m. EST.

He will read it partly in English, partly in French, in line with the precedent he established at last year's parliamentary opening. Formerly, Governor-General read the entire speech in English and then repeated it in French.

Twenty-one salutes will be fired, one when Gen. Vanier's car arrives on Parliament Hill, another when he leaves, in a military ceremony in front of the Peace Tower, he will review a 100-man guard of honor provided by the 2nd Battalion, Canadian Guards, from Camp Petawawa.

The Liberal forces, with 129 Commons members following the death Feb. 10 by infections in Montreal, are still five short of a working majority in the 265-member House.

But despite the expressed desire of Conservative Leader John Diefenbaker and some of his followers for an early election, it would require the combined votes of all four opposition groups to defeat the government and force another election.

Both New Democratic Leader Douglas and Social Credit Leader Thompson have argued the country doesn't want an election. They see their role as prodding government inaction along lines favored by them parties.

Besides the 129 Liberals, there are 95 Conservatives, 17 New Democrats, 13 Creditistes and 11 Independents.

The political battles don't start until Thursday when party leaders get off to the eight-day throne speech debate, which will produce the first non-confidence motion of the session to test the government.

Conservatives were will be mostly ceremonial — the ratification of today's session opening — Diefenbaker's two speeches by Liberal back-bencher presenting the customary motion of approval for the throne speech. Mr. Pearson and Mr. Diefenbaker conferred for 25 minutes Monday on the opening formalities and related procedures.

Some major legislative chores are on tap for the new session. They include the new contributory Canada Pension Plan,

Oakville Residents Challenge Neighbor's Right to Keep 'Crocs'

MILTON (CP)—Two Oakville residents Monday challenged their neighbor's right to keep 40 pet crocodiles in his yard.

P. Grotte and Doug MacLean are seeking a court order from Mr. Justice S. H. Schatz to restrain Pete and Irene Strickland from raising crocodiles and live vermin on their property.

Mrs. Marilyn Grotte, wife of the plaintiff, said that after visiting the Strickland farm in the summer of 1962 there "was no odor on my clothes next morning." She said she had to go into her house several times because of the strong smell.

Grotte said he had seen Strickland's hand swollen after being bitten by one of his Nile crocodiles. He said he feared for the safety of his three children if the animals were left unchained.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis — Cooler air now pushing southward will cause a significant drop in temperatures before the day is out. Another weak storm moving southeast from Minnesota should pass just south of the lower lakes tonight. It is expected to become an integral part of a low pressure system now developing over eastern Gulf states. Consequently some wet snow is forecast tonight.

PANICKED! Doe already exhausted after flight through city streets, makes one more leap for freedom in garden behind Great St. James Street, as curious residents — and Ontario Intelligencer photographer — closed in.

Fear Speeding Weary Legs Sends Doe Down City Streets

A wild-eyed deer, fear speeding weary legs, raced down lower Front Street shortly after eleven o'clock this morning.

The animal was a mature doe, which would dress about 125 pounds, Fireman George Woodhouse, an eyewitness, said.

"It was in a sorry condition," Woodhouse said. "Its eyes were protruding and its tongue hanging out. It was soaking wet indicating it could have emerged from the river at a downtown point."

The doe drove down the pavement on the south side of the street while bug-eyed pedestrians looked on.

It appeared to be desperately seeking an avenue of escape, finally finding one when it turned off the street into the former Pinder parking lot south of the four corners.

"The animal appeared to have travelled a long distance," said Woodhouse. "It was thoroughly frightened and at times seemed to be travelling blindly."

But several private citizens caught a glimpse of it in various parts of the city.

Then followed the telephonic chase as excited residents reported the deer in their localities.

They tracked it from the Pinder lot to Pinnacle Street to the Glen Roy Creamery to Alexander Street to Pine Street School and thence back to Victoria Avenue.

The doe apparently was "flying".

"I'm watching it now" called an excited woman "It is near the Bethel Chapel".

Two eyewitnesses reported seeing a deer which they believed was a fawn on College Street shortly after 9.30 Sun. day night.

The animal, they said, was seen crossing the street and becoming scared ran from the flat below Quinte Secondary School into the cedars north of College.

Deer have been seen in the Wallbridge vicinity of late, also in the northern areas of Prince Edward county.

However, it is believed that the "invasion" this morning was the first time that a deer sought respite from the wild in a city environment.

At press time the deer had not been located.

Search for 12 Just Men Commences at Ruby Trial

DALLAS (AP)— Counsel in Jack Ruby's trial began today assimilating search for 12 residents of Dallas County to judge whether Ruby committed murder with malice when he killed the accused assassin of president Kennedy.

Trustees To Hear Charges

MONTREAL (CP) — Two maritime trustees who have been touring Europe on a fact-finding mission will arrive home today to learn of charges of attempted raiding among unions under their supervision.

Mr. Justice Victor Dryer and Judge Rene Lippe, two of the three-man trustees board, have been in Britain and Sweden for about a week of talks with union-the industry officials concerning maritime problems overseas and how they are solved.

Back in Canada, meanwhile, the Canadian Maritime Union (CLC) has been approaching seamen belonging to rival Seafarers' International Union (Ind.), by mail and personally, in a membership drive. The CMU said it had the trustees' approval, but a spokesman for the board said the union is mistaken.

"They said we had a perfect right to proceed," William Dodge, executive vice - president of the Canadian Labor Congress, said in an Ottawa interview. He said he checked with the trustees in Montreal several weeks ago.

SENDS LETTERS

The CMU, supported by some CLC officials and organizers, is reported to have sent some 1,000 letters to Sid seamen and then made personal visits to persuade them to switch unions. The trustees had complained about the difficulties in obtaining a copy of the letter.

"I'm surprised at all the mystery about the letter," Mr. Dodge said and added they could have had a copy simply

CP from AP-Reuters

LIMBURG — Dr. Hans Hefelmann, who once headed the "mercy killing" section in Hitler's chancellery, went on trial with three Nazi Germans Six today charged with murdering 73,000 persons, 3,000 of them children.

Hefelmann is the only one of four defendants still around to testify. Two others are dead and the third has fled the country.

Dr. Werner Heyde, the main defendant, killed himself in prison Thursday. The day before, the No. 2 defendant, Friedrich Tillmann, died in a fall from an eighth-floor window. A third defendant, Dr. Gerhard Bohne, fled Germany last summer and is believed to be in South America.

Heyde, a 61-year-old medical professor, headed the euthanasia aspect of Hitler's euthanasia (mercy killing) program and was charged with participating in the death of 100,000 persons.

Chief prosecutor Fritz Bauer said Heyde and Tillmann, the prosecution sought to have Hefelmann's case postponed until he could stand trial at a later date with several other persons accused of participating in the euthanasia program.

But the judges insisted that the trial take place even if Hefelmann is the only defendant available.

All the victims of the four defendants were mental or physical defectives, people whom Nazi terminology termed "life-useless consumers of food."

About 200,000 persons who fell into this category died during the early stages of the Third Reich under a program that served as a stage setter for the mass murder later practised in Nazi concentration camps.

Archbishop German churchmen brought sufficient pressure on the Nazis to get the mercy killing program ended in August, 1941.

There is widespread suspicion that a Nazi underground is organizing escapes of Germans wanted for war crimes and even helping with suicides of the accused.

Fritz Bauer, chief prosecutor in the state of Hesse and the man who worked for years to prepare the trial against Heyde and his three co-defendants, shares this suspicion.

Madoc Hardware Store, Contents Destroyed by Fire; Loss Estimated at $50,000

Fire which destroyed the 96-year-old building, caused an estimated $50,000 damage, completely destroying the building, valued at $20,000, and its contents, worth about $30,000, according to its owner, Mr. Roswald Frank Dafoe.

Mr. Dafoe said it was the oldest brick building in this small hamlet, 26 miles north of Belleville, and had been in the family since 1902, when it was first occupied by his father, the late Frank Dafoe, and his two partners.

OWNED BY FATHER

In 1906 Mr. Dafoe's father bought out the two partners he said, and since then the store has been privately owned by the Dafoe family. Mr. Dafoe, who was born and raised in Madoc, helped his father in the store as a junior partner and following his death, in 1943, took over ownership of the store.

Mr. Dafoe said the building was constructed by Mr. E. D. O'Flynn, a well known resident of Madoc in earlier years.

He said he had returned from a Hardware Convention in Toronto about 10.00 p.m. and as he drove past the store noticed the front lights were not burning, and said he thought it unusual for them to be out.

As he stopped from his automobile at his home the fire alarm sounded and Mr. Dafoe said he went in the house and asked his wife if she could find out where the fire was. A few minutes later his accountant, Bill Gordon telephoned to tell him the store was on fire.

The Belleville, Madoc and Tweed fire departments were summoned. According to Belleville's fire chief, Gerald Vance, by the Stirling department had also been called but they did not attend.

Mr. Dafoe said he had no idea as to how the fire started but said that the accountant, Mr. Gordon had called in the morning to repairmen during the afternoon when he heard the furnace make a funny noise.

Considerable smoke and water damage was caused to the store on April Fool's Day last year when fire broke out in the floor.

JURY TOOK INVENTORY

The contents, valued at $30,000 consisted of paints, ammunition, sporting goods, hardware, furniture, glass and rope and over the past year he had spent about $10,000 in renovations to the building. Ammunition could be heavy exploding during the early stages of the fire.

Mr. Dafoe said he and his family members and staff had just completed taking inventory.

A branch of the Toronto Dominion Bank is being built adjacent to the store and only cement blocks forming the walls were in place.

Mr. Dafoe said if he were to think of selling his business it would be worth from $70,000 to $75,000 to him, including the building and stock. When asked what he would do now, he said that he had never done anything else and he would probably look for his business back into operation as soon as possible.

La Salle Ambulance of Belleville stood by at the scene in case of emergency and the restaurant owner Richard's Restaurant, located across the street from the fire scene, provided coffee for the cold and weary firemen who remained at the scene until early this morning pouring water into the charred debris.

The Belleville fire department was summoned at 10.30 p.m. and remained at the scene until nearly 4.00 a.m.

Building of Works Barn Again Delayed in Council

Despite the fact the Ontario Municipal Board last week indicated approval would be given for the construction, city council yesterday delayed decision on the new public works building proposed for Foster Ward.

Council at its meeting yesterday did give approval for the construction of a $275,000 public school in West Belleville, and also the construction of watermains by the Belleville Public Utilities at a cost of $50,000.

And council authorised the city solicitor to prepare the necessary by-law regarding the proposed purchase of the Belleville YMCA as a police building.

PROPERTY OFFERED

Discussion on the purchase of the YMCA property will come at the time the by-law is presented to council.

Council also approved of a recommendation from the city to participate in the building program of the Belleville General Hospital based on estimates of a net cost of $4,500,000 of which the city would obligated to 50 per cent or $2,985,000.

The recommendation calling for construction approval for the new public works barn was held up after Alderman Donald Joss noted that the Houston property on Pal Street had been offered to the city.

The Houston property is in the west central area as the site on which it was proposed to build the works barn and at the time the by-law might save as much as $100,000.

But Mayor Jack Ellis and Alderman J. Raycroft told council the Houston property had been inspected last year and was found not to be suitable as a works barn.

Alderman Ross Bailey termed Alderman Joss' suggestion as merely "delaying tactics" and said council should proceed with their intention of constructing the works barn on the property which the city already owns.

But Alderman Enos Davis felt the Houston property had possibilities, pointing out that the nine-and-a-half acre site had been offered at a considerably lower price than that offered last year.

Council referred the matter to committees of Mayor Ellis, and the chairmen of the finance and public works committees for further discussion.

Need for Low Rental Housing To Be Probed

A special committee of Alderman Ross Bailey, Douglas Boyle and Jack Deacon has been appointed by Mayor Jack Ellis to investigate the need for low rental housing and senior citizens' housing in Belleville.

Mayor Ellis named the special committee at the conclusion of yesterday's meeting of council.

Several years ago the local realtor's association initiated a survey in the city to determine the need for such housing.

Following the survey, however, realtors felt there was no immediate need for such housing and the matter was dropped.

A. M. GREEN.

Special Officer For N. E. S. Rotary Speaker

Monday was National Employment Service Day at the Rotary Club of Belleville and present for the occasion was Mr. A. Green, special placement officer for the N.E.S.

The local offices of the National Employment Service, of which there are now nearly 250 in Canada, are governed by a Statement of Employment policy which is the cornerstone on which the service is built and operated," he said as he addressed the rather large crowd of Rotarians.

The service offered by the N.E.S. is completely free of charge and no applicant, he stated is either granted favors or discriminated against when seeking employment.

Mr. Green stated that in most local offices of the employment service they have a number of divisions within each of the branches and explained the physical make-up of the local office.

"The Special Service Division is a vital part of the employment branch and at the present time has two positions in this division, a Special Service Officer and a Supervisor of Special Services division."

The latter he said has grown very rapidly in recent years and from 1956 to 1963, 84 claimed 92 full-time special service officers.

MANY UNTRAINED

Mr. Green explained that one of the greatest problems they face today is that of the untrained, poorly educated, young and old. "A recent survey taken in our office," he said, "showed 169 persons under 20 years of age seeking work, 123 of them had grade 10 or less."

In closing Mr. Green said that the establishment of an effective and successful program to train the employable and unemployed requires the complete support and participation of every responsible person in the community.

Mr. Green was born and raised in Belleville and attended both public and secondary school here and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Green of Dunbar Street. He will be leaving for in the near future where he will be taking up his new position as Employment Branch Supervisor with the National Employment Service there.

The speaker was introduced by Rotarian Harold Mott and thanked on behalf of the club by Rotarian Arnold Campbell. Guests and visiting Rotarians were introduced by Rotarian G. B. Daugherty.

Take Action To Alleviate Rush Traffic

City council took action yesterday to alleviate the rush hour traffic tie-up at the corner of Bridge and Coleman Streets that occurs each week-day when the "no left turn" edict would serve only to shift the problem to the next street west.

Council amended its traffic by-law to prohibit left turns at Coleman Street for westbound traffic on Bridge Street between four and six in the afternoon.

But Alderman Don Whalen said the measure would not serve to move the congestion to James Street, the next street where left turns would be possible.

But Alderman Joseph Raycroft said Ald. Whalen's fear would not result.

He said the "no left turn" edict had been recommended by the police traffic commission.

Woman Given Three Weeks on Theft Charge

A 54-year-old woman, who stole the life savings of her landlady, was jailed for three weeks.

Mrs. Margaret Tyler had pleaded guilty to theft of $3,000 when police, alerted by a desk clerk arrested her Wednesday night at a Queen's Hotel room. She had a railroad ticket for Toronto in her possession.

She told nearly by a stroke of sheer luck she didn't get committed Magistrate Phillip Baker as he ordered Mrs. Tyler to make good the missing money.

Victim of the theft was 89-year-old Miss Grace Palmer, proprietor of the Everett Street boarding house where Mrs. Tyler was a roomer.

The money was in a suitcase in Miss Palmer's room, detective sergeant Harold Reid told the magistrate.

"She had informed the accused she had the money in this suitcase," he added.

The chain of events leading to Mrs. Tyler's arrest started in the entrance room of the City Hotel Tuesday night.

She approached a casual acquaintance sitting at a table with another woman, and asked him to open the case on the basement she had "forgotten her key."

WENT TO CNR STATION

The man obliged — with a hairpin removed from the bartender.

Inside, the suitcase was opened he noticed there was a large amount of money in the suitcase," said the sergeant.

The couple then accompanied Mrs. Tyler to the CNR station where she bought the ticket for Toronto. After more beers at the Dundas Street spot, the couple took the woman to the station where she checked in.

Some time later the man returned and checked into a room another floor. This sparked the suspicions of hotel clerk James Robertson who called police.

The full story came out under questioning when Mrs. Tyler was taken to police headquarters.

"It was almost the life savings of this lady," said sergeant Reid. "She was not sure how much she had in this suitcase. The most she could say was $3,000.

Magistrate Baker noted he could treat the incident as a first offence incident Mrs. Tyler, who pleaded guilty to the charge.

However, he added: "This is a serious business you've got yourself into. This is the type could go to the penitentiary for a long time on."

"Let me warn you that any repetition of any kind of criminal offence is going to have very serious consequences for you," he concluded.

Queen's Visit To Quebec May Be Dangerous

KINGSTON (CP)—The Queen may be in danger if she visits Quebec in October, a French-Canadian separatist said Monday.

The Queen is scheduled to visit Charlottetown and Quebec City from Oct. 8-12 in commemoration of visits to those cities made by the Fathers of Confederation in 1864.

Council Member Claims Mayor 'Almost Held up to Ridicule' By Police Commission Members

TRENTON — On the basis of real and implied criticism of Trenton's mayor, D. James MacDonald and the members of his councils for the past two years by two members of the Trenton Police Commission, council and its ruling head have come back with a rebuttal and a refutation of the commission's claims.

Reading from a prepared text at council meeting last night, Councillor G. A. Weaver, chairman of the protection to persons and property committee, charged that the mayor had been "almost held up to ridicule" at a recent commission meeting. He said that he and his fellow councillors considered the actions of the commission members, Judge J. C. Anderson and Magistrate W. R. Philp of Peterborough, at the meeting, "entirely uncalled for, provocative and injurious to Trenton."

In a personal comment, the councillor said, "Some members of this commission seem to be mixed up. They seem to think that the Town of Trenton exists for the Police Commission, and not that the commission exists for the Town of Trenton."

"Our position should be made abundantly clear to the people of Trenton," said the councillor, "some of the news reports of the commission meetings have been misleading and confusing and deliberate confusion has been created in the picture by some members of the commission. The people should eventually be able to get complete survey from members of the commission. The people should eventually be able to get complete survey from members of the commission. The people should evaluate the best interests of the people of Trenton."

Councillor Weaver reminded his fellow councillors that in 1963 council had accepted the police budget of $139,000 and that under the strongest of protests," and had asked the commission to present a new budget by September, 1963; a budget which would, in effect, cut down on police costs, and he was willing to co-operate.

ITEMS EXCLUDED

Councillor Weaver said that in accepting the 1963 budget, "under protest," council had made it clear that it should be free from the approval items to do with car allowances to Chief F. J. Symmons, the use of Det. J. Rutherford and had laid down the edict that police officers should no longer be rented but should be purchased, because of longer warranties on purchased vehicles.

Councillor Weaver also said that a comparison with nine other police departments cited in the province,' council had found that costs per capita in Trenton were, on the average year, 24 per cent higher than the nine.

In a later comparison of department costs, made by Judge Philp, chairman of the Ontario Police Commission, Trenton was found to be eighth highest in regard to police costs in the province with 47 other departments. The Peterborough chairman's comparison brought out that Trenton were more policemen in Trenton per 1,000 population than in any of the other 47 departments considered, with the exception of Fort Erie, the councillor said.

Councillor Weaver disclosed that early this month council had written to Attorney General Frederick Cass and asked that the function of the commission be changed so that the body would be comprised of the mayor, the judge, and, in place of an outside magistrate, a Trenton resident, whose appointment would be approved by the Lieutenant Governor. Councillor Weaver added that "one of the men in mind highly respected and successful citizen," had volunteered to accept this position.

At the outset of his statement, Councillor Weaver commented that it was "strange" that up until 1964, commission meetings had been closed to the press.

OPEN MEETS TO PRESS

"Now the commission has chosen to open its meetings to the press and is using it as a medium of attack to discredit the representative of the people who pay the bills."

The councillor's statement, put to a vote as a resolution, was accepted unanimously by Councillors Edward Todd, Joseph Gould and Duncan McDonald. Councillors Ross Burtt and C. V. Graham were not in attendance.

Preceding the reading of the statement, Mayor MacDonald defended his action in asking Constable Douglas Bradshaw, the president of the Trenton Police Association to submit a suggested 40-hour week schedule utilizing only the 18 men on the force at present, to him. Mr. Murray, who is also chairman of the police commission, said if the association wanted the proposal changed to him he intended to accept them and lay them before the commission.

"I don't think the association has any hope of a 40-hour week the way things now stand," the mayor said.

Whistle Blowing Necessary Says CPR Official

Canadian Pacific Railway officials aren't any more in favor of doing away with the whistle blowing of trains proceeding through the town than the officials of the Canadian National Railways are. They said in a letter to town council last night.

Whereas the CNR officials claim the whistle blowing is necessary unless council can see its way clear to make a decid end streets of some track elevation or fitting out others with expensive automatic warning systems, the CNR won't approve a proposed town by-law by the terms of which the whistling would cease. The CNR has 26 different crossings in and around town. The CPR only has two.

The CPR council has written away to the Board of Transport Commissioners for a conference and as yet, has received no reply.

NEED CANVASSERS

Mr. Senik said that 86 cents from the dollar collected for the fund is used by the Ontario Heart Foundation for research and the rest goes and cure of heart disease, Canada's killer.

Volunteer canvassers could also phone Douglas Rushnell at EX 2-3433. Mr. Rushnell is president of the Trenton chapter of the foundation.

CAS Services From Belleville Are Terminated

TRENTON — "With regret," the Belleville branch of the Children's Aid Society has notified the members of Trenton council that as of March 1, 1964, all CAS services to the town will be terminated.

Council had suggested that CAS services be paid on a "fee" basis.

"We cannot employ staff on the basis that when the town needs services, workers are paid "out of pocket" expenses," read a letter from the Belleville body, presented at last night's meeting of council.

Clerk comptroller O. W. Larry said he thought the town's position should be made clear. He said that initially, the town had made a grant to the CAS at Belleville of $3,000. When it was suggested that this be increased to $4,000, two years ago, council couldn't see its way clear to paying the increase. Many people also objected to paying the original sum.

"We've repeatedly said that we don't want them to be out of pocket but we don't feel the suggested increase in the grant is justified by having a worker sent to town two or three times a week," Mr. Larry said.

Under questioning by Councillor Weaver, Mr. Larry said that he thought child protection cases could be handled by welfare officer Mrs. Ethel Davis and his assistant, Leslie Collar, but that a problem arose when children had to be placed in protective custody.

Provincial health authorities will be approached with the suggestion that Trenton could work with CAS outlets in Northumberland. Prince Edward County and children sent to protective centres in one of the counties if necessary.

Refuse to Urge New Policemen Attend College

TRENTON — Trenton council last night refused a suggestion that the town approve a resolution by the town council of Aylmer, Ontario, urging the provincial government to make it compulsory for provincial police officers to attend police college."

"It's up to the chief, (of police) to make decisions," said Joseph Gould. "Let him send them if he wants to."

Aylmer's resolution had Trenton add its voice to that of others municipalities on the resolution commented on the apparent reluctance of police departments to send men away for special training because of a tendency on the part of the men to look for more lucrative positions.

"Should I ask to have the man the chief is advertising for sent to the college?" asked Mayor James MacDonald, in reference to the fact that Chief F. J. Taylor has advertised for an extra man for the department in spite of council's voiced opposition to increasing the force.

Enjoys Work

TRENTON—"How does it feel to have council elect a new charge?" Mayor D. James MacDonald wanted to know at council meeting last night after a letter from Miss Amelia Hayes had been read. Miss Hayes had written to thank the town fathers for her re-appointment to the Trenton Memorial Library Board. She "enjoyed the work" she said.

Councillors, one and all, the mayor, clerk-comptroller O. W. Larry, the town office staff, and numerous others, were also thanked for their contribution during 1963 by Fire Chief Cecil Ellis in his annual report, read, in part, at the meeting.

TRENTON — Trenton council last night accepted the three lowest tenders submitted by the Weaver Motor Company for the supply of utility vehicles for the public works department. Accepted were tenders for the supply of a one-ton truck at $3,084.00, (next lowest, Wesse Motors, $3,191.96); the supply of a half-ton truck at $2,054.00 (next lowest Car Motors, $2,081.42), and a van at $2,264.97, (next lowest, Card Motors, $2,277.33.).

During the voting for approval of the acceptance of the lowest tenders, Councillor Gerald Weaver, the head of Weaver Motors, excused himself from the room.

Last year, Trenton council was the instigator of a resolution that the provincial government be petitioned to have the laws of the province changed to pertains to conflict of interest, and receive enthusiastic support from the majority of many other communities, and of support from other councils. Of the 145 councils to which reviewed copies of the resolution were sent, roughly half supported the idea and roughly half were against it.

Will Pay More

TRENTON — Trenton council voted last night to accept a higher rate of participation cost in the administration of justice for Hastings County, because the town's share of those costs have been increased by the increase in the assessment brought about by annexation of parts of Murray and Sidney townships. The agreement will be retroactive to 1962 and until 1967, and will cost the town slightly more than $22,000 a year, less a provincial government grant of $1 per capita, bringing the cost to the town down to less than half of that cost.

Officer Denies He Was Trying 'To Get Even'

SARNIA (CP) — Constable Richard Gunn denied in court Monday that he was trying to "get even" with a man he took into custody last April 27, a night of an apartment house fracas when the man allegedly suffered injuries that left him with the mental ability of a child.

Gunn is being sued in Ontario Supreme Court by George Walter Williams, acting for his son William, 26, who was injured permanent brain injury, a partial paralysis and has been left doctors have testified, with the mental ability of a child of eight or nine years.

Lawyer Hugh Garrett contends Gunn was not justified in arresting Williams last April 27 or, if he was, he used "grossly excessive force."

Const. Gerald Johnston testified that Gunn struck Williams twice with a nightstick and he was arrested later unconscious on the floor of the apartment.

Const. Lyle Waters said he heard Gunn say words to the effect: "I've been waiting 12 years to do that." He believed, he said, the statement referred to the fracas in Williams' apartment.

Const. Gunn said that at Williams' apartment Williams said "you should kill me" if he encountered the apartment without a warrant.

"Williams came running at me with both fists closed and in a crouch." The officer stepped aside and struck Williams with his nightstick "on the forehead." Williams went down on his knees, got up and "came at me again in the same manner."

Const. Gunn said he struck Williams a second time, on the back at his shoulder. He and another constable then escorted Williams from the building without further blows being struck.

Gunn said he did not mean to hit Williams on the head.

Const. Kenneth Pregin said he rode with Gunn and William to the police station. They had to carry Williams into the station, he said.

The jury is expected to retire today.

Sensitive Areas

The decennial revision of the act under which Canadian chartered banks operate is coming up. One point which is said to be worrying Ottawa politicians is the question of whether action is advisable to prevent foreign control of Canadian chartered banks. Concern has arisen because a U.S. bank recently acquired control of the Mercantile Bank, a small Canadian bank which had been owned by Dutch and other foreign interests.

In New Zealand government officials and private publishers appear to be joining forces to prevent Canadian Roy Thomson extending his newspaper empire to that country. There has also been talk of Canada passing legislation to prevent foreign ownership of Canadian newspapers.

These two incidents serve to emphasize the fact that foreign control is less acceptable in some segments of a country's economy than in others.

We can think of no two fields in which foreign control would be less acceptable than in the operation of a country's financial apparatus and in the dissemination of its news.

Of the two fields, foreign control of newspapers is potentially the more dangerous. It is quite feasible for the government to establish stringent control of the operation of private banks, so that the fact that they were foreign-owned would make little or no difference to their operation. By the nature of things, though, the government cannot undertake to control the operations of newspapers without destroying their usefulness.

Law by Popularity Poll?

Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson says his government is in a quandary about the country's divorce laws.

He told a delegation from the National Council of Women that he received an "almost equal" number of letters opposing changes and advocating changes in the existing law.

Good heavens! We did not know governments decided their policies on the basis of letters received. What will happen to us if all our jailed criminals spend their considerable spare time in letter-writing, while the rest of us go about our, and the country's, business? If laws are to be decided by letter-writing, the government might at least let us know about this fact in advance.

Of course, Mr. Pearson was not suggesting that letter-writers alone should decide government policy. He just took letters as an indication of public opinion, which can be expressed in other ways, too. If Mr. Pearson would take a survey of the number of people living "common-law" he might reasonably interpret it as a rather vivid expression of opinion about the divorce laws of one section of the public.

And then, of course, there are those who are old-fashioned enough to think that a government should do what it thinks is right, instead of what it believes to be popular.

Has Mr. Pearson no opinion of his own about what should be legitimate grounds for divorce? Does he really think that a man is guilty of a greater sin against his pledge to love, honor and cherish if he chances to bed down with another woman for a few hours than if he beats his wife regularly or leaves her and their children to starve or survive as best they can.

Troublesome Safeguard

The RCAF has gone to the dogs.

It has acquired 34 German police dogs to assist it in guarding nuclear warheads at two airfields in West Germany.

All told, safeguarding warheads supplied to Canada by the U.S. is expected to cost eight million a year.

There does not seem much that can be done about the task of watching warheads stored on German soil. Too many questionable characters around who just might like to touch one off, and blame it on somebody else.

One wonders, though, whether in Canada's hinterland there are not some places where warheads could be stored which would be so inaccessible that no thief could possibly get away with them.

The nuclear warheads seem to be more worry than they are worth. Accepting them is something like the action of the nervous householder who keeps a loaded revolver handy near the front door.

There's no bad publicity except an obituary notice.—Irish playwright Brendan Behan, on his highly publicized drinking bouts and brushes with the law.

Ottawa Offbeat

Yvon Dupuis Government Spokesman in Quebec

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — There was a newcomer on the frontbench of Prime Ministe Pearson's Cabinet team today when he fielded it for the opening of the New Parliamentary session on the floor of the Commons.

There are, in fact, three new Cabinet recruits, brought into the inner power circle in last month's ministerial shuffle.

But this one, Yvon Dupuis, is uniquely different from either Senator John Connolly, the new Government Leader in the Senate and Minister Without Portfolio, or Maurice Sauvé, the new Minister of Forestry.

Mr. Dupuis, young (38) like Sauvé, and a French-Canadian, obviously has been named to the Pearson team with the express assignment of saying those things in Quebec that so urgently need to be said, and haven't, until now, been said by any of the other members of the Cabinet from La Belle Province.

Obviously, too, he will be the Liberal answer to the Conservatives' Léon Balcer, the former Transport Minister, or what Quebec likes to call "The Crisis of Confederation."

WINS CABINET ALL AROUND

Ever since Prime Minister Pearson and his men around him took power last April, all party pundits have been in a dither amid the exploding of bombs and bombast in Quebec.

And even the best Mr. Pearson seemed able to do was to murmur, with mild reproof, about "extremists on both sides" of the Separatist question.

Then along came Leon Balcer and wrote his name large in contemporary Quebec history with these great and glowingly-proud words in the Commons:

"We are not content to bisect the country, but rather to consolidate and encourage mutual understanding. I am proud of being a French-Canadian, but I am not here to legislate only in the interests of the province I am here to lend a hand to all Canadian, French and English speaking, people who want to work for the good of our country."

Then, with that 12-minute gem glittering richly on the Hansard record, he later added this proviso:

"Confederation by and large has been a successful human adventure. It has grown around for a hundred years now, and needs only a little modernizing."

And that word arrows like a land all the more loudly in the silence of the Government, and sped the Administration was that Balcer's sense-making sentiments were applauded and cheered by both French and English Canada.

MP FOR ALL

So, in political self-defence, the Government had to have a man who could speak for the sense of national unity, to Leon Balcer.

Yvone Dupuis, who in last spring's general election was generally credited with doing the best job by his party's campaign platform caricature of Real Caouette — to dampen down the flames of Creditiste fire, drew the new assignment.

Now he has got in his first licks.

And probably where they count most, in Quebec.

Said Yvone Dupuis, addressing himself to the far-out fringe of Separatists:

"Ottawa is not a foreign country. And yet here in Quebec we've reached the fantastically ridiculous point where we treat it worse than a Communist regime in Moscow."

Bluntly he termed separation for Quebec as ultimate political lunacy.

"It would be like the Berlin Wall," he said, "with French Canadians on the other side provinces needing passports to visit friends and relatives here."

Without question, what it was much easier to be a French Canadian in the Federal Parliament than in the Quebec Legislature.

"In the Quebec House," he reported with admirable honesty, "all you have to do is demand, demand and demand."

The Separatists, as he probably expected, were enraged that he should have said such "disloyal" things.

But he wasn't impressed.

"What," he snorted, "did those Ottawa-maudits think I should do? Send them flowers?"

So at long last, the Government silence is ended, and the Cabinet finally is talking back to Quebec.

Strictly Personal

Laws Needed Where Public Morality Lax

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

In theory, I agree with all my high - minded liberty - loving friends who insist that we have "too many laws," that regulations and repressions and prohibitions are suffocating the body politic.

But they, while calling themselves "practical" and "realistic" conservatives, are the strictest Utopians in my view; they are much more starry-eyed than the liberals of whom they speak so contemptuously.

In order to have a minimum of laws, you have to live a maximum of gentlemen. I use that old-fashioned word purposely, for I think it is only the gentlemanly instinct (the dedication to "playing the game") that makes laws and regulations superfluous.

We don't have a social structure of that sort in America; our national game is more dirty pool than cricket. I don't know of a single large institution or trade association that is genuinely and willing to police itself against abuses and malpractices.

Government always steps in to fill a vacuum. This vacuum is provided by a deficient sense of public morality, and an excessive sense of private greed. If we get "socialized medicine" in this country, in any form, it will be because the medical profession itself remained unconcerned with the public health needs of our citizens.

It is Federal insurance of bank deposits that gives depositors confidence in their bank accounts. It is Federal regulation of the stock exchanges that gives investors confidence in the market. Asking such people to police themselves is neither practical nor realistic — for no group is good enough and disinterested enough to do so.

Most any law, as excess of restriction, is a symptom of national malaise, not a cause of it. It is a piquant paradox that the liberal, who is considered to be "idealistic" about life, knows that people cannot be expected to act against their short-term interest; while the conservative, who considers himself so hard-headed, seems to think that, if left alone, all the pressure-groups and power groups would pass the marshmallows around the campfire on their Scout's honor.

All laws, in a sense, are unjust, for the law, once it is written, is dead. Ortega pointed out, "turns into a reign of pure words, which, since words cannot be fulfilled to the letter, necessarily results in falsification of the law and governmental dishonesty." A nation of gentlemen, he observed, needs no constitution. England has fared very well without it.

I agree with conservative friends: there are too many laws, too confusing, too complex, too restrictive, too idealistic cynicism. But the only real alternative — apart from silly campaign speeches — is to develop a citizenry that will play the game fairly without them.

Let's Grow Up

Canadians must mature as a nation before they can be a major influence for peace on a beginning, let us, then, resist the temptation to be anti-American just to prove we aren't a satellite.

That is the side of weakness. It puts us in the class of Mr. N'krumah and the other new nationalists who think they must prove themselves by testing the Lion's tail or pulling the Eagle's feathers.

To Your Good Health

We're Supposed to Breathe Through Nose, Not Mouth

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have two grandchildren, 9 and 13, who inhale and exhale night and day through their mouths. They both have allergies and the older one is receiving injections for this. Both say they cannot breathe through their noses.

When I was training for public school work 40 years ago, instructors and books on child health stressed the dangers, and I was told to use all means of breaking this "habit" to prevent malformation of the throat and growth of adenoids. So I am wondering if these youngsters shouldn't have this corrected. — R. H. D.

Your training of 40 years ago remains essentially valid, but the big difference is our understanding now that mouth breathing isn't a habit that should be broken." Rather, it is a matter of finding out what is causing it, and of correcting that.

Mouth breathing is not natural. We were intended to breathe through our noses, and we do so unless something prevents us from doing it.

The nasal passages warm the air we inhale. They also filter it to a considerable extent. The explosive example of this is a sneeze, when we breathe some irritant, but the moist passages are constantly trapping all sorts of particles — dust, dirt, etc.

By blaming adenoids on mouth breathing, we were confusing cause and effect. Rather, adenoids (and tonsils, too) can interfere with breathing if they are enlarged.

Or there may be other causes, but they all point to the same thing: Some obstruction of the air passages.

While adenoids are the most frequent cause of mouth breathing, it is not uncommon for sensitivity or allergy to be accompanied by a swollen, boggy nasal membrane. The shape of a child's face can have an effect. If the passages are structurally narrow, less swelling is enough to interfere with breathing.

Tonsils and adenoids, by the way, normally enlarge until about age 5. After that the tissues tend to shrink, but if they have become infected, then they remain enlarged, and can contribute not only to mouth breathing but to ear trouble.

Allergy treatments may relieve the problems of these children. I assume they have been inspection of tonsils and adenoids to see whether they are a factor. Frankly, I doubt whether the youngsters are doing their breathing until the air reaches the throat.

Dear Dr. Molner: My husband has poor circulation in his legs; his feet are always cold. What effect if any does smoking have? — Mrs. V. F.

Smoking causes spasm of the smaller blood vessels or arteries, thus reducing circulation still more. Tobacco in any way aggravates the condition considerably, and he should give it up.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have a small break in the skin between my toes. Is this athlete's foot? I had this once before and a doctor told me to soak my feet in permanganate crystals and water, and to boil my socks. I can't boil them because I am in a rest home and I am glad to wear just washed socks? — G. K.

It sounds as if it is athlete's foot. That means a fungus infection, which is not comfortable. The potassium permanganate does a fair job, but it is bothersome, and there are other and easier ways to get rid of athlete's foot. Boiling the socks is a good time between wearings, and you'll manage all right. The biggest error people make is not using enough AF is to quit the treatments as soon as the trouble stops. Keep using AF for a full month after, because the fungus is tough and lingers in the skin, quietly, only to revive again later. It's great.

Brotherhood Week Appeal Is Voiced

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer

There are 4,365 miles between St. John's and Vancouver and the thousands of miles of this vast stretch of land are the Canadian people. These people make up one of the leading countries, both economically and socially, in our world today.

Economics are an important factor in our everyday lives, but more important is the social aspect of the people, living together and worshipping together, that make Canadian brothers regardless of race, color and creed. We are all different, we of the various races within the same boundaries, and superior or inferior but different. We do not always like the same food or the same books, or the same ideas. Sometimes an innocent-sounding word in one language takes on a sinister twist in another. But what we have in common is more important than our differences. We have been fought together, suffered together, died together during two bitter wars and all over Europe they are buried side by side. These men were brothers fighting for a common cause, the freedom of man.

Brotherhood Week gives us the opportunity to rededicate ourselves and our efforts to the basic ideals of respect for human life and human rights which are the cornerstone of our democratic way of life, and to dramatize the practical things which each individual can do to promote an understanding and realization of these ideals.

Brotherhood Week provides an opportunity for Canadians of every race, color, creed and ethnic origin to meet one another in a friendly atmosphere and to learn more about one another's culture.

The Belleville Jaycees through the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, International and the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews hope that all citizens will join us in fostering Brotherhood Week throughout the year.

Yours very truly,
W. P. Cole,
Chairman, Brotherhood Week,
Belleville Jaycees.

Thinks Liquor Store Re-Location Is Wise

Editor
Ontario Intelligencer

Considerable comments and demands have been voiced through the medium of your paper, by the downtown businessmen and merchants, as to where the L.C.B.O. store should re-locate.

This unique ruling body has steadfastly refused to face the fact that for the last two years Belleville has been happily acquiring new shopping facilities and modern buildings, to serve us with dignity and status.

As a result, the general public no longer depends on a congested main street. It is a humble opinion that L.C.B.O. officials be allowed to re-locate as they see fit and without undue interference. I'm sure they are quite aware of the costly and chaotic parking conditions downtown and will consider the best interests of the people of this city.

Thank you.

Male Rabbit Has Assets

Plaza Square Area Residents Continue Opposition to Bldg.

Residents of the Plaza Square area on Bridge Street, East, are continuing their opposition to a proposed RCMP headquarters office planned for that district.

The Federal Department of Public Works has offered to purchase lots in the area owned by the city Parks Board, and hope to build a police headquarters building. Council has been told the combined residence-office building would conform in appearance with other residences in the area.

But area residents still object. A petition objecting to the police headquarters has been forwarded to council and yesterday several residents made appearance at council to voice personal objections.

Mayor Jack Ellis told the delegation that no decision on the RCMP request had been arrived at and said that a federal public works representative would be in Belleville Thursday to further discuss the matter.

INVITED TO ATTEND

A spokesman for the delegation was invited to attend the meeting.

Last year parks board officials indicated that the three lots in Plaza Square were not required for park purposes, although this was questioned by yesterday's delegation to council.

Parks committee chairman, Ald. Donald Joss, said his committee was reviewing parks needs and could change its mind about the Plaza Square lots.

Council Seeks Municipal Board Hearing on Bylaw on Lot Width

City council will ask for a municipal board hearing on an amendment to its restricted area by-law which would set minimum lot widths in various zoning districts of the city.

The motion to ask for a municipal board hearing was carried by a 10-3 vote, but not before strenuous objection from Alderman Don Whalen who called some terms of the amendment "ridiculous".

He said it was ridiculous that in "A" zone in the city, which he termed as one of the better residential districts, an owner could build a house on a 40 foot-lot, while in "B" zone the minimum width would be 55 feet.

The by-law would not prevent development of property legally sub-divided prior to the passing of the by-law but would establish standards for new development.

Alderman Whalen declared this to be unfair to owners with large lots who had intended to sub-divide.

"I know what the planning board and planning director are trying to do but this is not the way to force the change," he argued.

Planning Director P. J. Bes-

is said it was council which set the policy of 40-foot lot widths in "A" zone. He said he had been asked to deal only with "B" zone.

Alderman Ross Bailey said the intended purpose of the amendment had been to restrict the building of apartments on narrow lot frontages.

"Let's have the hearing, let's persist in the by-law," he asked.

Give City Bus Passes to 26 Blind Persons

City council yesterday agreed to the provision of 26 bus passes to blind persons in Belleville at a cost of $475, but the suggested method of payment failed to meet the approval of city officials.

The recommendation before council called for the $475 to be charged to the Belleville Transit Commission's deficit account.

"That's not the way the finance committee recommendation read," objected Finance Chairman Bev Corke. "Our recommendation was for a grant of $475 to be made to the Transit Commission."

But City Manager J. R. Reynolds said the city had no authority to make a grant to the Transit Commission. He said the recommendation had been re-worded to make the matter legal.

"At least the finance committee chairman should have been informed," returned Ald. Corke.

City Council Postpones Decision On Zone Change to Allow Clinic

City council yesterday delayed decision on an application for rezoning part of Dundas Street East to allow construction of a two-storey medical building opposite Belleville General Hospital.

The original application asked for a zoning change from the present "A" (one and two family dwellings) to a "D" or commercial zoning.

The Belleville and Suburban Planning Board held a hearing on the matter and recommended to council that the application be turned down.

At the same time, however, the planning board recommended that council consider rezoning the area from "A" to "B" and allow a "clinic" in the area.

The original application for a zoning change was made on behalf of Dr. J. N. Hart who plans a two-storey medical building with six offices for doctors or associated services.

Yesterday, as recommended by the Planning Board, council turned down the original application for a zoning change to a "D" category, but referred back the recommendation to change the zoning to a "B" category.

PLANS ALTERED

At yesterday's meeting of council local solicitor Rod Cameron appeared on behalf of Dr. Hart, stating that the office building plan now submitted was changed from the original plan revised by the Planning Board.

He said plans now were for a two-storey structure with six doctors' offices with parking to the east and north of the building. He said parking arrangements could be altered to meet council's approval.

He said the perimeter of the lot would have shrubs to block off the parking area from neighbors in the area.

Opposition to the zoning change was entered by John O'Flynn, appearing for Dundas Street resident Murray Lindsay, who asked council to deny the change.

He said the important issue in such a zoning change was not the specific use to what the area would be put by the applicator but what other uses the zoning change would allow.

"No type of fencing would ever diminish the noise from a parking lot and privacy would be completely lost," he maintained.

Mr. O'Flynn said the zoning change was not in the public interest and claimed it would not be fair to depreciate the value of other properties which had been purchased in good faith.

Seek Sign Spots

Grant McKitterick, president of the Hastings and Prince Edward Lakes Tourist Region, and other members of the regional council, are in this area today seeking locations for signs to be placed on all highways to inform travellers they are entering this tourist region. They will be accompanied on their tour by David Kerr, representing the Belleville Chamber of Commerce; F. Holly, president of the Hay Bay tourist resort operators, and J. C. Woods, district tourist officer.

Famous 'Caller' At Rossmore Square Dance

Night before last he "called" in Chicago, tonight he "calls" in Atlantic City. But last night, internationally famous square dance caller Max Forsyth called for local dancers in Rossmore. The dance was arranged by the Quinte Twirlers Thursday Night Club.

Twenty-one squares, 168 people, came out for the dance from the three Quinte Twirlers Clubs and from an estimated seven other clubs in Peterborough, Kingston and Trenton.

Woman Bothered by Lack Of Faith in Her Decisions

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My father died when I was a child. My mother, in her attempt to be both mother and father, never allowed me to make a decision. When I tried to do something on my own things always seemed to turn out badly. Mother never failed to remind me that "next time" I should listen to her.

I grew up feeling hopelessly addle-brained and incompetent. Today, even though I am the mother of four children, I still torture myself over whether I bought the right dress yesterday. Maybe it should have been the green one. Or did I say the correct thing at the PTA-meeting? Perhaps I should have remained silent.

The point of my letter is this: The quality I most admire in your columns is the very quality which is woefully lacking in myself — the ability to get to the heart of a problem, make a quick decision and never look back. How do you do it? — MRS. MAYBE.

* * *

DEAR MAYBE — Thanks for the compliment, but those "quick decisions" represent more hours than I care to admit. The reply that sounds totally effortless is the one I struggled with all day.

You are right about never looking back, however. I do my level best with each reply. Then I close the door and go on with the next one. Post-mortems are for coroners — not columnists.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I'm a man with a problem. My wife is 37 years old. We have three lovely children. Everything is fine, except that my wife has lost interest in sex.

She is a wonderful wife and mother, gets along fine with my family and the neighbors. Everybody thinks she is a grand person.

I tried to talk to her about this problem last week. She said she loves me as much as ever, but she'll soon be 40 and sex is for younger people.

Do you think something might be wrong with her physically? She goes to the doctor every year for a check-up and appears to be in excellent health.

I have heard of a sex potent that pops up men when their sex appetite fades. Is there something similar on the market for women? Please advise me. — BILL.

* * *

DEAR BILL — Any doctor will tell you that the vast majority of men and women who lose interest in sex at a relatively early age (and 37 is early) have mental problems, not physical problems.

"Sex potions" are phony. The only person who benefits is the one who sells it. And, of course, it helps him only financially.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — This may sound too inane to print, but it has been on my mind for a long time and I'd appreciate your opinion.

The question: When is it proper to sign "Love" to a letter or card? Over the holidays we received several cards and some handwritten notes signed "Love" from casual friends and people to whom we are not related.

When I was a high school girl, if a fellow signed "Love" to a note or a letter, I walked around with my head in the clouds for days. I myself would never sign "Love" to a card or a letter unless I felt very close to a person. Comment, please. — SINCERELY YOURS.

* * *

DEAR SINCERELY — A letter signed "Love" does not necessarily mean "I love you" any more than a letter signed "Yours truly" means "I am truly yours."

The word "Love" is intended to convey a feeling of warmth, which does not come through in the employment of "Sincerely."

Ann Landers' frank and informative new book, "Teen-Agers and Sex" ($2.95) is now available at your book store.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

MAIL CALL

Question: My husband's daughter is about to be married. He is to give her away. I've been invited to the wedding, which is being given by her mother. She set out the invitations in her own name. She and my husband were divorced 15 years ago. She has never remarried. When my husband was given instructions about the procedure in giving his daughter away, his ex-wife said he then was to sit next to her in the first pew. I understand I am to sit several pews back. I don't want to split hairs and I certainly don't want to create any dissension that will spoil the wedding, but I do think he should take a seat next to me instead of next to his ex-wife. Would you please tell me what is usually done in such a situation? — Mrs. V. C. L., Trenton, N.J.

Answer: Once his part in the ceremony is completed, your husband correctly joins you in your pew, which should be a few pews behind his ex-wife's. He also should be seated with you at the reception.

More Married Women Now Going Back to Work

By ROBERT RICE

OTTAWA (CP) — Women seem to be going back to work in large numbers — particularly married women.

This trend was pinpointed in a review of the labor force in the last three months of 1963 prepared by the bureau of statistics.

It showed 1,831,000 women at work in the last quarter of 1963 —an increase of 130,000 over the year-earlier period. This was a 7.4-per-cent jump, the second highest increase in the number of women at work in the post-war period.

Employment of men went up 2.6 per cent to 4,618,000 in the same period. This was more than double the average annual rate of increase of the last 10 years.

CUE EMPLOYMENT

The increase in jobs for both men and women was more than the rise in the labor force, thus holding back unemployment totals.

The fourth-quarter labor force rose by 307,000 over the year, while employment went up 248,000. Unemployment thus was down by 41,000.

	1963	1962
Labor force	6,205	6,038
Employed	5,500	5,252
Unemployed	305	346

ACCOUNT FOR GAIN

Women accounted for 60 per cent of the gain in the total labor force, with married women entering the force in unusually large numbers. Of the extra 127,000 women who entered the labor market in the last quarter of 1963, an estimated 83,000 were married.

The study also showed a hefty increase in the number of teenage boys and young men between 20 and 24 in the labor force.

There were 364,000 boys between 14 and 19 years of age in the labor force in the last quarter of 1963. This was an increase of 23,000 over the year-earlier period — a 10-per-cent jump. The number of young men between 20 and 24 rose 19 per cent to 536,000.

Almost all of the new entrants found their jobs in the service, manufacturing and trade industries.

Fancy Jellied Desserts

by Mary Moore

We have been receiving an increasing number of requests for jellied desserts.

I think most of the readers who write to us are thinking of moulded desserts that may be made in advance. All morning we have been concocting such sweets and now have two that we are very pleased with.

The first one calls for one cup 33% cream and filled my four-cup ring mould just to the brim.

1½ packages (1½ tablespoons) plain gelatine, ½ cup water, one 15-oz. can fruit cocktail, one 6-oz. can fresh frozen orange juice concentrate, 1 cup 33% cream.

Heat the fruit cocktail to simmering point. Soak the gelatine in the cold water. Stir it into the hot fruit cocktail, which has been removed from heat, until gelatine is dissolved. Add fresh frozen orange juice concentrate. Chill until it begins to congeal. Whip cream until it will softly hold its shape and fold into partially congealed mixture until it is incorporated smoothly. Turn into 4-cup ring mould (or a 4-cup mould of any other shape) and chill until set. If desired, when this is turned out on serving plate, it may be garnished with additional fresh or canned fruit which has been well drained, such as mandarin orange sections, or sliced peaches, or canned pineapple tidbits.

FRUITED ORANGE WHIP

1 package (1 tablespoon) plain gelatine, ¾ cup cold water, one 6-oz. can fresh frozen orange juice concentrate, one 3-oz. package orange jelly powder, one 15-oz. can fruit cocktail, 2 egg whites.

Soak gelatine in cold water. Drain fruit from juice. Heat juice. Remove from heat. Add soaked gelatine and jelly powder. Stir until dissolved. Add fresh frozen orange juice concentrate and drained fruit. Chill until it begins to congeal. Beat egg whites until they hold soft peaks. Fold partially congealed mixture in evenly. Pour into 4-cup mould to chill until set.

This gelatine dessert is obviously less expensive and has fewer calories than the Fruited Orange Cream above because it calls for only 2 egg whites instead of the 1 cup of whipping cream.

Next week I will give jellied salads to accompany the main course.

The Kiwanis Ladies' Auxiliary met last Thursday at the Kiwanis Centre for the second meeting of the 1964 season.

Following the business meeting, program chairman Mrs. John Denton introduced the guest speaker, Mr. E. Gurnett. Mr. Gurnett is a lapidary, and besides a most enlightening talk on the subject, had many samples of rocks to show.

Some in their natural state, but the rest as he had cut and polished them. One interesting item was a piece of petrified wood. This, and most of his samples he had collected on trips through the United States. He also had Canadian stones in the display from such places as Bancroft area and as far away as Nova Scotia.

Mrs. Phil Burton thanked Mr. Gurnett, after which refreshments were served.

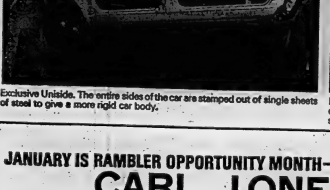
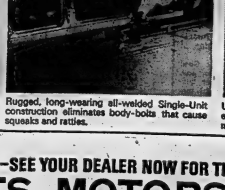
Rambler doesn't have what it takes to make a rattle

EXCLUSIVE ALL-WELDED SINGLE UNIT CONSTRUCTION ELIMINATES BODY BOLTS THAT LOOSEN UP WITH TIME

In the old method of car construction the body is bolted to a frame. In time, body-bolts work loose, causing the squeaks and rattles that are the bane of every motorist.



Twenty-three years ago, we pioneered a new method of building cars. We welded the entire car into one solid unit. Without body-bolts, squeaks and rattles were virtually eliminated. Called Single-Unit construction, it offered a stronger, longer-wearing car. The rest of the automotive industry is just beginning to adopt this superior method. But even when they do, Rambler will still be ahead.



Two years ago we introduced Uniside, an improvement on Single-Unit construction. Now the entire sides of a Rambler are stamped out of single sheets of steel. By reducing the number of welds and cutting down the possibility of error, it provides a more perfect door fit and an even more rugged car body.

Exceptional and exclusive features like this provide Rambler with everything it takes to make Canada's best car value. Visit your Rambler dealer soon and see what we mean.

VOW Member Will Join Peace March

OTTAWA (CP) — Delegates from the Canadian Voice of Women will join women from 14 other NATO countries in a peace march on The Hague, timed to coincide with the NATO military conference in early May.

The women's peace force, which is being organized by the American Women Strike for Peace movement, will protest the proposed creation of a multilateral nuclear force.

Thirty members of the VoW's national council, which met in Ottawa over the weekend, said the United States proposal to set up the multilateral force, involving the spread of nuclear arms to West Germany, would be a dangerous and retrograde step away from the path of disarmament."

The VoW members plan to use the fact that Mother's Day falls two days before The Hague NATO meetings to emphasize their protest against what they say would be the further spread of nuclear arms in NATO countries.

CARS Makes Investment In Research Unlimited

The Belleville Women's Auxiliary of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society met Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. M. E. Branscombe, 64 Queen Street, with Miss Hilda Collier presiding.

A lengthy discussion occupied the greater part of the evening on ways and means of raising funds to carry on the work of the auxiliary in the area.

It was decided not to hold a monster rummage and auction this year which has been an annual event for the past five years.

WORK OF VOLUNTEERS

Mrs. A. A. Gemmell in the absence of Mrs. D. McKinnon gave the report on the work of the volunteers at the Arthritis and Rheumatism treatment centre at the Belleville General Hospital Tuesday and Thursday evenings each week.

Mrs. E. David informed the members of the work of the public relations committee, help had been given to several individuals where requests had been made. Temporary assistance had been given to a family where the father was badly disabled, until arrangements were made for pension through the provincial government.

Miss Gladys MacDonald, corresponding secretary, read a letter of acknowledgement and appreciation of a cheque for $100. for one share in Arthritis Research Unlimited. This is a company composed of some of Canada's foremost research experts then the discovering the cause and producing the cure for arthritis and rheumatic diseases.

RESEARCH SPECIALIST

Of interest to people in this district is that one of these research specialists is Dr. Ian Simmons, formerly of Trenton.

The issue of shares is to raise capital to expand laboratory equipment, buy materials, and continue the investigation of promising discoveries in the field of arthritis research.

This investment will pay dividends in improved national health and the alleviation of suffering. It will promote the national economy by reducing a colossal wage-loss caused by disability and loss of earnings. Include the gratitude of a million suffering Canadians, and the satisfaction of sharing in a great work of mercy.

Shareholders will receive scientific reports from the doctors or scientists involved in the progress of the work. Shareholders may invest in projects, they are encouraged to share in the spirit of this long-term high-yield investment.

Clothes Given More Feminine, Fitted Look

ROME (AP) — Italy's fashion designers have given clothes for spring and summer 1964 a more feminine and fitted look with colors now pale instead of vivid.

Italian high fashion houses took the wraps off photographs of their new styles, displayed in the House and Florence showings of Jansky, and allowed the world to have its first look today.

Important in the new collections are small, close bodices that fit close at the sides. They have been constructed in such a way as to make the midriff appear concave. The clothes definitely require a small, high, round bosom.

Hems cover the knee. Skirts are generally straight but soft, although some flare slightly. Shoulders now are soft, with raglan or kimono seaming.

SLEEVES GO UP

Coat and suit sleeves have gone up, approaching bracelet length. Soft ring colors are everywhere — smooth or bowed, knotted or looped, narrow or wide.

Featherweight pale printed silks have come in as the fabric and color tone. Muted pastels, especially ecru beige, are the big color hits although navy blue and white have also been rediscovered.

Smooth - surfaced wools like gabardine, diagonal weaves and double-face types complete the fabric picture. Italian designers achieved entirely new effects by weaving silk ribbon and soft wool together.

Fur trim has been favored, too, but the newest idea is twill and chiffon silks printed to look like accompanying tweeds.

Divorce Laws Need Mending Says Lawyer

VICTORIA (CP) — Canada's divorce laws need mending as if it were only a sexual affair, but it's not and almost everyone knows it, says one of Victoria's few women barristers.

Marney Stevenson says a man could attempt to murder his wife, become mentally defective for 10 years in jail and nothing could be done to dissolve the marriage.

"Adultery is only one matrimonial sin—adultery. One act of adultery is more important than abusing a marriage than 10 years of continuous drunkenness, physical beatings or desertion.

The law should be liberalized to include such grounds as desertion for three years or more, incurable insanity and cruelty resulting in danger to life, limb or health—bodily or mentally, Mrs. Stevenson said in an interview.

There were two ways the present laws could be modified. The federal government could extend grounds and set up a federal divorce court with lodges in each province. Or the provinces could be given jurisdiction over their own divorce laws by an amendment to the British North America Act.

THREE SCHOOLS

Mrs. Stevenson says there are three main schools of thought on possible changes in divorce laws.

One favored outright abolition of divorce as they advocates were those "who do not believe in enforce, on religious grounds."

Another school subscribed to the theory that divorce should be granted on grounds based as breakdown of marriage, that is, when marriage no longer provides the normal conditions for a joint life and upbringing of children.

Then there was the idea of matrimonial offence. This was "the basis of the divorce laws in most Commonwealth countries and it meant that certain acts were regarded as fundamentally incompatible with the undertakings entered into at marriage."

What is needed, Mrs. Stevenson says, is not a royal commission "but a government with the intestinal fortitude to make those changes."

Capital's Traffic Policewomen Survive Early Criticism and Earn Place on Police Force

By BRENDA LARGE

OTTAWA (CP) — After 31 years of active duty, the capital's traffic policewomen no longer are objects of curiosity or the butt of jokes and snide remarks.

The meter maids, as they have been dubbed, have survived early criticism to earn a permanent place on the Ottawa police force.

Chief Reginald Axcell still gets inquiries from cities across Canada and the United States about the organization of the women's traffic enforcement corps.

First recruited in February, 1960, they were specially trained to enforce traffic laws and thus free men for other duties. The original squad of 11 women has grown to 29, the largest in Canada, says Chief Axcell.

They were put through a rigorous six - week training program, consisting of a course in court procedure, manual traffic control, the Criminal Code, civic law, traffic regulations, liquor control laws and accident investigation. They were also taught public relations or, to put it another way, how to be charming while handing out a traffic ticket.

RIDE SCOOTERS

The women also had daily drill and physical training along with practice on motor scooters, which soon became their trademark.

The first policewomen took to their beats in May, 1960, tramping the downtown streets in eight - hour shifts or buzzing about heavy traffic areas on their scooters.

Their duties boil down to filling bend on Ottawa's 1,200 parking meters, directing rush-hour traffic in rain, sleet, hail or snow and carrying out a multitude of chores from finding lost children to escorting a drunk to police station.

Dressed in neat navy blue slacks and jackets in summer and fleece-lined parkas in winter, the women often receive compliments on their smart appearance from visitors to the city. They wear their hair short, under caps which are navy blue in winter and white in summer.

Does being a police officer affect a girl's social life? Not at all. In fact all the girls who have left the force, except one, did so to get married.

MUST BE TALL

However, a meter maid has yet to marry a police constable —most of the male police are already married.

A girl who wishes to become a policewoman must be between 21 and 26, at least five-foot-five and have had two years of high school.

She will work an eight-hour day with Sunday and another day each week off and get three weeks vacation a year. Salaries start at $3,300 and go up to $3,724.

The women constables were lively topics of controversy when they were first recruited but criticism now is rare.

An MP once said in the Commons during a debate on unemployment that traffic enforcement was "no job for a woman."

Chief Axcell promptly came to the defence of his meter maids, saying: "We get all sorts of comments about our policewomen constables and most of them are very good."

An alderman once remarked at a city council meeting that a bill for $118 for a pyjama wouldn't have come up "if we'd hired men."

"These runs are going to run into a lot of money."

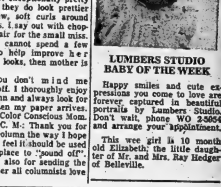
Dear Pegg Rogers: I have been following with interest your discussion on Canadian fashions. I would enjoy reading more about the problems of our future, fashion-conscious, young women- I refer to our daughters. I have two girls, ages nine and 11, and I am concerned about the lack of color in ready-to-wear for these age groups. It is difficult to find an attractive school dress in a pretty color. In three departmental stores, I could find only browns, dull greens, rust and a dirty gold shade. We always end up buying plaids, because they are lively, although we are heartily tired of them.

Summer dresses are of course much better as there are plenty of pretty pastels around. But for winter party dresses, I could find lots of dull shades in velvet and we were forced to buy brocades to get the pretty colors which the girls like.

Another concern of mine is hair! Little girls should be pretty. But some of my daughters' friends have cut their hair very short with the result that they look like boys. As I have four sons, as well as the two girls, I can tell you that sometimes my boys look prettier than those short little girls. My daughters wear their hair shoulder-length. Every second evening I spend ten minutes setting their curls. This small amount of time is well spent when I see the result. Both of them have absolutely straight hair with no natural curl at all, but this pin curl routine works very well. Of course, in the summer, they wear it piled on top of their heads to keep cool. My daughters are not exceptionally pretty girls, but they look very pretty with a few, soft curls around their faces. I say out with chopped - off hair for the small miss. If mother cannot spend a few minutes to help improve her daughter's looks, then mother is lazy.

Hope you don't find me sounding off. I thoroughly enjoy your column and always look for it first when my paper arrives. Signed — Color Conscious.

Dear C. C. M.: Thank you for using the column the way I hope all readers feel it should be used — as the place to "sound off". Thank you also for sending the kind of letter all columnists love to receive.



I have checked the children wear market thoroughly, and am happy to be able to tell you that for fall 1964, you should be able to buy lots of pretty, gay colored dresses for school. This does not help for this winter, I know, but apparently you are not alone in your complaint about the lack of color available for girls, as most of the better makers are including more wider ranges of pretty colors in their samples for next fall. There are some lovely, easy-care for fabrics around if you sew your own.

I agree about the Oliver hair cut for little girls- I find it depressingly practical and generally unbecoming.

If you have a question on fashion, just write Pegg Rogers in care of this paper.

Successful Living

Boy Who Acts Like Hermit Will Be Treated Like One

DEAR DORIS — During the last Christmas holidays, I went to stay for a week with my brother and his family. While I was there I had an absolutely boring time. For nearly the whole week I stayed inside the house, not wishing to contact with the teen-age group there, and for the greater part of the day I merely read or sat without having much to do or say.

A week of almost complete inactivity was just about impossible to take, and I was greatly relieved to return to my normal way of life.

DORIS CLARK

Now, my problem is this: Since I've returned to school the kids have noticed and ask me why I hardly ever speak any more. I've noticed this too, and I've tried to do something about it. At times when I try to get in the conversation what I say seems to come out with a completely different meaning than what I had intended it to be, so I just keep out of what they're talking about.

I've seen this happen to another person, and believe me I'd rather go into complete seclusion than wind up in the same condition that he is. — WORRIED JOE.

* * *

DEAR JOE — Who said "Only a bore is bored?"

If you know that house was populated with teen-agers, why didn't you go equipped to join in? Teen-agers are people and would have loved a good sport.

Or, why not start something for the older generation, if that's where you tune in? Couldn't you have taken your host and his wife out to dinner?

If you act like a hermit, folks will take you for one. This goes for your student-friends too.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — On the bulletin board there was a notice about getting employment this summer in Holland. In this plan excursions are included.

I would like to go as I love to travel and I will be three years in training for a nurse and then probably get married before I have another opportunity to travel.

The problem is I'm an only child and my mother will probably be reluctant to let me go. I think it would give me a chance to become more self-reliant, independent and confident.

Do you think my request is unreasonable? I am in grade 13 and will be 18 in June. —A FAITHFUL READER.

* * *

DEAR FAITHFUL — Spreading your wings with a summer's work in Holland could indeed help mother's only chick to learn to fly. Write for more information, making sure your mother knows from the start about your interest.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — I am very interested in taking an Interior Decorator's course by correspondence. Where should I write to obtain a good, but not too expensive one? — HOMEMAKER.

* * *

DEAR HOMEMAKER — There is a course in home furnishings, made up of 20 lessons by correspondence. Fee is $15.00. Prepared for "those who wish to build, decorate and furnish a home."

Write details to The Director of Secondary School Correspondence Instruction, Department of Education, Victoria, B.C.

* * *

(Don't just muddle along. Doris can suggest practical help for your dilemma. And remember that stamped, self-addressed envelope when you write!)

Ice Covered Roads Blamed For Mishaps

CAMPBELLFORD — Ice-covered sideroads in Seymour township were blamed for several accidents over the week-end. Two accidents occurred on the one-mile section of the 5th concession of the township, and in other mishaps, cars slid into the road and struck a tree, a telephone pole and a fence. There were no serious injuries. Damage amounted to about $1,000.

In an accident Friday night, a car driven by Douglas Bird, 18, of Trent River, slid off the Burnbrae road about a half-mile east of the town. It skidded along the ditch on the south side of the roadway, sideswiped a hydro pole, and continued on, striking a second hydro pole, disrupting power for about two hours when the pole was broken off.

About $600 property damage resulted Saturday when two cars, one of them an Ontario Provincial Police cruiser collided on Front St. A car driven by Mrs. Morgan Ames of Campbellford was travelling south when it suddenly collided with a cruiser travelling north, in the north bound lane. OPP Cpl. Gordon Gray, officer in charge of the Campbellford detachment of the OPP, who was driving the cruiser, notified No. 5 District Headquarters of the OPP in Peterborough, who sent an officer to investigate. Campbellford police also conducted an investigation.

Neither Mrs. Ames nor Cpl. Gray was injured, but the cruiser received about $300 damage to the front end, while the Ames car received about $350 to the right front corner. Four children in the Ames car were uninjured.

Grant Approved For Survey Of Weir Dam

CAMPBELLFORD — Northumberland riding MPP Russell Rowe has announced approval of a provincial grant to the Crows Valley Conservation Authority for the purpose of carrying out a preliminary engineering survey on the weir dam immediately south of the bridge on the Crowe River. The amount of the grant is $562.50.

The weir dam, built just south of the Crowe River Bridge and just north of where the Crowe empties its waters into the Trent River, was built in 1910 by the Trent Canal division of the Department of Transport as a water measuring device.

The dam has not been useable for several years, and has deteriorated to the point where it creates a hazard to swimmers who flock to the area each summer.

The township of Seymour, who will derive the most benefit from the rehabilitation of the dam, will pay the major portion of the cost of repair, after the survey has been carried out.

Informants in Iskenderun, Turkey, said Turkish naval and army units stationed at the port 100 miles from Cyprus had been placed on the alert again.

Lt.-Gen. P. S. Gyani of India, UN special observer in Cyprus, was reported to have reached agreement with opposing Greek and Turkish Cypriot factions in the town of Polis for a temporary cease-fire. After sporadic shooting between the two factions, about 700 Turks holed up in a Turkish schoolhouse in Polis.

In London, Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home said British troops released the Turks trapped in the school.

by asking.

The trustees' spokesman replied that the board had been told Sunday by a senior CMU official that there was no such letter.

Action on the attempted raiding will be taken Wednesday by Mr. Justice Dryer, Judge Lippe and the third member of the board, Charles Millard.

Mr. Millard called the attempted raiding detrimental to the welfare of the five unions placed under trusteeship when the federal government moved last October to clean up labor strife on the Great Lakes.

DOESN'T WANT RAIDS

It was not a reflection of the type of co-operation promised by the CLC, the trustees spokesman said, and while the board had approved the unions signing up new members, it did not sanction inter-union raiding.

It admitted, however, that no directives to this effect had been issued yet.

Although the CLC is not under the trustees' jurisdiction, board is empowered to take legal action against parties "obstructing" its work. A fine of $10,000 or imprisonment up to two years is provided.

The two trustees visited Europe to obtain on-the-spot information on how shipowners and seamen iron out common problems. During their whirlwind visit, they met with leaders of 20 countries.

They were understood to be specifically concerned with various programs aimed at stabilizing employment in the shipping industry abroad.

United States Is Trying To Save Cuban Blockade

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The United States is trying to pick up the pieces of its Cuban economic blockade proposal shattered by Britain's plain-spoken prime minister who has made clear that his government will sanction no boycott which is non-strategic trade with Communist countries.

These remarks of Sir Alec Douglas-Home, delivered at a press conference after his meeting last week with President Johnson, left the U.S. government embarrassed and unhappy.

But U.S. authorities maintain they are as determined as ever to place Fidel Castro in economic isolation.

They realize, they say, that as matters now stand, U.S. policy is paralyzed temporarily. As long as the Castro regime is anxious to buy and has the money with which to pay, the allies are likely to continue to do business with Cuba no matter what the U.S. says.

THAT'S NOT END

But they anticipate this is not the end of the story. Castro is reported to have earned about $15,000,000 in convertible currency last year through the sale of sugar at minimum high world prices. Those prices may drop with an anticipated rise in world sugar production this year.

While Castro currently may have the Cuban sugar which to buy British buses and French tractors and may continue to make trade agreements with some form of extensive credit, Americans conclude that this sort of business may dry up if the exporters do not get full repayment.

If, in fact, Castro goes broke and fails to meet his bills, commercial exporters among the allies may be expected to withdraw automatically. But this is a conjecture that rests on pure speculation.

The U.S. administration has been anticipating the demise of the Castro regime since Castro took over in 1959 but the regime remains lively.

The comment that saves the U.S. policy from appearing completely ludicrous is the indication to the government that at least part of the U.S. public is seriously concerned over the growth of a Communist fortress just 90 miles off-shore.

FOREIGN-AID CUT

In a presidential election year it may become dangerous for a president or aspirant to ignore public sentiment. At the moment the only action in sight is the prospect of a cut-off of American foreign aid for those countries which do business with Castro. That cut-off would not affect allies which do not receive any aid.

A more serious threat may be that indicated by State Secretary Dean Rusk who says American consumers may decide on their own to stop buying products of foreign suppliers who trade with Castro. It is unlikely that the average consumer would examine every piece of merchandise to see who produced that particular item and check that supplier against known trade with Cuba.

But if posters start appearing that certain foreign-made merchandise is linked with Cuban trade and is undesirable or if the labor unions refuse to handle the merchandise, as in the case of wheat to Russia, the result could lead to some curtailment of purchases of those items to the detriment of the suppliers involved.

C. N. TRAYNE

Appointed Director of Travel for his company's sales group, Mr. Trayne's first official act was to charter a Canadian National coach for their next season in the East. "Chartered coaches are the trend in group travel" claims Mr. Trayne. "They allow my colleagues to prepare much of the business agenda en route. Saves time and money", he said. "For example, a group of 60 people, travelling in their 'own' coach, can save as much as 33%. You can't beat this bargain!" For longer trips, Mr. Trayne charters a sleeper and also saves money. "When our group splits into smaller committees of between 10 and 22 men, we make sure they travel on CN Red 'Bargain' or White 'Economy' Days. Even then, we can take advantage of CN's Party Fares — and save 10% to 20% more. I recommend you call your CN Passenger Sales Office for full information about group travel arrangements!"

The study of government defence policy by a special Commons committee last year is expected to be resumed, sparked by a new white paper on defence to be presented early in the session.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker has served notice he'll attack the government in such fields as the sales tax on construction materials, the January cabinet shuffle, the nuclear arming of Bomarc missiles and what he calls the "obvious failure" of the government trusteeship over maritime unions.

The New Democratic Party is critical of the Columbia River power deal and the recent revisions in the Canada Pension Plan. Party Leader Douglas also wants action on the Canada Development Fund — a proposal announced by the government last year for a government-backed industrial development agency. No action was taken on it, and Finance Minister Gordon has said it won't be proceeded with.

On the financial front, Mr. Gordon has given advance notice of further spending increases and another budget deficit for the 1964-65 fiscal year starting April 1.

Mr. Whicher said: "If there was a Stanley Cup given in Canada for spending money, this government would win it each and every year without a struggle."

Mr. Ryden said a balanced budget was not necessary. He believed the government should spend more on capital works, without raising taxes that might tend to retard the economy.

Entire Family To Have Fun At Carnival

PICTON (Staff) — The time is rapidly approaching for the entire family to get on their skates, any costume that comes to their mind and head for the Picton Arena.

Saturday, February 29th is the night when the Kiwanis Club of Picton, in conjunction with the Prince Edward Centre Commission, get together for an evening of "hi jinks".

This is the night when father, mother and all the youngsters can get together and have fun. It matters not if you can skate well, it's a lot of fun getting out on the ice with the kids.

It can be rewarding too. The committee in charge of such things have come up with an assortment of prizes, and are planning on having some kind of a prize for everyone who enters.

The age groups are — pre-school children, with or without skates and then 5 and 6, 7 and 8, 9 and 10, 11 and 12, 13 and 14, 15 and 16 and 17 to 50.

There will also be a special event for those over 60 who are on skates.

A special event this year is the tabled presentation open to groups of six school children sponsored by a school. It is expected that all schools in the county will send a group to participate in this event.

Dr. Lloyd Dockrill, general chairman of the project has had several meetings with his various committees and reports that the whole thing is starting to come along in fine shape. "The many pieces are starting to fall into place and I am sure that we will have an even better show than last year," he added.

Bolting Planks To Approaches Glenora Ferry

PICTON (Staff) — The water is so low in the Bay of Quinte that cars using the Glenora Ferry have been losing mufflers and tail pipes in their attempts to leave the ferry.

On Monday, workmen from the Department of Highways at Kingston were busy bolting a three-inch plank bed to the approaches on the Glenora side which will give most of the cars the extra clearance needed.

Some motorists, having lost a muffler, and/or, a tail pipe, are driving the extra mileage around by Belleville. "It's cheaper than buying mufflers," said one motorist.

No Blame Attached To Car Driver

PICTON (Staff) — A Queen Elizabeth School student was shaken up and suffered a few minor bruises when he ran in front of a car while enroute to school at noon yesterday.

Police said that Stephen Strong, six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Strong, 29 Queen St., ran from one side of Bark-er St. to the other, and ran into the front fender of a car driven by William Donald Gourley, Queen St., Picton.

The young lad was tossed several feet by the impact, he landed near the sidewalk, and before the driver could get from his car, young Stephen was hightailing it home.

He was taken to the hospital for X-rays, and later returned home.

Police Sergeant Scott Hele, who investigated, said that no blame could be attached to the driver of the car.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

A week from tonight down Miami, Florida way, two of three houses will come tumbling down.

One is a "split-level" affair built of golden verbal bricks manufactured in the main by the brick-straw mouthings of one Cassius Clay and later laid jointly by the tonsilar trowels of both Clay and Sonny Liston.

The monumental edifice that "Jack" built is said to be valued at some $7,000,000. After the legal demolition is finished and the builders, contractors, etc., extract their spoils, Mr. Liston's bank account will bulge with 60 per cent of the rubble, while the 22 per cent or thereabouts that Master Clay tucks away should more than corner the Cadillac market.

The other house which this agent believes is due for sudden violent destruction is the championship fairyland villa erected by the consistent colorful coughings of the cocky challenger.

The magnificent ego of this brash handsome gusher together with his physical attributes marks him as an entirely different fighter to that which crawled through the ropes in the second Liston-Patterson fiasco.

A general consensus of experts except close personal friends of Patterson was that he was a beaten man before the first round gong clanged.

Gaseous Cassius has more confidence than a hungry fox approaching a trapped rabbit. He firmly believes that next Wednesday morning the world championship crown will cuddle his handsome noggin. If he has any trepidations he is covering them under a magnificent show of bravado.

"Laugh at "The Lip" if you will. He is part owner of the "House That Jack Built" and if he is beaten, he will, like Liberace, have the last laugh when he hauls all that "baled hay" to his favorite bank.

His shows an almost insulting disdain for the ability of the bulldozing Liston. At that recent television "debate" someone suggested he was running off at the mouth" because his confidence was shaky.

Cassius opened his mouth with a wild scream. "I'm gettin' wilder every minute," he shouted. "I can knock a man out backing up. I'm gonna upset the whole world. As the underdog I'm the poor man's dream."

He said one thing he didn't like about Liston is he talks too much. He classified Sonny's fights with Floyd Patterson as "rabbit hunts." His fight strategy was "to hit and not to be hit."

Anti-Clay factions bring up the cliche that David first breathed before he knocked out Goliath in the first round. "Who did he ever fight?"

The headstones in the Clay cemetery of beaten foemen do not bear many imposing names. In fact Doug Jones looms as the only one of any great importance. And Clay didn't live up to his own advance notices against the Jones boy.

An old soldier once told me "the only way to stay alive is to stop from being killed!" Some of the experts say that Clay will get on "bicycle and the question is how Liston can catch up with him. It might be harder than some folks think."

Which may be right, but surely Clay does not expect to be the hare until the hound drops dead from exhaustion. When does he expect to get in his attack? He has to get inside the range of that murderous right even if he survives the vicious left hooks of the champion, long or short as they may be.

In view of this department's prediction record, the odds should swing to Clay when the "limb leg" records that Mr. Liston will be mentally reckoning the "take" before the gong rings for the fourth round.

By that time I believe "Von Cassius" will have been deprived of that lean and hungry look.

He will be counting the birdies and the birdies will be large golden eagles, flittering over a fleet of pink, mauve and bellicose Cadillacs while in the background will be a convoy of Brink's trucks toting the loot to the nearest green lettuce depository.

Departmental Hockey

Public Works cut down the Police Department 8-1 in the opening game of the Interdepartmental Hockey League finals last night.

The series is a best-of-seven.

Brian Skinner triggered the lone Police marker.

The series continues next Monday night.

WHEAT CROP

It's estimated the 1963-64 wheat crop in Australia will amount to 323,000,000 bushels, or 16,000,000 more than last season.

Clerk Goofs On Ticket, Wins $1,017

The clerk Saturday punched the wrong number —5—on a customer's $10 win ticket for the San Luis Rey Handicap.

The customer refused the ticket and the clerk was stuck with it. Then horse No. 5—Inclusive, a long shot, won, paying $205 for each $2 bet.

The clerk collected $1,027 —a bet of $1,017 after paying for the ticket. He wasn't identified.

Meet Three Times, Canadiens Hold Edge ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Hawks, Habs Hassles Flag Factors?

MONTREAL (CP) — The remaining National Hockey League schedule lends to favor the Montreal Canadiens in their battle with Chicago for the pennant.

But, in the end, three head-on meetings between the two contenders likely will decide this season's league champion.

The Canadiens' biggest advantage is the two games they hold in hand over the Black Hawks. Montreal and Chicago are tied for first with 69 points, but the Canadiens have played 53 games while the Hawks have used 51.

In addition, the Habs have the home ice advantage. Of Montreal's 12 remaining games, nine are at home and six are on the road while Chicago plays only five of 13 games at home.

Another point in Montreal's favor is their four games left with New York, a team that has only beaten them once in 10 meetings this season.

MEET THREE TIMES

The key contests, however, are the three direct collisions between Montreal and Chicago, the first of which is slated for Montreal next Saturday. They also meet March 1 in Chicago and March 14 in Montreal.

The Hawks have been known to fade at the tail end of the schedule but so far they've shown no signs of folding or even slowing down, except for Stan Mikita.

League statistics released today show Mikita only picked up one point in three games last week to increase his league-leading point total to 71. His two closest rivals, meanwhile, moved within challenging distance.

Teammate Bobby Hull picked up two goals and one assist to move within four points of Mikita with 67. And Jean Beliveau of Montreal scored three times and earned two assists to increase his output to 65 points, six back of the pace-setter.

HULL HAS 33

Hull leads in the goal-scoring department with 33 and Beliveau is tied with New York's Andy Bathgate for most assists at 43 each.

Bathgate is in fourth place with 59 points and followed by Ken Wharram of Chicago with 56. Four players are tied for sixth with 52.

Glenn Hall of Chicago holds a four-goal edge over Montreal's Charlie Hodge and Toronto's Johnny Bower in the Vezina Trophy race. The Hawks have had 132 goals scored against them in 57 games while Montreal has given up 136 in 55 and Toronto 136 in 54.

Mikita has moved up to challenge team-mate Reg Fleming for the league's "bad boy" crown. Both have 132 minutes in penalties-a-like Chicago leads the team race with 961 minutes and New York trails with 556.

Napanee Wraps Up Top Spot

Napanee Red Wings wrapped up first place in the OHA Eastern Junior Hockey League standings last night by edging the much-improved Trenton squad 3-2 in Napanee.

Napanee completed their schedule one point ahead of Picton on the strength of their two points earned with last night's victory.

Only two games remain to be played in the schedule, both involving the Belleville "B's". Belleville meets the Trenton club in Trenton tomorrow (Wednesday) night and also goes to Peterborough on Monday, February 24.

Neither game will have any bearing on the final standing, but no word has been received here about cancelling the games in order to get the playoffs under way.

A meeting at Memorial Arena Wednesday night is expected to settle playoff dates. The Napanee club is expected to have a choice of semi-final opponents because of the first-place finish. The "B", Belleville meets the lower-placed team between Kingston and Peterborough in the group semi-finals. The latter two clubs also play Metro clubs and points count from those games. It is thought that Kingston has clinched top spot ahead of Peterborough.

Following is the standing to date, plus the two remaining games:

	W.	L.	T.	PTS.
Napanee	14	8	0	28
Picton	13	8	1	27
Gananoque	12	10	0	24
Belleville	6	11	2	14
Kingston	5	7	1	11
Peterborough	4	11	1	9
Trenton	3	12	0	6
(Note) - Kingston and Peterborough games in Metro League excluded.	3	10	2	10

Remaining games - Feb. 19 Belleville at Trenton, Feb. 24 Belleville at Peterborough.

Athletics Tie With Hornets 1-1

GALT (CP)—Goalies Ron Salter and Dave Dryden kept the battle for first place in the Ontario Hockey Association's Senior division snarled Monday night as Galt Hornets and Woodstock Athletics fought to a 1-1 overtime tie.

Brilliant net work featured the battle of the first-place clubs before 1,375 fans. Dryden turned back 36 Woodstock shots while Salter stopped 35 Hornet drives.

Galt's Larry Pfaff and Woodstock's Gord Sampson handled the scoring in a 66-second flurry early in the second period.

Chess A 'Must' For Future Tennis Stars

By WILL GRIMSLEY

NEW YORK (AP) — Anyone who wants to become a tennis champion should be compelled to take chess lessons, one of the leading U.S. tennis instructors said Monday.

"Chess is a precise, mathematical, organized, non - physical game," said Dick Skeen of Newport Beach, Calif., who developed Jack Kramer, Pancho Betz, Gussie Moran and other top players.

"Tennis is chess with a different set of rules, mechanical strokes and the physical side thrown in."

Skeen, a grey little man in his middle 50s, came to New York to describe his own five-year plan for rebuilding the United States into a world tennis power.

RESTORE PRESTIGE

"I have been terribly discouraged to see this great sport deteriorate as it has in this country—I mean from the standpoint of the upper - level play-ers," he said. "I believe our plan will help restore America's international tennis prestige."

Ten boys and 10 girls between the ages of 12 and 15 in the southern California area have been chosen for an intensified development program aimed at making them potential world champions within five years. They have been given free membership in the Balboa Bay Club at Newport Beach, some 30 miles from Los Angeles, where they will be subject to spartan discipline and training four afternoons a week, 10 months of the year for five years.

"I have made a good-sized wager that from this group will come most of our national junior champions in the next five years and later world champions," Skeen said.

CLUB PAYS FAR

The teen-agers were picked on the basis of natural talent, attitude and desire. It made no difference whether they had ever played the game before. The Balboa Bay Club is under writing expenses, expected to run between $50,000 and $100,000.

The program is similar to that carried on a national scale in Australia and employed also by the Russians in the development of their outstanding athletic teams.

Besides the time spent on the courts, the youngsters will have to take part in extensive study, undergo a strenuous physical training program and play chess.

"We will have a chess instructor and chess will be part of the required curriculum," Skeen said, noting many top players improved their concentration and court strategy through chess.

ESKIMOS COACH

EDMONTON (CP) — Everett (Sonny) Grandelius, 34, an assistant backfield coach with Detroit Lions of the National Football League, is discussing the head coaching job with Edmonton Eskimos of the Western Football Conference. Eskimos president Walter H. Sprague said "the club won't make up its mind on Eagle Keys' successor for another few days." Keys was fired Feb. 8 after five years as head coach.

Top Rinks Split In School Curling

Three Unbeaten

By WALTER KREVENCHUK

REGINA (CP) — Three rinks emerged through the first day of the Canadian schoolboy championships undefeated Monday but two of the three favored Prairie entries suffered early setbacks.

Saskatchewan, Ontario and British Columbia emerged with double victories but an underdog Northern Ontario foursome and a collision between two Prairie rinks dumped Manitoba and Alberta out of the unbeaten list.

Doug Scheerschmidt, 16-year-old skip of the Alberta quartet, spent most of Sunday in bed with influenza, conserving his strength for the opening matches. He led his defending champions to a 10-7 victory over Nova Scotia in the first round but then bowed 10-7 to Manitoba.

Northern Ontario, 11-10 conquerors of the Manitobans in the first round, also ran into its trouble when lead Fred Prier had to retire in the third end of his second-round match against Saskatchewan. With a second Terry Armstrong throwing the first four rocks, the three survivors finished on the short end of an 11-5 score.

Ontario's triumphs were decisive, a 14-5 verdict over New Brunswick in the first round and a 16-3 decision over Prince Edward Island in the second. British Columbia defeated Quebec 9-6 in the first round and New Brunswick 11-8 in the second.

Saskatchewan clipped Newfoundland 14-6 in the other first-round contest. Prince Edward Island had the bye. In the other second-round match Quebec defeated Newfoundland 9-6. Nova Scotia had the bye.

With nine rounds to play in the competition, Ontario, Saskatchewan and British Columbia's top spots with 2-0 records. Northern Ontario, Manitoba, Quebec and Alberta follow with 1-1 counts, Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia with 0-1 and New Brunswick and Newfoundland with 0-2.

The first draw today put British Columbia against Prince Edward Island, Saskatchewan against Alberta, Northern Ontario against Quebec, Manitoba against Nova Scotia and New Brunswick against Newfoundland in the third round. The bye was Ontario's.

Sparkling knockout and draw execution by skip Frank Bailey, a member of his province's representative at the 1963 schoolboy championships at Guelph, carried Saskatchewan to its win Monday.

Bailey and his teammates from Moose Jaw walked over Newfoundland with three counts in the third and sixth ends and five in the ninth.

A four-ender in the seventh end, which broke a 4-4 tie, spelled the difference against Northern Ontario.

The Ontario foursome — skip John Harris, third Gerry Marshall, second Jim McGill and lead Doug McNeil — from Owen Sound collegiate — checked out four four-enders in their lop-sided victories, two against New Brunswick and two against Prince Edward Island.

The school championship, born less than 2 years ago, has been dominated by western teams. Eastern winners have been Ontario, twice, and Northern Ontario.

Maritimes Harness Racing

Youngster Among Top Drivers

By DON ANGUS

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP) — Leaning forward in his precarious position aboard a speeding sulky, the 18-year-old boy urged the aged pacer to make his move in the home stretch.

He peered through goggles flecked with track dust, watched the other horses carefully and with only a few feet remaining pushed his horse for a final spurt under the wire.

Reining in his pacer Tennis-wood, Douglas (Sonny) Rankin turned and paraded before the crowded stands at the Sports Centre here. The youngster who had grown up with horses on his father's farm at nearby Bell's Creek had won the first harness heat he had ever raced. But it was only the beginning.

Now 18, Sonny has formed a habit of winning. In his three seasons of handling horses he has surged to the forefront as one of the most capable Maritime harness - racing drivers. Last year he took top honors on the 106 occasions at various Maritime tracks.

His total of 106 victories was 25 better than his closest competitor in the area and placed him in 14th position, ahead of Joe O'Brien of Alberton, P.E.I., Shafter, Calif., among leading dash-winning drivers in North America.

By coincidence, it's also O'Brien who has been young Rankin's hero. And Sonny would like to do something O'Brien has managed several times — win the Hambletonian, greatest of all harness races.

The young Rankin was only eight when he acted as marshal at the Sydney track. Mounted on an old pony named June Bug, the youngster became a familiar figure as he paraded the trotters and pacers at the start of each dash and led the winner to the winner's circle afterward.

By the spring of 1961 Sonny wanted to taste the thrill of driving in a race. He got his licence and was a year short of the required age but applied to the U.S. Trotting Association for a special certificate.

The USTA, governing body of harness racing in the Maritimes, granted him a provisional with licence to ride his father's horses. After working out in several events on harbor ice at Wallace, N.S., during the winter Sonny climbed up behind Tennis-wood to score his initial win.

"I don't think I have any particular style," says the lean five-foot-11 youth. "I try to get on the rail as soon as possible and stay there, making my move in the stretch. If I don't draw a position on the inside I drop back to last, move to the rail and make my run for the wire from there."

His favorite pacer is a seven-year-old named Eben's Ace. In 1962 he pushed the Ace to a Sydney track record of 2:06 4-5 and last year drove the horse to a 2:09 1-5 mile for the fastest trip of the year. However, he talks more about Ace in which the pacer came second.

"In the summer of 1962, Dad bought Eben's Ace at a sale in Montreal for $700. It was the time Ace at which a stable paid $45,000 for the famous pacer Irish Grattan C.

"Later that season, Irish Grattan C. was asked to come to the Maritimes for a challenge invitational against the record-breaking Dee's Boy by Dark-mouth, N.S. Dee's Boy came first, Eben's Ace second and Irish Grattan third."

Doug Rankin's time was 2:03 3-5.

Machen Wins By Knockout

Machen, 180½, of San Francisco, had floored Sabedong, 216, also of San Francisco, earlier in the round with a left hook followed by a right and another left hook.

Mysterious Banff Letter

Seek Writer's Identity

BANFF, Alta. (CP)—A Calgary Olympic Development Association representative said Monday he will do everything in his power to identify the writer of a letter to the International Olympic Committee saying Banff did not want the 1968 Winter Olympics.

They went to Grenoble France.

Claude Brewster of Banff said he is making a formal application to IOC president Avery Brundage of Chicago for the original letter which he said could be used to identify the writer.

"If RCMP handwriting experts will help us, so much the better."

Mr. Brewster said Jack Anderson, a Banff merchant, said he is not the "J. D. Anderson" who signed the letter.

"If Mr. Anderson is innocent, his name should be cleared—if he's bluffing, we have a right to call his bluff," Brewster said.

Brewster, who saw a copy of the letter at Innsbruck, Austria, said it was typewritte but there was a written signature.

He said the letter could affect Banff's chances of getting the 1972 Winter Olympics.

Brewster said all CODA delegates were out on a limb in trying to get Banff named the site of the 1968 Olympics.

"The letter to the IOC just sawed that limb off."

Under One Commissioner

Sees Football World Series

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commissioner Joe Foss of the American Football League predicted Monday that eventually the AFL and National Football League will get together under a single commissioner as baseball has done.

Foss predicted also there would be an inter-league playoff, similar to baseball's World Series.

NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle, who has rejected such predictions in the past, ignored them Monday in testimony before the Senate anti-trust and monopoly subcommittee.

Rozelle, however, in response to a question, said he considered that the NFL is not "in the mood" to be thinking of any championship play with the AFL.

Russ Now Equal To Canadians

OTTAWA (CP) — Russian ice hockey teams beat the visiting Canadians 3-2 Monday in Moscow because they can match the Canadians in body checking, says an article in the current issue of Soviet Union Today, published by the Russian embassy here.

"This is most remarkable of all because heretofore our teams had been inferior to the Canadians in bodychecking," the article says.

Modestly, it says at another point: "The competition between the Soviet and Canadian puck-chasers has in the last few years become one between equals and not of teacher versus pupil as before."

The Russians won all six games in the series against the Bulldogs with a total score of 38-8.

DOWNGRADE INTEREST

He said the NFL is concerned that such a playoff might downgrade fan interest in the league's own post-season title game.

However, both commissioners were united in their support of legislation before the subcommittee which would give to professional football, basketball and hockey the same anti-trust exhibition enjoyed by baseball.

They were joined in endorsing the idea by commissioner George T. Gareff of the United Football League.

SET UP FARMS

Gareff said the bill would aid efforts to work out suitable farm agreements with the two big leagues, similar to those in baseball, where college graduates who couldn't make AFL or NFL teams could receive experience in the minor leagues.

Creighton Miller, lawyer for the players group, urged that the bill be amended to provide more protection for the players.

As contemplated, he said, the bill would take away the right of the players to resort to litigation under the anti-trust laws which they now have and which he feel should continue to have with certain limitations."

No Regulars Signed

Cards Eye Extra Money

ST. LOUIS (AP)—With Stan Musial gone, the former teammates are so hungry for part of the gravy that none of last year's St. Louis Cardinal regulars has been announced as signing 1964 contracts.

And spring training starts in less than two weeks.

Money is the obvious reason — about $125,000 worth.

When Musial retired last fall to become a Cardinal vice-president, his healthy salary—around $50,000—went with him. In addition, the players feel they deserve more money for lifting the Redbirds from a woeful sixth place in 1962 to the National League's second spot last year.

The players are aware some extra money is around. The Cards drew more than 1,000,000 customers in 1963 and showed a profit of about $125,000. Adding Musial's lost player salary, this brings the excess loot to about $185,000.

Management won't talk much and neither will the players. It's a private thing, they say.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction guaranteed or your money refunded.

Goodson-Todman Family Starts Another Game Show

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Women who watched day-time television shows have been pictured as a slack-jawed group, suffering over soap opera problems or watching people play games while beds go unmade and hard-working dad gets cold cuts for dinner.

The truth is that day-time serials and panel or game shows are admirably designed and used for auxiliary occupations. It is easy and pleasant to sew, darn, or even make beds while following You Don't Say or As the World Turns. They require, at the most, only an occasional glance at the screen.

In recent years, there has been an enormous increase of interest by women in handcrafts. A lot of people suspect it has some about largely because broadcasting keeps women mildly entertained while their fingers are flying.

Soon, there will be another birth—and a death—in the big Goodson-Todman family of panel shows. The eight programs, spread around all three networks, will be joined by Get-the-Message on ABC March 30. But NBC's Missing Links departs at the end of March.

NAMES SHUFFLE

The network — once again — will shuffle its day-time schedule, and put the new show into an 11 a.m. spot. Seven Keys, an audience participation show, will be dropped, on the eve of its third birthday.

Get the Message will use celebrity - audience participant teams to guess words on the basis of clues.

Recommended tonight:

Garry Moore Show, CBS, 10-11 EST—with Nat King Cole and George Gobel as guest stars.

Clay, Liston Attend Weigh-In Jointly

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Miami Beach Boxing Commission, with collective tongues in cheek, decided Monday night that heavyweight champion Sonny Liston and Cassius Clay could attend the weigh-in for their Feb. 25 title fight together without serious danger to either party.

The decision was announced after a vigorous protest by Liston's adviser, Jack Nilon, who said the champion was angry at Clay and might "knock out the kid at the weigh-in."

Clay's trainer, Angelo Dundee, said the whole idea was ridiculous.

"If Liston is afraid to face my fighter," he said, "you can assure Liston that I won't let Clay hurt him."

This comedy was staged after the commission had announced various rules and regulations to be in effect for the fight.

BELL CAN'T SAVE

For the first time in a title fight, nobody can be saved by the bell. If either fighter is on the floor when a round ends, the second will continue into the next period.

If the fighter is counted out during a rest period, it will be registered as a knockout in the round in which he was knocked down. This rule does not apply in the mandatory eight count if the fighter is on his feet when the bell rings.

Nilon also protested when the commission decided to waive the three - knockdown rule.

"Why?" he asked. "That's to Clay's advantage. If you say you are trying to protect the fighters, how can you do this? What if Sonny knocks the kid down six times? My fighter knows that the kid doesn't get hurt."

Morris Klein, commission chairman, said he would be up to the referee to decide whether a fighter knocked down three times in a round is in condition to continue.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Cassius Clay said Monday that when he climbs into the ring with heavyweight champion Sonny Liston Feb. 25, "I'm gonna walk over to his corner, push him out of the way and use his resin box."

When the bell rings, said the Louisville Lip, he will stop clowning and start fighting.

The challenger stood in the ring at his training quarters and held an impromptu press conference after boxing three rounds with his sparring partners.

"Sonny Liston is somewhere doin' down today," he said. "I'm still working. I've got a lot of stuff I haven't used before. Left hand uppercuts and some other stuff.

"In some of my later fights, I been looking bad on purpose. Otherwise, Liston wouldn't fight me. He's scared to death."

KISS HIS FEET?

When Clay repeated his statement that if he loses he would crawl across the ring to Liston's corner and kiss his feet, one reporter asked: "What will you really do?"

"I'll go to my dressing room, collect my money and then go home," he said. "What else is there to do?"

"I couldn't show my face if I lost. Pete Rademacher has already offered me $500,000 to defend my title.

"I'm coming out fast. In three rounds, Liston is gonna be dead tired."

Promoter Bill MacDonald answered some questions about the ticket sales. He said $273,000 was in the till as of Sunday.

Rosemary DeCamp Enjoyed Her Journey to Pakistan

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Rosemary DeCamp has made the transition from Pakistan to Petticoat Junction with no case of culture shock.

That has marked her acting career.

Miss DeCamp, best known in films for Mother Cohan in Yankee Doodle Dandy and in television for The Bob Cummings Show, was doing a Petticoat episode only days after returning from a three-month tour for the state department.

"The trip was a rare and wonderful experience," she said. "It made me realize how much has to be done to keep those friends."

The actress said the trip evolved from friendship with an American cultural officer in Pakistan. He suggested she would enjoy such a theatre groups while her husband, Judge John Shidler, could confer with legal officials.

"That was four years ago," she said. "I guess the state department puts your name in a file and waits. By the time the tour was authorized and we got to Pakistan, our friend was transferred."

UNEASY AT FIRST

"I was uneasy at first; the last time I was on stage was 25 years ago at Mills College," she said. "But they made me feel welcome. The audiences are a very warm and friendly people and very attractive with their big eyes.

"There was no language barrier, since most speak English as a hangover from the British days.

"They like American plays and were especially impressed by the classic Cyrano de Bergerac's dialogue, although they didn't understand the messages in his plays.

"In some plays I had to make adjustments for local custom. In The Glass Menagerie, I had to change the kissing scene, since they consider it just not done. The actor kissed the girl's hand —and even then she pulled her hand away so his lips wouldn't touch her skin.

"Almost everywhere the people were friendly. They were very touching after the president was assassinated; they sent flowers and notes saying how sorry they were. They seemed really affected by it.

"It was only when we went to East Pakistan that we felt some hostility. There you can see the results of Radio Peking, which floods the area with propaganda."

"THE LEOPARD"

Novel of Love, Adventure and War

Based on the widely acclaimed novel of the same name by Guiseppe di Lampedusa, "The Leopard," a CinemaScope, Deluxe Color Titanus production of Goffredo Lombardo, directed by Luchino Visconti, is now playing at the Belle Theatre. The 20th Century-Fox release stars Burt Lancaster, Alain Delon and Claudia Cardinale with an impressive cast of supporting players in a multi-million-dollar production filmed entirely in Sicily, the locale of the actual historical facts which the picture depicts.

Already in release in Europe, the picture won first prize at the last Cannes Film Festival, was chosen out of competition at the Moscow Festival and opened the Montreal Film Festival in August.

In 1958 the publishing of Lampedusa's historical novel became one of the literary events of this era. It had the double distinction of winning plaudits for its value as a work of literature and of becoming an immediate best seller throughout Italy. It received the coveted Strega award in Italy and has been called the best Italian novel of the century.

Basing this book on his own great-grandfather, Lampedusa has immortalized a Sicilian prince, wrote intimately of how a proud and fiery man, Don Fabrizio, Prince of Salina, humbles himself to save his family's way of life from distinct extinction before the onslaught of that island's despised power-hungry bourgeoisie at the time when Italy was being unified in the 1860's.

Adapted for the screen by producer Goffredo Lombardo and director Luchino Visconti, the film is their creation of "Rocco and His Brothers," among others, "The Leopard" features an international trio of stars. From the United States there is Academy Award winner Burt Lancaster who portrays the Prince of Salina, named "The Leopard" after a beast in his family coat of arms, the Italian beauty Claudia Cardinale and the young French star, Alain Delon.

"The Leopard" will be shown twice daily at the Belle Theatre.

Picton Juveniles Edge Napanee In Opener

PICTON (Staff) — Picton nipped Napanee 4-3 in the opening game of their best-of-five OHA Juvenile "C" league playoff series here Monday night.

The game was a good one from the first whistle, in doubt until the last play.

Picton took a 1-0 lead in the first period and held it until each club scored once in the third. Paul Jones opened the scoring, assisted by Bert Fredrick and Brian Riddle.

Albert VanDusen made it 2-0 for Picton, on passes from Paul Finnigan and Doug Pettingill, early in the third.

Napanee closed the scoring and made it close at 14.13 of the period Ron VanAlstine was the marksman on a play with Trevor and Owen.

There were 11 minor penalties called in the tilt, Picton getting the odd one.

SAILING SHIP VISITS

OSLO (AP) — The Norwegian full - rigger Christian Radich, with a complement of cadets, will go up the St. Lawrence Seaway to the Great Lakes this summer, it was announced Monday.

Army Boys 84-43 To Lightfoots

The Army squad was minus three regulars, including high-scoring Junior Warrington, and were no match for Lightfoots who led all the way. It was a 45-20 tilt at the half-way mark.

The game was the final scheduled one for both the clubs involved. The league-leading RCAF Flyers were to have played in Cobourg but no result was available and there is a possibility that the game was postponed until tonight. Playoffs will start shortly.

Doug Rose was top scorer for Belleville, hitting for 21 points to increase his league-leading total. Gord Smith was close behind with 20 points followed by Doug Smith and Warren Whitley with 14 apiece.

Adams was high scorer for Picton with 14 points. R. Sullivan also hit double figures with 10.

GORDIE HOWE'S HOCKEY

By GORDIE HOWE

Every now and then, even veteran hockey players will unconsciously take a mistake. An alert coach will call it to his attention. Or teammates who are familiar with your habits will tip you off as to what you're doing wrong.

In my case, I have a bad habit that pops up every once in a while.

His first job is to help protect the front of the net. If I try to make a direct shot on the net. Otherwise his assignment is to dash out to the point, to the point, to seek to get control of the puck.

I'll try to take them by surprise by slapping the puck against the boards. Then I'll jump out of the way of the puck if faced off against. I try to get back to the left point as fast as I can to get in front of the net. Then circle and go for the front of the net.

On occasion I'm in such a hurry I'll jump a fraction too soon as the puck is dropped, intent on getting away. And my faceoff opponent picks up the puck and goes straight on out, catching us out of position.

Alex is an expert on winning faceoffs. But every now and then he slips into a bad habit.

Intent on getting a little more power, he goes high with his stick. Instead of running his stick straight through on the ice, and drawing back he goes big high with his stick, because of the extra effort.

So he's gone three feet up and its three feet back to the ice. You don't move fast enough to get the stick back in time to get the puck. The opponent gets it. So I tell Alex "You're going too high-with your stick."

FENCER HURT

Luke Appling Named To Hall of Fame

BOSTON (AP) — Luke Appling, the most durable shortstop in major-league history, was elected to Baseball's Hall of Fame Monday. He batted over .300 in 16 of his 20 big-league seasons.

He moved into the hall at Cooperstown, N.Y., on a second ballot.

Appling, who established a big league record of 2,218 double plays during his career, got 190 votes on the 225 ballots submitted by authorized baseball writers. Seventy-five per cent of the votes cast, or 169, was needed for election.

Pitcher Charley (Red) Ruffing, who gained his acclaim with the Yankees but was not elected, fell two votes behind Appling. Rules of the selection balloting specify that if more than one player got more than 75 per cent, only the leading vote will be admitted.

"Wonderful. I'm really proud," said Appling from his home in Atlanta, Ga., home where he is now manager of the Crackers' farm team.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Key is illusion. You tend to be in a world apart. Oddly, this proves attractive to many. But keep feet on firm ground! View circumstances, people realistically. Be wary of fair-weather friends.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Pay attention to needs of those who serve you. Attend to basics. Include shopping for staples. Don't be impatient. Welcome change of routine. Added being too critical.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Read Cancer message. Highlight social interests. Be quality over quantity. Good to make changes, adjustment, seek improvements in your home. Say yes to unusual proposal by family member.

If today is your birthday... you are original in approach; independent, possess sparkling personality. But you often attract persons who are envious.

General Tendencies: Cycle high for Taurus, Gemini, Cancer. Special word to Scorpio: Take promises with grain of salt. Be gracious, but practical.

HAMILTON (CP) — Veteran centre Alex Delvecchio fired a pair of goals to lead the National Hockey League Detroit Red Wings to a 6-3 win over Hamilton Red Wings, their Ontario Hockey Association Junior A farm club, Monday night.

RCAF 5BX Not For Men 25 and Over

In the current edition of Medical Services of Canada, government publication Dr. Schinbein advises men over 35 to take less strenuous exercise, such as golf, cycling or hiking, unless they have been active during their 20s and early 30s.

He says the general concensus of orthopedic surgeons in Toronto is that the exercises for men from 35 years and up can precipitate a number of physical disabilities."

Frankford

FRANKFORD—Last Tuesday was pancake Tuesday for Frankford United Church men's A.O.W. Those who missed the people consumed over 500 pancakes with other food, keeping an army of men waiters on the run, and several chefs in white hats, jackets and aprons, jumping around at griddle. Pastry cook of the women helped with the dishes, and everybody had a hilarious time.

This week on Thursday it will be ladies' night for the A.O.T.S. club. Dinner is at 7 p.m. Rose-Lowery hall and a special program will be offered with Mr. Steve Chona, conductor of Eastern Ontario symphony orchestra with his string quartette for entertainment.

Govt. Officials Have Two Views on France

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — What the Canadian government says publicly about de Gaullist France and what its members and officials say privately are about as different as night and day.

The obvious reason for the public statements in praise of France, authorities say, is the flowering cultural relationship between French-speaking Canadians and France.

The government, in fact, is seeking to promote this relationship by putting up money for student exchanges in the same way that it has backed the Commonwealth scholarship plan.

Informants say this policy of encouraging more ties with France hinders somewhat what the government might otherwise say about some French policies.

De Gaulle in effect now is regarded in some circles here as the separatist of Europe and France as a foot-dragging member of the North Atlantic Alliance.

COULD TALK THEN

Prime Minister Pearson when in opposition didn't have to be as circumspect in his comments as he does now.

Talking about NATO in the Commons Jan. 25, 1963, less than three months before he became prime minister, Mr. Pearson said:

"A take-it-or-leave-it attitude by any one member could provoke, or where it may already exist could strengthen, a defence policy, especially in building up separate, independent national or regional forces looking and discriminatory trade arrangements, either national or regional."

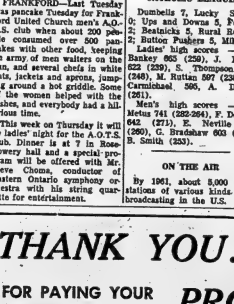
Authorities listed some examples of French policies which come in for serious criticism by those of the Canadian government:

1. France refused to permit American nuclear warheads on her territory. This policy has caused repercussions also on Canadian Air Division in Europe, including closure of one RCAF station.

DECLINES NATO TROOPS

2. France declined to contribute more ground troops to NATO after Algerian war ended. This means the Canadian Army brigade in Europe will have to be left there longer than it otherwise might have been.

3. France, a Mediterranean power, has refused to participate in any international police force for Cyprus. This could conceivably mean a larger Canadian contribution.



4. Statements made by Andre Malraux, France's cultural affairs minister, during a Quebec visit last week, under ordinary circumstances, have resulted in a Canadian government request for explanation, informants said. He was, in effect, encouraging separatism, they said.

The Passing of the Five-Buck Room

Luxury the Norm in Hotel Boom

By CARL MOLLINS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The customer has never been more right as far as the Canadian innkeeper in general is concerned.

In general, because almost any traveller—casual, compulsive or commercial—encounters individual cases of seedy accommodation and shoddy service at extortionate expense.

At the same time, the day of the $5 room is disappearing as the dominant new and refurbished hotels make luxury the common standard. A survey of a score of communities shows the average single starts at $7 or $8.

Compensating factors apart from better facilities — broadloom, shower, TV and telephone in every room for a start—include the option of letting guests help themselves.

Carry your own bags, collect your own ice and mix from corridor machines, even make your own instant coffee at a wall unit and you all but eliminate tipping, a widely unpopular practice, hoteliers say. A logo trend is to put a kitchenette in every room.

MOTOR HOTEL DOMINATES

The survey shows new building, additions and renovation are under way almost everywhere in Canada, with the emphasis overwhelmingly on the motor hotel in all regions but the Atlantic provinces.

Of the national total of 10,000 lodging establishments with about 225,000 rental units, more than 1,250 with some 25,000 rooms are less than five years old.

The trigger for the boom is competition for a share of the pickings from the wayfarer's wallet: An estimated $2,000,000,000 is spent annually in Canada on travel and tourism.

Something like $675,000,000 goes to hotels and motels, half of it for liquor, about $200,000,000 for accommodation and more than $10,000,00 for meals on the premises.

Competition in the hotel trade has generated intensive attempts to discover what's right for the customer.

It has involved rivalry between the traditional hotel and the traditional hotel and the the post-war motel, each borrowing ideas from the other to the point where the hybrid hostelry known as the motor hotel has emerged to dominate the field. (The "airotel," product of the boom in air travel is a motor hotel near an airport).

NAMES CONFUSING

The distinction among the various establishments is often blurred. A luxurious, multi - storey edifice in the heart of a city might call itself a motel while a wayside arc of semi-detached cabins might bill itself as a highway hotel.

Innkeepers themselves have trouble defining the differences, although rivalry about them is sometimes strong. The motel-minded membership of the Ontario Tourist Courts Association rejected early this year a proposal by their directors to merge with the Ontario Hotel Association.

Roughly, a motel becomes a motor hotel when it links accommodation units by indoor corridors as well as open-air cloisters, usually adding a lobby, restaurant, bar and other refinements while retaining the proximity of car park to bedroom.

The refinements are becoming more and more elaborate. A swimming pool has become as necessary as beds and baths. The newest places put the pool indoors to bolster the winter trade.

Suburban Toronto's Inn - on - the-Park is a 200-room luxury place with costly wrinkles like an outside pool, kiddies' playground and convention hall.

INTERIORS LAVISH

Winnipeg's 111-room Carlton is common with others of similar scope, cost about $2,000,000 —a rate of $18,000 a rental unit compared with the climbing motel average of about $9,000 a unit. Calgary's Caravan, among the tallest of its breed at seven storeys when built in 1962, is already planning a $1,000,000 extension.

Ever striving for newer and better attractions, "decorator-designed" interiors are the thing. Winnipeg's Viscount Gort is a bit of Old England that England never saw. Japan inspires Victoria's Imperial and Ottawa's Tailsman, without the discomfort of sitting on the floor.

The motor hotel, usually suburban but now more frequently downtown, has exerted pressure on both traditional hotels and the simpler five-to-25-unit motels—"ma and pa motels," as they are known in the trade.

The result is a ferment of renovation, feasibility studies and some failures, pooled promotion and referral chains, talk of suburban saturation among motelmen and anxiety about renovation costs among hotelmen.

Some vulnerable motelmen have been forced to doll up establishments less than a decade old, adding restaurants in face of the orthodox view that small motels lack the volume to justify the expense of dining facilities.

But many motel operators maintain that standing pat while others ante will leave them a big pot—the bulk of the ale and wiener nicome trade barred by budgets from the increasing luxury and cost of the posh spots.

Hoteljers, too, say there will always be a place for hotels because of their location in the heart of town, their facilities for meetings and conventions, their emphasis on bellhop, room and dining services.

The claim likely holds in metropolitan areas such as Montreal—where the $25,000,000 investment five years ago in the 1,216-room Queen Elizabeth is paying off—and Toronto, where the Royal York boosted its room count to 1,600 from 1,200 four years ago and the Westbury opened a 240 - room extension last August.

However, in smaller communities the downtown location has less importance and motor hotels are starting to include meeting and convention facilities.

OCCUPANCY HIGH

Most important, bigger motor hotels are recording year-round occupancy rates exceeding 75 per cent while the national average for traditional hotels is below 60 per cent.

A typical example is in London, Ont. The 300-room Hotel London, long the only first-class hostelry in the city of 200,000, has been challenged within five years by three new motor hotels with a total of 374 rooms. One of two opened by the burgeoning Holiday Inns chain is downtown. The new Carousel has seven rooms for business meetings and a hall that will seat 450 for a banquet, 600 at a meeting.

In reply, Hotel London has just undergone a $1,500,000 face lifting and has added parking space for 300 cars.

Apart from renovation — Ottawa's Chateau Laurier, Calgary's Palliser and Vancouver's Hotel Vancouver are among many refurbishing—older hotels and smaller motels are meeting the motor hotel challenge with policies akin to "if you can't lick 'em, join 'em."

CHAINS ENTER FIELD

Such chains as Sheraton, Hilton and the two Canadian railways are putting up their own motor hotels, adopting others under franchise and installing free parking and some self-service facilities in older establishments.

Sheraton added Winnipeg's Carlton and Saskatoon's Castiler to its chain under franchise, Hilton has its Aeroport Hotel at Montreal's Dorval and Canadian Pacific has set up a separate company to bandle such places as the Ascot 27 air hotel at Toronto's Malton.

Motels are signing up with associations designed to compete against the big corporate and franchise chains such as Holiday, Seaway, Ramada, Capri and Caravan.

Joining associations like Quality Courts, Travel Lodge, Thrift Courts and Best Western gives individual motel owners the benefits of joint promotion, chain-referrals, telephone reservation bookups and credit systems. In return, the associations generally lay down a pattern of standards which must be met by members.

"As motor hotel room rates go up because of expensive furnishings and services, small motel amenities become easier to recognize and should be easier to sell," says Arthur D. Ellwood, editor of the Canadian Hotel Review and Restaurant.

The skyward rise of costs and the danger of oversupply worries some hoteliers in the current competitive ferment. The consumer is likely to be the main beneficiary.

Rescue Three From Helpless Vessel

First Survivors Are Taken Off Drifting Derelict

Italian Liner Searches For Rubber Liferafts

NEW YORK. (AP)—A Norwegian freighter rescued the first survivors today from a helpless drifting British merchantman in the storm-tossed North Atlantic, the U.S. Coast Guard announced here.

Shortly before 9 a.m. the freighter Fruen secured a line to the derelict Ambassador and removed three of the seven men still aboard her, the coast guard reported.

ABANDON SHIP

Some of the stricken freighter's crew abandoned ship Tuesday in a raging storm which had stove in her forward hatch and flooded her engineroom, leaving her wallowing in the pounding seas.

The Coos Bay radioed the rescue ship Vulcania at 7:15 a.m. to make a big-circle course in hope of spotting survivors, adding:

"two rubber life rafts are adrift with four or more men in each. Rafts last sighted at sundown yesterday."

Minutes earlier the cutter messaged coast guard headquarters in New York: "Consider today only chance to locate liferaft survivors. Request maximum aircraft coverage as soon as possible."

Two aircraft, one an RCAF Argus and the other a C-130 Hercules dispatched by the coast guard, were reported on the scene soon after.

SPOTS FREIGHTER

The Coos Bay, a 311-foot cutter in Portland, Me., indicated she had spotted the British freighter still afloat 660 miles southeast of Halifax.

The Norwegian vessel Fruen, which arrived on the scene Tuesday night, also was joined today by the Vulcania, a 24,496-ton Italian passenger liner.

Another Italian liner, the Leonardo da Vinci, was the first rescue ship to reach the Am-

NEW YORK (AP) — 'Condition of the sea very dangerous . . . have no lights . . . oil flooding engine room . . . abandoning ship."

With such terse S O S messages, the stricken British freighter Ambassador gave a dramatic account of her struggle in the storm - wracked North Atlantic.

The saga of the sea began early Tuesday. Here is the message - by - message account:

The coast guard immediately dispatched a C-130 Hercules aircraft piloted by Lieut. Clyde C. Robbins and asked an RCAF Argus aircraft operating out of Greenwood, N.S., to look over the area. The coast guard cutter Coos Bay, 205 miles due north of the Ambassador, altered course to assist the stricken vessel.

In a matter of minutes, a coast guard computer located

French Troops In Gabon

PARIS (Reuters) — French troops early today "began operations to restore order" in Libreville, capital of Gabon, in the wake of a bloodless coup there Monday night, a source at the French premier's office said.

There was no indication of the nature or scope of the operations.

Earlier it was reported here that two companies of French troops were sent to the West African republic "to protect French residents."

A government source said that in French circles here President Leon Mba was still the legal head of the government.

Sources close to the French presidency said earlier in the day that French troops were "ready to intervene in Gabon today to restore the legal power of the regime of friends of President Mba and in virtue of agreements between France and Gabon."

'Nobody Can Change This But Me' Says Union Head of Wheat Boycott

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Labor leaders, in their first full-scale row with President Johnson, vow they will not retreat from their boycott of U.S. wheat shipments to the Soviet Union.

There's nobody who can change this deal but me," said President Thomas W. Gleason of the International Longshoremen's Union Tuesday. "And I will not back down."

Gleason had the full support of AFL-CIO officials, including President George Meany, in rejecting Johnson's plea to end the boycott.

Labor's attitude appeared to harden in the face of renewed attempts at a settlement by Assistant Labor Secretary James D. Reynolds, special emissary of the president.

Gleason and Paul Hall, president of the AFL-CIO's Maritime Trades Department, insist that at least half the wheat be shipped in U.S. vessels.

Hall claimed the Johnson administration had reneged on the late president Kennedy's promise that at least half the wheat would be transported in American ships.

The labor leaders also are angry because the maritime administration, under the commerce department, granted Continental Grain Company a waiver permitting more than 50 per cent foreign shipping.

Cargo longshoremen are boycotting four foreign ships scheduled to be loaded on the Gulf Coast with wheat sold to Russia by Continental.

The Continental sale involves about $75,000,000 worth of grain. Other export licences issued by the commerce department could bring wheat sales to Russia to $400,000,000.

The longshoremen's officials say none of it may ever get off American docks if the deadlock isn't settled on their terms.

Robarts Defends Stand

By BOB EXELL

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Robarts stoutly defended Tuesday his criticism of the federal government's proposed pension plan in the wake of suggestions that the premier was trying to block it.

Mr. Robarts said in the legislature he could only reiterate again and again that this display was not so, "in putting these views forward I do not seek to, nor will I, scuttle the Canada Pension Plan.

"I will be disappointed if I do not improve it," said Mr. Robarts, commenting on reactions to his letter on pensions sent to Prime Minister Pearson last week.

The premier acknowledged that the public inquiry he had called for could delay the federal pension scheme for a year. But he said this was better than ending up with a faulty plan.

Any criticism he was making were put forth in a constructive spirit.

"I can only have grave statements that Robarts is going to block the Canada Pension Plan," he said, departing from a prepared text on the issue.

PEOPLE SHOULD KNOW

Premier Robarts said he couldn't care less whether the proposed federal plan was examined by a royal commission or some other public committee, as long as the people got a chance to find out what it entailed.

"For instance, he said, they should know that in some cases contributors would receive $10 in benefits for every dollar they had put into the plan, whereas in other cases it would be exactly the reverse.

In outlining what the province considered to be inequities in the plan, he was not trying to obstruct it, but rather to obtain the best for the people of Ontario and the nation.

"I have made it clear that I will not oppose a federal plan even though I may not agree with it."

His statement on pensions and other matters concluded the throne speech debate in the legislature. The government then easily defeated two motions of non-confidence.

HAVE BIG EDGE

The votes were 73 to 25 against motions put forth by the Liberals and New Democrats in the form of amendments to the motion for the acceptance of the throne speech. The two opposition parties voted for each other's amendments.

Earlier, Peter Sopha (Lib.-Sudbury) had concluded the throne speech debate for his party, calling Mr. Johnston a "captive of the insurance com-

Mother Who Tried to Give Children to CAS Is Slain

SUDBURY (CP)—A Sudbury mother who stirred controversy shortly before Christmas by trying to give up her children to the Children' Aid Society was killed early today in her home, police said.

Sudbury police have charged Henry Hamernyk, 32, with the capital murder of his wife Marie. He was to be arraigned later today.

Marie Hamernyk, 23, gave up her four children to the society because she said she could not afford to clothe them.

The children were returned to her later after a family court hearing. Mrs. Hamernyk had said welfare officials had cut off her cash payments because she had bought a refrigerator on credit.

Her body was removed from her home at about 1 a.m. today. Police declined to reveal further details pending a preliminary hearing.

House Starts Action

By ARCH MacKENZIE

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliament put on its ceremonial attire Tuesday to open the second session of its 26th term.

Today, the ritual of moving and seconding the reply to the speech from the throne, delegated to two young Liberal MPs, was scheduled. This paves the way for the eight-day throne speech debate in the House of Commons, due to end March 7, and exposing the minority Liberal government to fresh votes of non-confidence.

The Senate was meeting as well, for what usually is a brief sitting.

Other developments today include the first inklings of what the Pearson government plans in the way of privately - sponsored legislation and resolutions—although these normally fail to make much progress.

There is also the first question period for the revised cabinet to face.

MOVED QUICKLY

Prime Minister Pearson crossed the floor and spent 10 seconds shaking hands with Opposition leader Diefenbaker—while Liberals and Conservatives applauded — and then the House approved a series of pro forma matters.

One special feature was the seating of two new Liberal MPs, victors in the Feb. 10 by-elections to pick successors for former postmaster - general Aurélius Denis, now a senator, and former justice minister Lionel Chevrier, now high commissioner in London.

Escorted to back-row seats were Fernand Leblanc, a 46-year-old chartered accountant representing Montreal centre, and Marcel Prud'homme, 29, a lawyer, representing Montreal St. Denis.

Today, Jean Pierre Cote (Lotinguoil) was moving the reply to the throne speech—the usual outline of legislative intentions read Tuesday by Governor-General Vanier. Seconding it was Ron Basford (Lancouver Burrard).

LEADERS TO START

The first real bite, aside from today's opening round of questions, will come Thursday as leaders' day when Mr. Diefenbaker and Mr. Pearson will make their first major speeches. The order have unlimited time at their disposal to say what they wish.

Mr. Diefenbaker is expected to move an amendment to the main motion—a clear statement which thanks the Governor-General for the speech he read. That would constitute non-confi-

Fewer Dishes But Still Lots To Chew On

Many Massive Tasks For New House Session

By ALAN DONNELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—The Liberal government's legislative menu for the new parliamentary session contained fewer main dishes than usual. But it will require plenty of hard political chewing.

The decision to go ahead with present version of the complex contributory Canada Pension Plan, in the face of strong criticism from the Ontario government and others, was the big item in the speech from the throne read at Tuesday's opening ceremony by Governor-General Vanier.

The throne speech outlined some other massive tasks for the new session, including study of a new "white paper" statement on defence policy, major legislation on railway regulation and ratification of the far-reaching Columbia River power treaty with the United States.

All these issues, although anticipated, are likely to keep legislators hard at work well into next summer.

The announcement of the legislative program had some surprises too: interest-free loans for needy university students, Senate reform in the form of a compulsory retirement age, and the prospect of an attack on the problem of the high cost of getting elected to Parliament.

A new federal labor code, a fisheries development program and a new impetus for urban slum clearance also are part of the session's schedule.

The throne speech came under immediate criticism from leaders of opposition parties who together outnumber the 129 Liberals in the 265-seat Commons.

Conservative Leader Diefenbaker called it "pallid . . . scarcely containing leftovers from last session." He said the government had given no recognition to current economic problems of rising living costs, dwindling defence investments and the need for more Canadian ownership of Canadian industry.

New Democratic Leader Douglas called it a mixed bag of proposals "falling short of the imagination and boldness that things now require."

Social Credit Leader Thompson termed it "not a very impressive program," while Real Caouette, leader of the Ralliement des Creditistes, said the speech contained "the same old platitudes" with nothing of interest to average people.

The government used only 15 words to announce its plan for legislation on "a comprehensive

Balcer Role In Party Disputed

OTTAWA (CP) — What is Leon Balcer's new role in the Progressive Conservative party?

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker told reporters Tuesday that he regards Mr. Balcer, 46-year-old MP for Trois-Rivieres, as the leader of the party's Quebec wing, but not as the party's deputy leader.

A few hours later Mr. Balcer in turn met reporters and assured them that he is the party's deputy leader, or chief lieutenant to Mr. Diefenbaker, if he used both expressions—deputy leader and chief lieutenant —in English and French.

The conflicting statements followed approval by the Conservative caucus—MPs and senators —of a new seating plan for their front bench in the Commons. Mr. Balcer becomes Mr. Diefenbaker's deskmate, assisted to the Opposition leader's left.

George Nowlan, former finance minister and MP for Digby - Annapolis - Kings, was shifted from Mr. Diefenbaker's left to the next desk in the leader's right — Mr. Balcer's old seat.

Mr. Balcer said he stands by a resolution passed unanimously at the 5 by Quebec delegates to the party's annual convention. The resolution asks Mr. Diefenbaker to recognize the former transport minister as "provincial leader of our federal party and as such the chief lieutenant of our national leader."

Mr. Diefenbaker said at the convention that he agreed with the resolution. (At a press conference in Ottawa, reporters asked whether Mr. Balcer was deputy leader and Mr. Diefenbaker was not. The Conservative party has never had a deputy leader, not even in the days when Sir John A. Macdonald was leader and Sir Georges-Etienne Cartier his Quebec lieutenant.

Party officials said the Conservative constitution does not provide for a deputy leadership. A resolution passed by delegates from one province at a national convention did not change the constitution.

They said that official designation of a deputy leader could lead to clashes on policy similar to those between Social Credit leader Robert Thompson and his deputy, Real Caouette, before the two split openly last September.

Gun-Running to Greek Cypriots Alarming British Authorities

LONDON (AP) — Concern mounted in official British quarters today over reports indicating that gun running to Greek Cypriot irregulars on Cyprus is continuing. Officials estimated that as many as 2,000 Greek Cypriots — many of them veterans of the pro-Independence Greek guerrilla army—may be under arms.

A major concern for British officials is the activities of Greek Archbishop Makarios, president of Cyprus, can exercise over the rapidly growing so - called secret army.

There is little doubt here that the irregulars owe their first allegiance to EOKA rather than the formal Cyprus government. EOKA was the underground army that battled the British in the 1950s before Cyprus gained its independence.

British ministers also have been embittered by the Cyprus government's apparently complete failure to stop the gun running and arming of irregulars.

Commonwealth Secretary Duncan Sandys summoned a previous protest to Cypriot Foreign Minister Spyros Kyprianou when he was in London over the weekend. In Nicosia, a government spokesman replied that Cyprus has the right and duty responsibility to purchase arms for the security of the state.

This was regarded in government quarters here as an almost unbelievably irresponsible response, in view of the account of arms smuggling going on behind the backs of the British authorities keeping forces on the island.

Britain has asked its NATO allies and several neutral Commonwealth countries to stop arms shipments to Cyprus. But little can be done from London to check the flow of weapons believed to be reaching the island from the United Arab Republic, Lebanon and other Middle East states as well as from the unofficial groups in Greece and Turkey.

Informed sources in Beirut, Lebanon, said Greek - Cypriots and a few British - Cypriots are buying small arms in Beirut and there was no evidence of any large-scale purchases.

There is also concern lest the growth of the Irregulars prejudice the attempt through the United Nations to set up a peace-keeping force of 10,000 men.

Britain's forces on the island now number about 8,000 and these can be increased. A further 1,200 men, including a battalion of Coldstream Guards, have been placed on the alert to move out on short notice if the situation calls for it.

Economy Good in Britain Despite Figures on Trade

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home goes to the election saying economy has seldom if ever been in better shape.

Next on the British treasury reports the most lamentable trade figures for any month on record.

Strange as it may seem to a layman, the two statements are compatible. It is precisely because Britain's economy is booming that her balance of payments runs into trouble.

As a major trading nation heavily dependent on imports to stoke the home fires, Britain finds that an advance on the domestic front almost inevitably leads to crisis on external account.

In a period of industrial expansion, such as the country is experiencing now, imports soar.

The index of industrial production for November, 1963, stood at 123, an increase of seven points over the November, 1962, figure of 116.

The result, disclosed in the latest treasury figures issued Tuesday, is that the excess of imports over exports leaped by £36,000,000 ($100,000,000) in January, bringing the total trade gap to £120,000,000 ($360,000,000).

The adverse figures, casting shadows before them, were probably responsible for the welter of weekend reports about a looming financial crisis.

This alarmist mood does not seem to be shared by the treasury, which is determined to avoid the old stop-go pattern that has seen crisis, or threats or crisis, follow in the wake of nearly every expansionist move in recent years.

The hope is for sustained economic growth, without upheaval. On the external front, the broad strategy is made easier by moves over the last few years to increase international monetary co - operation. Buttressed by guarantees of currency support in event of emergency, Britain can engage in balance - of - payments brinkmanship with greater confidence.

MAY RAISE TAXES

At home, Chancellor of the Exchequer Reginald Maudling seeks to maintain equilibrium by increased economic planning, through such organizations as the National Economic Development Council, and by restraining industrial costs, essentially incomes.

The strain on the balance of payments comes at a delicate time in the year, that the chancellor's April 14 budget may well be restrictionist rather than neutral, possibly with some increase in taxes to restrain demand.

With the election timetable getting steadily tighter, the prime minister will find it hard to agree to a really unpopular budget.

Board Takes No Action On Request for Oral French

The Belleville Public School Board will take no positive action toward inclusion of oral French instruction as part of the school's curriculum until the reasons for the absence of such a program and areas and methods are clarified by the Ontario Department of Education.

This was the decision reached by the board at its meeting following a request from the Avondale Home and School Association that oral French be made part of the regular school studies. Mrs. W. L. McDougall was spokesman for the group of women representing the school association.

Minutes of the delegations were advised that the board would consider their request, but that the board's final positive action until the matter was clarified by the Department.

School enrolments continue to rise, according to the report for Dr. C. O. Stanley, superintendent and chief inspector. Enrolment at the end of January was 6,400 as against 6,200 in the same month last year. School attendance for the month was 94.2 per cent — unusually high for the time of year.

RATE INCREASED

The Board agreed to a revision of the agreement with the Children's Aid Society to provide attendance officers. Under the new rate the averaged about $4.15 per hour of service, the minimum being increased by 20 cents per hour.

Minor adjustments in allowances for the various grades, maximum salaries for teachers were approved by the Board following a report from the staff relations committee by its chairman, Dr. J. Russell Scott.

Dr. Scott reported complete agreement between his committee and staff representatives and commended teaching staff representatives for their attitude and procedures in negotiations.

Maximum salary increases approved were as follows: Standard 1 from $5,150 to $5,200; Standard 2 from $5,900 to $6,000; Standard 3 from $6,500 to $6,600; Standard 4 $7,000 to $7,200.

Schools of 7 or fewer classrooms, $8,000 to $8,000; 8 to 11 classrooms $8,700 to $8,200; 13 classrooms and over, $9,000 to $9,200. Additional allowance for Bachelor's and Master's degree in education remain unchanged at $200 and $400 respectively.

The board accepted the report of property chairman W. A. VanTasel regarding numerous suggested repairs and improvements for the year 1964. Among other items were filling and grading of the Academy Corners' Sir Winston Churchill site and improvement of ventilation in the boiler room at Queen Elizabeth School.

A matter of grave concern to the Board over several months appeared to reach settlement when trustee Mac Smith reported on a visit to the office of the Ontario Municipal Board, Toronto.

Verbal acquiescence had been given by the chairman of the OMB that financing in the amount of $270,000 for a new school building in west Belleville would be approved. The Board took appropriate action to appoint Watson and Wigand as architects and to instruct that firm to proceed with all expedition possible.

Accounts totalling $85,133.00 included the January payroll at $64,609.73. were approved. The auditor's report for 1963 showing that all transactions of the Board had been within its powers listing total expenditures at $1,157,970.94 with surplus of $17,008.55.

A request of the Prince of Wales Home and School Association for assistance in purchasing an encyclopedia for the school was approved. A donation of $50.00 was given.

The request of St. Youth for Christ to make use of a school assembly room on Saturday evenings, starting in month, was denied, but instruction was given that the Board's policies regarding building usage be brought under review.

ALFRETON, England (CP)—A 13-inch doll of a miner, complete with helmet and safety boots is being sent 13,000 miles from this Derbyshire town to a doll competition in New South Wales, Australia. The doll maker, a member of a local club, said the miner was chosen because it is typical of the area.

A.N.A.F. Weekly News

It was with deep regret that the members heard of the passing of a valued and well liked comrade, Arthur Franklin. He had been confined to his bed for several months but he always had a cheerful word for any of the comrades who visited him. The president and members extend their sincere sympathies to his family in their loss.

While the chairman reports another comrade is in Belleville General, Bert Herrington, Room 237 and Comrade Ab Braston is still in the Mary Anne Ward. "Wargy" O'Brien is still taking treatment in the Kingston General. All comrades have been visited and looked after.

The membership chairman reports that everything is going alright although a little slow and reminds the comrades that we still have 30 days more. We hopes to be able to be on hand Saturday but the stewards will be pleased to welcome anyone any day in the week.

The well attended auditorium approximately fifty couples tripped the light fantastic to the rhythm of Mac Wheatley's Orchestra and certainly all had a very good time. It is hoped that a dance similar will be arranged by the end of the month so watch for the announcement.

The sports chairman wishes to announce that another of those popular mixed darts tournaments will be held Saturday, starting at noon. Same good prizes and lots of fun for everyone. Remember everyone is welcome to try out their skill. Tom Cooley the 1963 darts champion and Comrade Marion Dracup the Ladies' champion stand ready to take on all comers.

JIM CRETNEY HONORED

Saturday afternoon, there was a very pleasant interlude when immediate Past President Jim Brown called upon President J. E. Boyle to make a birthday presentation to the oldest active member in the club. A comrade who was amongst the first dozen to become a member when the Club was first organized in 1932. He has been a valued and willing worker, having been elected to the executive a good number of times. The president called upon him to cut a huge old blackmith, Jim Cretney to rise and take a bow.

The comrades gave him a rousing three cheers and a tiger for good measure, "For he's a jolly good fellow." After presenting him with his gift, Comrade Boyle then gave him a big birthday card with about a hundred of the friends' and comrades' signatures while Hank Ford carried in a big birthday cake with ninety candles on it as could be placed. It was James' 87th birthday and he looks good for many more. Comrade Boyle and was heartily congratulated by all the comrades.

Another interesting item for RCRs: Feb. 27th is Paardeberg Day and is the 64th anniversary of the Canadian Corps' engagement in a major conflict outside Canada in which a Canadian unit took part and won a battle honor for its colors. The 2nd Battalion, Royal Canadian Regiment, a pre-dawn attack, over whelmed the position at Paardeberg Drift from which General Kronje had defied the British Forces, of which the Canadians were a part for ten days. The British felt that this victory avenged their defeat exactly seventeen years before at Majuba Hill.

Medical Team Lands in Copter Near Hospital

A flying medical team from the RCAF Search and Rescue Squad in Trenton landed near the Belleville General Hospital this morning.

A spokesman at the hospital said they were checking for places to land, near the hospital, presumably in case of emergency.

A First Street resident telephoned this newspaper office and said it was unbelievable how the pilot landed the RCAF helicopter in such a small area without touching any of the telephone or power lines behind Odon Jewellery opposite the hospital.

The aircraft carried a doctor and two nurses.

New Auto Plates Moving Slowly Says Issuer

With well over three thousand licence plates still to be sold, Belleville motorists are going to be lining up before February 28th as they seek to get their 1964 markers and beat the deadline.

Local licence issuer George Olsen said today that between 20 and 25 per cent of new auto plates in the Belleville area were still unsold. The deadline is February 28th and there will be no extension.

Mr. Olsen said that to assist motorists this Saturday his office would stay open past the normal 12 o'clock noon closing hour and would sell licences until 2.00 o'clock.

Last year's operators' licences also run out on February 28th, Mr. Olsen said that the Department of Transport has now authorized local licence issuers to validate driver licence applications even though the driver has written such of misspelled names, or wrong date of birth. In such cases the department will mail a corrected licence to drivers.

Truck and commercial licences for 1964 go on sale March 2nd Mr. Olsen stated.

SARNIA (CP) — An Ontario Supreme Court jury awarded $88,971 Tuesday to a Sarnia man and his 27-year-old wife who sued a police constable for false arrest and using "grossly excessive force."

The damages were against Sarnia constable Richard Gunn. Plaintiffs were George and Ann Williams and his son William, who suffered brain damage during the April 27, 1963, incident that left him with the mental age of an eight-year-old.

The jury ruled that Const. Gunn caused the injuries, that he could have made the arrest with less violence and that he used more force than was reasonable and necessary.

TAKEN TO HOSPITAL

The younger Williams was taken unconscious to hospital after police, checking a report in at a neighboring apartment, found a party in progress in the Williams apartment.

A fight involving other men, a woman and six police officers occurred after Williams was told William Williams he was under arrest.

Testimony revealed that Gunn struck Williams two blows with his nightstick when he entered the Williams apartment.

Mr. Justice Haines told the jury that a policeman "has no more right" than an ordinary citizen to use force, and that a citizen has the right to resist illegal arrest.

The judge also observed that the plaintiff had told Const. Gunn he could not enter the apartment without a warrant, but Gunn did so.

Investment Dealer Critical Of Reluctance of Canadians To Invest in Their Country

The reluctance of Canadians to invest in Canada while habitually criticizing Americans for doing so, was slammed by an investment dealer here last night.

Investors in the United States have been quicker off the ball to realize Canada's potentialities, John G. Thompson, Investment Dealers Association's Kingston representative told the Belleville Sales and Ad Club.

"They stole the opportunity right from under our noses. Right now some of us are beginning this fact . . . but nobody seems to be prepared to put their money where their mouth is, so to speak.

The charmless of the country's investors is heavily understored by the huge amount of money used to purchase insurance or real estate' — plus the rich reserved of cash lying idle in bank accounts.

Feeding this complex are the speculations in which fortunes are won — or lost — and the ceaseless outpouring of unsolicited promotion from Bay Street "bucketshops."

"You would be surprised how many people fall for this type of promotion and — putting money in — lose most of it."

This sours the victims on investment in general 'and "the end result is that Canadians tend to be very, very conservative."

MUST BE PATIENT

Mr. Thompson gave the clubbers one good tip: The essence of sound investment is patience, he intimated.

"Too many people are anxious to get rich quick," he said.

"The investor has to be very patient. All too often he is in a big hurry and more often than not he ends up speculating rather than investing."

"Don't gamble or even speculate unless you are prepared to accept a risk and unless you're prepared to lose a certain amount of your capital — and seriously investigate before you invest," he cautioned.

The investor must also ensure he is given proper service when dealing with an investment dealer, Mr. Thompson emphasized.

When you walk into an investment dealers' and you have a $1,000 to invest, make sure you get the service $1,000 deserves. A thousand dollars may be peanuts to the dealer but it's a lot of money to you."

Most dealers are "only too happy" to aid and advise a client.

However, Mr. Thompson stressed, "make sure you get sufficient information to make an intelligent decision — and don't be afraid to ask a dealer for advice.

Mrs. William Steenburg of Trenton presented the Steenburg Trophy to a Kingston rink, winners of a two-day ladies' bonspiel at Trenton, yesterday. The rink was skipped by Mrs. C. A. Miller, with Mrs. "Sparky" Cole as vice, Mrs. Dorothy Vince as second and Mrs. Kathleen McFie, lead.

Kiwanians Told Of Plans for Centennial

A large number of Kiwanians gathered at the Kiwanis Centre on Tuesday for their regular weekly meeting at which time they were addressed by Mr. R. Reid who discussed the community planning for Canada's Centenial Celebration.

Mr. Greig's address was received in Monday's edition of The Ontario Intelligencer following a meeting of the Community Planning Association of Canada's Belleville branch.

Mr. Greig teaches art and English at Moira Secondary High School.

Federal Labor Code Promised In Throne Speech

OTTAWA (CP)—The government plans to establish a federal labor code setting out minimum wages, maximum working hours and holiday pay for about 600,000 workers in industries under federal jurisdiction.

This was announced Tuesday in the speech from the throne read at the opening of Parliament.

No details were given in the speech but the Liberal government is on record in favor of:

1. A national minimum wage of $1.25 an hour.

2. A maximum normal work week of 40 hours.

3. Two weeks' vacation with pay after one year on the job.

4. Seven statutory holidays with pay each year.

"A measure will be placed before you to establish minimum wages, maximum working hours, statutory holidays and other labor standards for work under federal jurisdiction," said the speech.

WILL MEET FIRST

Indications are the government will not proceed with its labor code legislation until after Labor Minister MacEachen has obtained the views of the provincial labor ministers at a meeting here March 9-10.

The provincial ministers are deeply involved in any federal labor standards because most workers—more than 6,000,000—are in industries within their sphere of responsibilities.

Since most provinces have various laws dealing with minimum wages and working conditions, the federal labor code would likely create pressure on them to raise their standards to the national level.

For this reason, the federal code could have wider impact than merely covering some 500,000 workers in the federal field —those employed on the railways, airlines, shipping lines, on the waterfront, in banks, radio and TV stations and grain elevators.

Parks Board Wants Fountain As Project

TRENTON — The Trenton Parks Board will suggest to town council that a display fountain be built in Fraser Park as a 1967 Centennial Project. This was decided at a board meeting last night.

The board is also looking in the Fraser Park area for a site on which to build an equipment shed. Two sites in the same area have proved to be unsuitable in one way or another.

Board members will re-examine their decision not to provide a park in the Weamount Park area. As Hanna Park is adjacent to the housing development, it was at first thought that there would be too many parks. But Westmount Park residents would rather have a park there than additional housing.

Second Offence Brings 14 Days in Jail

TRENTON — In magistrate's court at Trenton yesterday, Magistrate R.E.D. Baker of Kingston took a dim view when Joseph Valchar of Stirling, convicted of impaired driving, told him that the car involved in the case had been sold. The car had been posted as bond.

"I hope you didn't sell it to a friend", said the magistrate.

Valchar will spend 14 days in jail and have its licence suspended for one year. It was a second offence.

Plan Attempt To Rescue Pair

TRENTON, Ont. (CP)—An attempt to rescue two men who camped Monday night alongside their crippled helicopter on the shore of James Bay was to be attempted today.

Jim Foster and Aubrey Ulling, both 35 and both from Vancouver, were sighted late Monday after a searching RCAF aircraft picked up a distress signal from the ground.

Rugged terrain made it impossible for the RCAF Albatross to land. A helicopter owned by Okanagan Helicopters Limited of Vancouver under contract to the RCAF at Winnisk, 250 miles north of Fort Albany on the west coast of James Bay, will attempt the rescue.

Boot Is Used To Track Down Theft Suspect

TRENTON — While questioning Russell Weber of Trenton about the theft of a transistor radio on Jan. 31, Constable Sidney Vickers of the Trenton police noticed that the man was wearing a distinctive type of boot with hobnailed heels.

The heels clicked with the constable. Borrowing a boot he proceeded to Rain Park in east Trenton, where a stolen car had been found abandoned the night before. The boot fitted tracks leading from the place the car had been parked to the nearby Spur service station, the scene of an attempted break-in on the previous night.

Confronted with the evidence, Weldon confessed to being involved in the theft of the car, to attempting with another man, Carl Buck, to break into the service station and to the theft of the radio.

In magistrate's court at Trenton yesterday, Weldon was remanded for one week for sentencing on the three charges by Magistrate P. E. D. Baker of Kingston. He will appear in Picton court today, charged with two break-ins in Prince Edward County.

Kingston Rink Repeats in Women's Spiel

TRENTON — In 1960, a rink skipped by Mrs. C. A. (Fran) Miller of the Kingston Curling Club won the trophy donated that year by Mr. and Mrs. William Steenburg of the Trenton club. Mrs. Millar's vice was Mrs. Carrie "Sparky" Colebert second Mrs. Walsh and lead, Mrs. Kathleen McFie.

Yesterday, a two-day women's invitation bonspiel wound up at the Trenton club . . . and the winner . . . a rink skipped by Mrs. C. A Miller of the Kingston Curling Club, with Mrs. Cole as vice, and Mrs. McFie as lead. Mrs. Walsh had been replaced by Mrs. Dorothy Vince as second, however.

Runner up for the Steenburg trophy was a Trenton club skipped by Mr. Mary Wilson, with Mrs. Audrey Bell as vice, Mrs. Audrey Herrington second and Mrs. Marion Duncan, lead.

Another coincidence . . . for a time it looked as if an RCAF rink skipped by Mrs. J. B. Miller might take trophy honors.

Convener for the bonspiel was Mrs. L. H. Bearne. A Monday night dinner at which the Trenton members went all out to entertain the visiting ladies, was convened by Mrs. Barbara Lidster as was the afternoon tea which followed the winding up of the bonspiel.

$500 Damage To Transport, Goes Off Road

TRENTON — About $500 damage was caused early this morning when the driver of a McCallum Car-Transport lost control of his vehicle on highway 401 about five miles west of Trenton.

The vehicle overed off the road and came to rest in the median. However, no damage was caused to the vehicles being trasported by the van.

CAR BURNS UP

Brighton firemen received a call around 9.00 a.m. to proceed to an automobile fire on No. 2 Highway near Smithfield.

However, firemen were unable to save the 1956 Chevrolet owned and driven by James Postma of R. R. 2, Brighton. It is believed the fire started in the wiring of the automobile.

Constable John Martin of the Brighton OPP office investigated.

Russia Would Let Cypriots Settle Their Feud Alone

By WILLIAM N. OATES

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Soviet Union was expected to tell the UN Security Council today it should guarantee the independence and territorial integrity of Cyprus and then leave Greek-and Turkish Cypriots alone to settle their feud.

Soviet Chief Delegate Nikolai T. Fedorenko told reporters Tuesday night the Soviet line is "hands off Cyprus." He said his government agrees with President Makarios of Cyprus, leader of the Greek -Cypriots, that a council guarantee will make an international peace force on the island unnecessary.

Fedorenko and Chief U.S. Delegate Adlai E. Stevenson were scheduled to speak this afternoon at the council's third meeting on the Cyprus crisis.

UN Secretary - General U Thant was reported making progress toward getting agreement from Cyprus, Britain, Greece and Turkey on a plan he has put forward privately to deal with the crisis.

Thant's plan calls for an international force to prevent a resumption of the fighting, an impartial mediator to seek a settlement between the island's Greek-Cypriot majority and its Turkish-Cypriot minority, and a Security Council resolution guaranteeing Cyprus' independence and territorial integrity.

NOT HEARD FROM

Diplomatic sources said Turkey has not commented on the proposed council guarantee, which Makarios wants as a block to any reinforcement of Turkey's small garrison on the island.

Thant proposed that the international force be supplied by British Commonwealth members — Britain is a member of the Commonwealth — and some non-aligned nations. The diplomatic sources said despite Makarios' earlier statement that a Security Council guarantee would strengthen his hand unnecessary, the Cypriot government was generally satisfied with Thant's plan for a peace force linked to the Security Council through him.

GREEK IN CLASH

Foreign Minister Spyros Kyprianou of Cyprus, a Greek-Cypriot, clashed in the council debate Tuesday with the British delegate, Sir Patrick Dean, and Ambassador Hasan Menemencioglu of Turkey over the 1960 treaty in which Britain, Greece and Turkey guaranteed the independence and security of Cyprus.

Dean said the council should call on all nations to respect the independence and territorial integrity of Cyprus "in accordance with the treaty of guarantee." He specifically cited the treaty clause reserving to Britain, Greece and Turkey the right of unilateral action to enforce the Cypriot constitution and preserve the rights of the two Cypriot communities.

Kyprianou asserted that no country has the right of military action in Cyprus. He charged that Turkey has prepared for such action and seeks the partition of the island.

The Turkish ambassador charged the Greek-Cypriots want an UN resolution they can interpret as setting aside the treaty "so that the final extermination of the Turkish Cypriots might be achieved as a purely internal matter."

Says Bormann Evil Influence Behind Hitler

LIMBURG (Reuters)—A former Nazi official, accused of at least 73,000 murders under Hitler's euthanasia (mercy killing) program, today attributed the evils of the Nazi leader to his deputy, Martin Bormann.

Dr. Hans Hefelmann, 57, said Bormann "became the master of Hitler" and exerted a most evil influence during the Nazi regime.

He said that although Hitler was the fuehrer, the actual Nazi leadership was first in the hands of his deputy, Rudolf Hess, and, after Hess' flight to Britain in 1941, in those of Bormann.

He added that at the moment when Bormann took over, the "horrible" degeneration of the regime began "from this moment on the regime became really criminal though it was not generally recognized at the time, Hefelmann said.

The trial was planned as a spectacular exposure of Hitler's extermination program "unfit to live" but two of the defendants died violently last week and a third escaped abroad earlier.

Monotony Can Kill

Dugald Jamieson of Port Credit died Monday, after his car struck a bridge pier on the median of Highway 401, at the Wallbridge Road. A reporter driving the same highway from Belleville to Trenton that day saw three separate sets of tracks showing where cars had been driven from the road onto the median, and back to the road again. The snow in which the tracks were left had fallen within the two weeks before the accident.

Four cars, then, apparently drove onto the median of that twelve-mile stretch of highway in two weeks. Only three of them drove back onto the highway. At least an equal number, one assumes, left the highway onto the less-dangerous shoulder, because of inattention on the part of the drivers. One good feature of highways such as the 401 is that the driver who drives off the road has a good chance of returning to the pavement safely—unless a bridge pier gets in the way.

But the highway can be killers, because the deadly monotony of a long grind at high speeds tends to lull drivers into a false sense of security—and to sleep.

What can be done about it? Not much, unfortunately. Controlled-access superhighways are required in the modern age, because no other kind of highway can long remain a through route. Trade routes attract businesses and, as any geographer knows, where trade routes of any importance cross there will eventually be a town.

This is the hazard. Two highways cross, so someone builds a gas station at the corner. Then another station is built, a lunch bar, houses for the employees of the gas stations and the lunch bar, a store and so on. Eventually the village demands a reduced speed limit through the area, thus killing the trade routes on which it depends. The choice is between building a never-ending succession of highways —so another is ready before the last is filled— and of building controlled-access highways. And controlled-access highways, because of their nature, tend to put drivers to sleep.

It's partly because of this hazard that service centres are now being built along the 401, at intervals of about fifty miles. Another plan will put rest stops midway between the service centres, in the years to come. Drivers who are used to the long grind of the expressway know that, whether the break is a service centre or a rest stop, breaking a long expressway drive into short hops is the surest way of getting through.

Every Man a Gentleman?

Sydney J. Harris is one of our favorite columnists.

He came a cropper the other day, though.

Mr. Harris said that everybody is a gentleman.

Not in so many words, of course, but that was the only logical conclusion which could be reached from a series of sentences.

Mr. Harris quoted with approval an epigram by Oscar Wilde, who said that a gentleman is a man who is never unintentionally rude.

Mr. Harris praised this remark, quite accurately, for its grasp of the true distinction between intentional and unintentional rudeness. But Mr. Harris makes the error of concluding that, because they differ, unintentional rudeness is not really rudeness at all. "Rudeness is rudeness only when it means to be such," he wrote. It follows that it is impossible for any person to be unintentionally rude. This, according to Mr. Wilde, makes everybody a gentleman, a conclusion which reveals a flaw must exist in this chain of reasoning.

The flaw lies with Mr. Harris, not Mr. Wilde. The unfortunate thing about rudeness, as with many another of our shortcomings, the cutting tongue, the cold heart, the unappreciative soul, is that it is possible for it to be compitely unintentional—but nonetheless cruel for that reason.

We are now living in fascinating times in Quebec. After years of inertia, everything seems to have become possible. Every group obviously wants to take advantage of this unblocking, this acceleration of history, to shape the course of events in accordance with its ideological preoccupations and its interests.

Which is a very legitimate undertaking when methods are restricted to persuasion, but becomes condemnable as soon as there is recourse to terrorism, to violence and to political assassination.—Roger Provost, President of the Quebec Federation of Labor.

Those who would treat politics and morality apart will never understand the one or the other. —Rousseau.

Strictly Personal
Why People Like to Sit In Back Rows

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

"Why don't people take seats in the front rows?" a school superintendent recently asked me just before a lecture. "The teachers are just like the kids: they'd rather crowd in back than fill the first rows."

I had noticed this many times when giving talks, and was pretty prefer to sit up front while watching a movie or play or other such entertainment — but for a lecture, they want to be as far back as possible.

This odd tendency, I think, can be explained as a form of reverse modesty, as a way of avoiding embarrassing the speaker if he is dull or verbose or tries to be funny and fails flat.

Watching a show, we are not looking at characters being themselves but someone else. A lecturer, however, is nobody but himself in his naked essence. There is no director, no producer, no costumer to blame for his failure.

If he knows he is a very poor speaker, the people sitting in the front rows (usually the only ones to see) feel obliged to hide failure in their expressions and postures. They yawn or whisper or scribble notes, simply act classy-eyed with ennui. And he can feel this like a slap in the face.

The refusal to sit in front is a display of the tribal sense of delicacy; we are all embarrassingly want to shame anyone who is performing badly in his own person. That is why a man sitting in a darkened hall is much more comfortable than one in a lighted auditorium. We can relieve displeasure without discourtesy.

Actually, to a trained performer, even dull audiences conceal the mood and responsiveness of the audience. An actor can "smell" the reaction of any audience a few minutes after his appearance on the stage. He knows when they are bored, when they are with him, when they are ready to make others feel ashamed. In order to avoid this possibility, we remove ourselves as far as we decently can from the orbit of an unknown speaker who might make a spectacle of himself, and he is known to be good, of course, everyone wants as close a seat as possible.

Stamps Do Job; Looks? Who Cares?

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

Bad stamps, anyway!

All this talk by K. G. M. Rose about poor stamps! The stamps now on sale are doing a job of getting the mail through on time, and as much as any of his "fancy" stamps would. Let me assure the readers that they need have no fear. The present issues of all denominations of stamps, plain or fancy, are on the job and doing well.

As for our poor coinage, the only fault I will venture can find is that any coinage is too hard to come by. Any half-dollar we get, in change, is not shaped according to K Ross' opinion, will still buy us a quarter's worth of anything on the market.

Ted Schwab.

Crowded Area

The 900,000 people in the Lower Fraser Valley, from Hope to the sea, are running out of land.

Our 800 square miles of usable dirt are more crowded than Holland, the most densely populated country in Europe. What are we going to do about it during the next 36 years, by which time it is estimated we will have 2.5 million human beings on the same acreage?

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Total estimated expenditures for county and suburban roads for 1944 is $95,000 according to the report submitted to county council by the Roads and Bridges Committee. The report was submitted by the committee chairman, Reeve Fred J. Wilson and recommended an expenditure of $5,000 on suburban road system this year. If passed by the Department of Highways the total above expenditure would require a tax rate of slightly under 2.5 mills.

Share of the City of Belleville for the estimated suburban road expenditure would be $1,250 which, with the 25 per cent share of the county and the Department, would be of 50 per cent, would raise the necessary amount.

Marmalade Queen's Jam

Regina Leader-Post

Marmalade, that delectable breakfast jam, usually is identified as one of Scotland's numerous gifts to the world although its origin is something of a mystery.

One story has it that on an occasion when Mary, Queen of Scots, felt indisposed, one of her maids or attendants boiled oranges and sugar to make a dessert that would appeal to a jaded appetite. The "marmalade" is supposed to have come from the French words, "Marie, malade."

Another story, with a far more practical turn, is that a Dundee importer found himself in possession of a cargo of oranges that was not as fresh as it might have been owing to a crossing from Spain that was delayed by storms. Rather than take a complete loss on his oranges, he had them boiled with sugar and packed in small stone jars. The experiment proved to be an instant success and to this firm is flourishing to this day in Dundee.

The quince probably was one of the first fruits from which preserves were made in ancient times. The Latin term for quince is "marmorata" and it is called "marmelo" in Portugal. The Japanese have a native variety of quince called "marumero," so it would appear that there is a connection between the quince and the first marmalade.

Be that as it may. Several firms in Scotland export thousands of jars of marmalade each year; some brands are lighter and sweeter than others, but practically all have a bit of their place beside the oranges and some jams are made from both fruits.

Not too long ago a new brand came on the market and if the tests in France and Germany are any criteria, the demand for it will exhaust the supply.

In the village of Fochabers in Morayshire, the marmalade factory makes its jam in the normal way then packs it in bulk in small earthenware jars. And, with an eye to modern trends and advertising, it is called "Marmalade for Men."

Pop Bottles Used for Milk

Windsor Star

The Minnesota dairy industry is to experiment by putting milk in soft drink bottles and making it available to the public through standard coin operated milk machines. We hope it proves successful.

There is little that is more refreshing than a glass of cold milk (unless it be buttermilk). But it often is not available where one wants a drink, whereas various kinds of pop usually are.

If the Minnesota idea succeeds, and sprouts, it could be started in Japan, the dairy industry. It's a wonder the notions didn't come into someone's head sooner.

Ombudsmen To be Tried

Montreal Gazette

The governments of Nova Scotia and Saskatchewan, in the Throne Speeches last week, announced their intention of establishing the office of Ombudsman. These will be the first Ombudsmen in Canada.

The idea of having Ombudsmen has originated in two facts. First, there is a tendency for (as governments expand the scope of their control over the citizen's life) that the citizen have someone to whom he can appeal, if he has reason to believe he has been unfairly treated. Secondly, the office has been established in the Scandinavian countries and has worked well.

The office of Ombudsman, as it has worked out in Scandinavia is really that of a "public protector." If anyone feels he has been unfairly treated by the administrative actions of ministers, civil servants and all other persons acting in the service of the state", with the exception of judges), he may make his complaint to the Ombudsman, who has the duty and power to investigate.

There are, of course, the cases of frivolous complaints as may be taken. But there are many matters that may affect the citizen's welfare in his dealings with government officials and departments, that do not come within the category of grievances that are matters for legal action. This is particularly true when a person feels himself being settled by the judgments of special tribunals, set up by the government departments concerned.

Neither are these matters suitable for questioning in Parliament. For it is generally ruled that Parliament cannot deal with the day-to-day operations of government departments or services. In any case, once before a Parliamentary Committee, political, with the Opposition seeking its own advantage and the Government trying to defend itself, the one exaggerating and the other minimizing.

The Ombudsman, in addition to be able to take his problem to some official of great independence and authority, who could examine it thoroughly. His report for rectification could then be made public. Because of its parliament concerned, and could also, if necessary, be made public in his report to Parliament.

The Ombudsman, in fact would have far wider and more direct powers of investigation than would be possible for the Opposition in Parliament; for it not infrequently happens that little and wild charges are made on question, has to be satisfied with the answer it gets, and can go no further.

The growing need for the Ombudsman is seen in the fact that Britain has now established the office. Such an appointment has also been recommended at gatherings of Britain's lawyers.

Last September, at the annual conference of the Canadian Bar Association, an Ombudsman was recommended in the federal field. Delivering the address was Prof. W. H. Angus, of the Law Faculty of the University of Alberta.

Said Prof. Angus: "If the present trend continues, and the bonds between the individual and his nails are permitted to pursue whatever tickles their fancy, how long will they be confined to suffer rather serious consequence."

The state and the public are by no means the same thing. The more the public (consciousness of the complexities in its affairs under the management of the state, the more it will be in need of someone to whom it can appeal for protection. Two Canadian provinces have decided that the time has come to set up the office of Ombudsman here. It is a sound precedent, which deserves to be followed by every government in Canada.

To Your Good Health
Hidden Organism Could Cause Persistent Ear Infection

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: For five years I have had a chronic infection in the right ear. Now it has developed in the left.

The doctor says it is most difficult to clear up this sort of thing, but that, with a special culture taken, it may be possible. Is this true? Rather, is there hope — P. N.

Yes, there is hope.

A great majority of canal infections can be cleared up in short order with the antibiotics, as you know.

As you, — or a dermatologist can testify, some infections can become very stubborn indeed.

The infection may be from a breed of germ which resists the antibiotics. It may be a fungus. Or some dermatitis may have developed, perhaps not originally from germs; the rough, irritated skin has been invaded by a new bacterial infection in addition.

This is the sort of trouble that makes dermatologists fret, because you don't get rid of it until the trouble, the old and the new, are solved.

After five years of struggling with this ear infection, you have good reason to agree with your doctor: It is almost impossible to clear up such a condition when it has resisted the treatments which usually are effective in such cases.

A culture should be taken. This means that particles from the infected area are collected, sent to the laboratory, and then allowed to grow in "culture" form, after which studies are made to determine just what organisms are present.

I suspect that it might prove to be a fungus, very probably complicated by the presence of some other organism which has thrown a stowaway for a free ride at your expense.

Dear Dr. Molner: My apartment is over the incinerator in our building, and sometimes smells of fumes and smoke. Could you suggest a test to allay suspicions about carbon monoxide — J. M. S.

Don't try to test it yourself. Call the local health department or a heating and ventilating company.

Dear Dr. Molner: My son, who is 24 years old, has had a bad habit of biting his fingernails for the last five years. It is worsening. This habit, of course, originates in the nervous system. What treatment do you recommend — medical or psychiatric? — Mrs. S. A.

Let me be blunt. If you are worrying about it, which is 24, instead of letting him worry about it; if this is a habit that has been present for five years (since he was 19); if it is, as you say, something that originates in the nervous system, then here is my advice:

Let this man (no longer a boy) go! He may be biting his nails because he wants to get away on his own, but can't.

Or if this habit of biting nails is wrong and he is still a 'child' to you, by his choice but not yours — then turn the whole problem over to a psychiatrist at once.

When a parent is worried about nail-biting in a son of 24, it is a serious situation. Either the son is ill, psychiatrically, or the parent has fallen into a blind error.

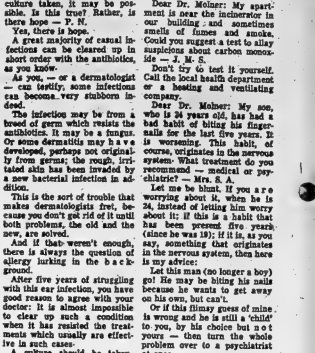
Snow-Shoeing in Montreal

By EDGAR ANDREW COLLARD
In the Montreal Gazette

"As a manly, useful and healthy exercise, snow-shoeing unquestionably stands first among our winter sports, the more to be admired because pluck, perseverance and endurance are necessary qualities to its pursuit."

This was the way the Victorians of 1875 looked upon snow-shoeing. Them it was all hiking and plodding, sport, as unexciting as exercises in a gym. It was vitality in the open, a test of any man's strength, such as would leave the weak of limb and will behind, to trail in disgrace.

• • •



Every snow-shoe club had its "pacesetter," the snow-shoer who led the way. He was a man of little mercy. With a "click, clack, click-clack" his snowshoes would follow each other, swift and steady. And at the end of the line of snow-shoers, would come the "whipper-in." His duty it was to keep the laggards from trailing behind, by urging and driving them on.

Beards would be heavy with frost; breath would dart like steam in the keen air. Soon the big gloves would come off. Even a toque would be pushed back on the forehead. Those who came in last would have their fingers chafed. They would be tossed in a blanket, "until all grinned as best they might. But they would be the gladdest faces that the thumps and jolts were not funny.

• • •

The men of the St. George's Snow-Shoe Club — known as the merry men of St. George's — would gather at the wooden gates of McGill College. Then they would set out for Dix Cote, Tawa Hotel in Lachine. They would make it, even in the teeth of a harsh wind, in one hour and 45 minutes.

At the Ottawa Hotel, Host St.

Denis gave them their dinner and refreshments. After singing in chorus, it would be ten o'clock before they set out for Montreal, with the moon shining pace," in Indian file, under the moon.

When a Saturday some of the snow-shoe clubs would make a cross - country tramp of 25 miles to St. John's; or they might tramp down to the river and cross on the ice, and on to the Iroquois Hotel at St. Hilaire.

• • •

Even the tramps over Mount Royal could not be described as light and easy. There would be the same monotony here. The exhilaration may be felt in an account of such a tramp in 1890:

"Then long line of men, at the head of Peel Street, and the pace-maker leads the way . . . through the snowy woods, they climb up the mountain side, the trees casting weird black shadows on the spotless snow . . . Every man sticking to his work and holding his place in the long line of men, on and on to the Iroquois Hotel at St. Hilaire.

"Now they enter the gloomy pines and are lost to view in the valley. Darkness of shadows the moon cannot penetrate, emerging lower down in sight of the Island Bridge and St. George's Club House. Soon the whole door of the clubhouse is reached. 'All up!' he shouts, and the trampers reply . . .

It was a very picturesque. But it also demanded "pluck, perseverance and endurance."

bassador. But after reporting that she was unsuccessful in attempts to pick up survivors because of heavy seas, the da Vinci continued her Genoa-to-New York voyage when the Pravin showed up.

Without power or operable pumps, the Ambassador floundered helplessly, the coast guard said.

One of the ship's two lifeboats had been smashed by the pounding seas. But the crew also had available two 10-man liferafts which the freighter carried.

SENDS S O S

The Ambassador had sent an SOS at 6:07 a.m. Tuesday, and the order to abandon was responded seven hours later.

The 7,306-ton vessel had radioed four minutes after the order.

The cutter Coos Bay said that upon arrival this morning, the seas were running 25 feet and rising slowly, blown by 40-knot winds. The air temperature was 33 degrees, the sea temperature 45 degrees. Visibility was six miles.

The Ambassador, owned by Hall Brothers Steamship Company Limited of Britain, was en route from Philadelphia to England with a cargo of grain when tragedy struck.

A near-record crowd of some 340 members and potential members welcomed the 1964 president of the Belleville Fish and Game Club last night.

William (Bill) Phillips who succeeds past-president Jack Layton took over the gavel, was in warmly greeted as were his new vice-president Fred Fisher and two re-elected "veterans," secretary Ken Yorke and treasurer Fred Clarke.

Apart from his inaugural remarks, president Phillip supervised a club tribute to retiring president Jack Layton.

President Phillips said he had been assured of the full co-operation of his directors and asked for the help of the membership.

"With both" he said "I can try to follow in the footsteps of those fine presidents who have done such a tremendous job in guiding the destinies of the club before me."

He said he planned no drastic changes but was pleased with the fact the past-president had volunteered his services in an assisting capacity.

Treasurer Fred Clarke said the club had received and disbursed some $2,200 and had operated in 1962 with a $3.00 deficit.

Secretary Yorke outlined the disbursements of the per capita membership of $1.00 saying it cost the club some $1.40-1.50 yearly.

He said draws and other projects had offset the loss but there was the possibility of increase in dues.

FILM IS SHOWN

The feature of the meeting was the showing of a film "Operation Greenhead" with a running commentary by Director George Woodhouse.

"Operation Greenhead" is one of the main projects of the club. Under Director Woodhouse and his capable assistant Mike Follwell, the breeding nesting and raising of mallards has met with fine success.

Various "shots" of the film stressed the importance of the continuous feeding of the birds from the hatcheryraised.

It showed some 300 mallards feeding, swimming and flying, but these, the directors said were only part of those raised by the project.

He said that directly and indirectly the project now has some 1,300 birds on the wing despite early season setbacks in losses to eggs and predators.

He paid tribute to the Foxboro Co-Op and "the fishing boys" for their assistance with feed and said that the club the cost of at least ten tons of mallard sustenance.

ACTIVITIES EXPANDING

He said the activities of "Operation Greenhead" were expanding to other clubs, such as the Lower Trent Valley and Napanee organizations. It also has an interest in a small project at Wooler.

The "project" will require more club assistance very soon since it is mushrooming beyond all early expectations, he pointed out.

"We now own two Canada geese" he said.

William Bittle, Tweed District Lands and Forests Department headquarters official spoke briefly on the migrating and other habits of wildfowl. He also announced there is a possibility of a two-week deer hunting season in the area south of Number 7 Highway.

Three interesting movies on hunting and fishing in the far north and Arctic regions were shown.

The "main prize" of the meeting, an all-expense trip to the Ontario Sportsmen's Show with $50 expense money was won by "guess who?"

panies" on the pensions issue.

Mr. Sopha said federal officials were miffed when Mr. Robarts brought an insurance company actuary to a federal-provincial conference on pensions last year. He said not a little of the Conservative party's election expenses came from insurance companies.

The Liberal member also complained that a civil servant had engaged in a political discussion at a Queen's Park press conference. He was referring to Terrence Coward, chairman of the Ontario pensions committee.

Mr. Sopha said he was "startled, amazed and somewhat hurt" by the conduct of the civil servant. He said newspaper reports of Mr. Coward as saying the Canada Pension Plan was something they were stuck with on their last election platform.

OLIVER CONCERNED

Liberal leader Farquhar Oliver also expressed concern during Mr. Robarts' comments on pensions. He said he was concerned about Mr. Coward's statements. The civil servant had no right to express political opinions.

Said Mr. Robarts: "I very much doubt if anything like this will occur again."

The premier said he had asked Mr. Coward to explain the technical aspects of the pension issue to reporters. The briefing had not been intended to be a press conference.

Replying to the remarks made earlier by Mr. Sopha, Premier Robarts said he had taken Dalton Rudd, associate actuary of the London Life insurance Company to the federal-provincial conference because Mr. Rudd was a member of the pensions committee, even though he wasn't listed as an official delegate to the conference.

Mr. Robarts protested Mr. Sopha's making such a captive of insurance companies "I am nobody's tool," he declared.

H. S. Board Members Face Long List of Business

The regular monthly meeting of the Bay of Quinte District High School Board was held Tuesday evening with members faced with a long list of routine business matters.

The board authorized a committee to be set up to finalize the agreement between the school board and Belleville General Hospital with respect to the registered nursing assistants' course. Students of the course spend two half-days per week at the hospital.

The Children's Aid Society was re-appointed as attendance officer with an agreement to be signed covering fees and other duties. The C.A.S. has worked in the above capacity for several years with full satisfaction on the part of board members.

The Richmond Bus Lines has taken over the J. A. Young school bus from Deseronto and the board yesterday gave its approval for Richmond to continue the route.

TO BUILD SCHOOL

Plans for a fourth new high school in the area will be proceeded with by the board with the planning committee authorized to make preliminary investigation prior to signing of an architect. Plans call for the school to be built on a Marshall Road site in West Belleville, which has already been purchased by the board.

The board teacher-trustee council has been authorized to make suitable arrangements for the honoring of two long term trustees, Arnold C. Campbell and Basil Brooks, who have retired from the board last year.

MAY CHANGE TERMS

Terms of reference for the teacher-trustee council may be changed to allow the body discuss fringe benefits for the teachers. This matter was formerly been discussed by the salary committee but was suggested by the board that in the future discussions should be by the teacher-trustee council.

And finally the advisory vocational committees approved the engagement of a hairdresser to give lectures to the girl occupational classes at the Secondary and Moira Secondary Schools.

Intensive Care Unit Uses Latest Equipment and Care

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary to the Belleville General Hospital was held on February 18th at Education Hall, with President Mrs. F. A. Beaby in the chair. It was announced that the annual Fashion Show will be held on Wednesday October 14th, with McNabb's providing the costumes.

A donation of $100 was authorized to assist the Belleville Nurses Registry in maintaining their valuable service to the community, and it was reported by Mrs. R. E. Wood that her committee has provided thirty-six complete layettes to needy mothers during the year. A new project of the Auxiliary was described to the members, namely the Gift Convenor, which is located in the waiting room at the west end of the ground floor of the hospital, where lovely handknit baby sets and other dainty gift items at reasonable prices can be obtained. Mrs. Herbert Brown reported that her committee is still making great efforts and enjoying financial success at the "Tyne Shop", but that they are always grateful for saleable donations of any kind. Mrs. J. Lennox Smith and her committee have been presenting an average of seventy puppets per month to child patients when they leave the hospital.

GUEST SPEAKER

Miss Doris Smith, Director of Nursing, in introducing the speaker Mrs. Margaret Berry, Assistant Head Nurse in the Intensive Care Unit, outlined the total program of patient care towards which the hospital is working and said the new Intensive Care Unit is the first of five phases, the others being general and surgical care areas, ambulatory unit, long term care approach and hospital - based home care plan.

Mrs. Berry, a Belleville General Hospital graduate, recently completed a special course at Edward G. Sparrow Hospital in Lansing, Michigan, and Miss Marion Gomme, the head nurse, also took an Intensive Care course at St. John's Hospital in Minneapolis, while four other nurses were sent to Toronto to train in this special care technique.

Not only are the patients tended by highly trained personnel, but they are surrounded by the latest and most expensive equipment, including a Cardioverter to monitor heart beats, two Bird respirators, which will breathe for the patient until he is able to breathe for himself, suction apparatus for gastric or stomach suction and naso oro suction and oxygen tents. The unit is under the supervision of a committee headed by Dr. Loynes as chairman, who comes each day to the Unit to assess the condition of the patients. There are nine Hi-lo manual control beds each with a bedside console, wall O2 outlet and two wall suction outlets, but one bed is always kept available in case of sudden emergency. There is no segregation of the sexes but each bed has surrounding screens for privacy. The Unit has been in operation for five weeks with an average of four patients per week.

NO NOISE, RADIOS, FLOWERS OR SMOKING

The goal of everyone connected with the Intensive Care Unit is to get the very ill patient off the danger list as soon as possible and to this end everything planned for his welfare. No noise is permitted, radios are taboo, no flowers or gifts may be sent in and of course there is no smoking on account of the frequent use of oxygen. Two close relatives per patient are permitted ten minute visits on the odd hour both day and night, but only one at a time is admitted for a five minute period. Visitors must obtain permission from the desk on first floor south before entering the Unit. With such highly trained staff, modern equipment and special precautions, a seriously ill patient and his family have every reason to feel confident that he is receiving the best possible treatment.

Mrs. E. H. Hall thanked the speaker for her interesting address, after which refreshments were served by the social committee, Mrs. S. A. Kvarda and Mrs. Benjamin Safe.

Women Won't Get Off Victorian Pedestals Says Sociologist in Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Women haven't made much headway in the higher echelons of the business and professional world because they won't get off their Victorian pedestals, says Dr. Aileen Ross of McGill University.

Addressing a workshop seminar sponsored by the Montreal Business and Professional Women's Club, the sociologist said traditions and values of the Victorian age had placed women in the home, protected from the realities of the tough, competitive world. What's more, many prefer it that way.

She called this pedestal the "most subtle of prisons" and added:

"Many women are loath to leave it. They feel they will be happier if they stick to the older, more traditional roles of women.

"The boy is being shaped at an early age to be competitive. The girl isn't.

"Women are not aggressive in a way that's effective in the business world. They become whiney and tearful. But this is what they learned at home.

"Many married women are spoiled. They decide they want to do something interesting but they have no concept of how much arduous work must go into it, and they have no idea of putting in the amount of work required."

BARRED FROM CLIQUES

Another reason why women don't advance to executive positions in business, Dr. Ross said, is their inability to get into men's cliques.

"Top positions not only need skills and knowledge but an ability to tap the grapevine. Men do this sort of thing at their club and on the golf course. But it's extremely difficult for a woman to say to her colleague, 'Come on, let's have a drink.'"

Dr. Ross said her experience leads her to believe that women in Canadian universities still think of a degree in terms of "meeting a young man."

McGill records showed that only 50 per cent of female graduates in medicine practised after graduation—"an absolute waste, especially at a time when university space is at an absolute premium."

Elizabeth Leitch of Toronto, assistant economic adviser to the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, told the seminar she had met "few instances" of discrimination against women in business. She added, however, that this was probably due to the fact that economists were in great demand when she entered the field in the 1940s.

"A good day's work for a good day's pay" is the first principle a woman must learn if she wants to succeed in business, said Miss Leitch, formerly with the federal trade department.

Ann Landers

Big Mouth Gets Big Wheel In Plenty Big Trouble

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS — You are in the newspaper business so maybe you know the answer to this one.

I am an active member of eleven organizations. Anyone who knows me will tell you I work diligently for a long list of worthy causes. I currently hold two presidencies, three chairmanships, and I'm serving on seven boards.

As you know, all organizations appreciate newspaper publicity — especially pictures. The photographer who usually takes pictures of the club women in our city was sent over yesterday to photograph our officers. When he saw me he said, "What, you again?" I replied, "Why don't you just shut your mouth and do your job, young man?"

Well, Ann, you should have seen what I looked like in that newspaper picture. He caught my profile — mouth wide open and my teeth looking like fangs. I believe he tampered with the negative because I do not look like that at all. — DONE IN.

* * *

DEAR DONE — It wasn't the negative, sister, it was the subject. My only suggestion is this: Never bite the hand that photographs you.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — What can I do with a hot-headed, jealous fiance?

I have never given Craig any reason to doubt my faithfulness. Yet he does not trust me and I am a nervous wreck over his accusations and violent outbursts of temper.

If I am five minutes late getting out of the office (he picks me up and drives me home every evening), he wants to know who detained me. Last week Craig twisted my arm and insisted I tell him "everything" when a young fellow helped me carry some boxes to the car. The kid was the errand boy. I was not only hurt but insulted.

I love Craig but I'm afraid of him. He says after we're married he will be sure of me and there will be no reason for jealousy. Do you believe it? — MOLLY.

* * *

DEAR MOLLY — No, I don't believe it. And if you do, you're an idiot. A man who twists your arm during courtship could wring your neck after marriage.

Don't expect marriage to produce a magic cure for what ails this character. It won't happen.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am determined to get this letter in the mail while I'm still steaming. My question: Why are people such thoughtless, inconsiderate, selfish pigs?

This morning I took my child to the dentist. While waiting in the reception room I picked up a brand new magazine and began to read a fascinating article. I turned to page 136 for the continuation and to my disgust I found the bottom half of that page ripped out.

Later I went to the beauty shop. While under the dryer I picked up another magazine. I tried to find the article promoted on the cover. After 10 minutes of frustration I discovered that the entire article had been torn out.

Don't people realize that magazines in such places are purchased for the pleasure of everybody? What sort of people tear out pages from magazines which do not belong to them? Please tell me. — FROTHING.

DEAR FROTHING — You told me . . . "thoughtless, inconsiderate, selfish pigs."

Potato Cheese Souffle For Lent

by Mary Moore

Timid cooks in this assembly that never, attempt to make a souffle can take heart today for I have one for them that is not temperamental. It is given body by the use of instant potato flakes and is good.

This souffle calls for eggs and cheese and milk so is an adequate substitute for meat for a meal for those who are observing Lent.

WEDNESDAY

Dinner Menu

Salmon Loaf; Spanish Sauce; Green Beans; Braised Parsnips; Tossed Greens; Banana Cake (see Monday); Coffee.

POTATO CHEESE SOUFFLE (Serves 5):

1 envelope (3-oz.) instant potato flakes, 1 cup grated old Cheddar cheese (or ¼ cup grated Cheddar and ¾ cup each Romano and Parmesan), 1 teaspoon finely chopped green onion or green onion flakes, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon nutmeg or mace (optional), 3 eggs, yolks and white separated, ¾ cup undiluted evaporated milk.

As the package of instant potato flakes tells you, prepare the potatoes by first bringing to the boil 1½ cups of water with ½ teaspoon of salt. Remove from heat and add ½ cup cold milk. Stir in contents of one package of instant potato flakes until well blended. (This thickens to the consistency of standard mashed potatoes.) Add 1 tablespoon butter.

Into the mashed potatoes stir ½ of the grated cheese and the onion, 1 teaspoon salt (the recipe calls for a teaspoon of salt because the mashed potatoes have ¼ teaspoon in them) and nutmeg or mace, if used. Beat in the egg yolks and evaporated milk. Beat whites until stiff and fold in. Generously butter a large casserole (straight-sided is preferable for a souffle). Sprinkle half of remaining cheese on sides and bottom. Turn in souffle mixture. Sprinkle remaining cheese on top.

Bake in oven at deg. Fahr. for 35 to 40 minutes or until top is golden and crusty. Serve at once, for even this sturdy souffle subsides a little because of its air content.

You will see that this Potato Cheese Souffle makes an inexpensive meatless meat, but if you would like to increase the protein content add another cup of grated cheese to the potato mixture, when you are assembling it.

Women Seek Participation In Politics

COPENHAGEN (Reuters) — Leaders of Denmark's feminist movement are on the march to gain greater participation by women in the country's political life.

The Danish Women's Society confesses its main problem is female inertia rather than masculine opposition to increased women's participation in politics.

To remove the inertia, the society's 14,000 members have worked hard in local groups. At the same time, its national headquarters staged four television programs on the theme "women in a man's society."

In Denmark today almost every government post up to and including that of prime minister is open to women. Few women, however, have aimed that high.

There are 30 women in the 179-seat Parliament and only one woman cabinet minister, Mrs. Bodil Koch, minister ecclesiastic affairs.

Mrs. Koch said, Mrs. Ada Haugsted, says the objective of the feminist drive is "to make the women more active in all sections of our society—participants rather than passive recipients of the benefits of a welfare state."

At present, she says, more women than men vote on the electoral roll but more men than women make use of the right to vote.

A main political objective of the society is to gain the right for married women to make out their own income tax returns.

Another major objective is to convince the government of the need for more and better kindergartens where working women can leave their children.

Speaking Personally

By Gladys Ward

A correspondent writes: "Could you write regarding the necessity of adhering to parliamentary rules and having all minutes READ? Last year I read that it was ignorance of parliamentary procedure which presidents displayed when they said, 'will someone move that the minutes be accepted as read?' or 'we will dispense with the minutes to save time.' Both are incorrect. We have a recording secretary or why write minutes if they aren't going to be read? It grates on my ears to sit in meetings where women who should know better do these things."

I believe this correspondent is right. In a book on how to conduct a meeting I note the following regarding minutes: "If your group is a continuing one, you will want to have a good record of decisions made. Memory is faulty and open to argument; a clear record is not. To accomplish this you must have a secretary, normally a non-voting member of the group, who will take notes of what is decided and record them in a book, providing space at the end for his (or her) signature and that of the chairman. THE MINUTES ARE READ AT THE FOLLOWING MEETING. After any necessary corrections are made, they are adopted as read or as amended, then signed to become a permanent record of the group. Minutes must be dispassionate, recording not what was said, but what was done, thus avoiding perpetuation of any heated discussions or casting a poor light on the efforts of any member of the group. This has been found by trial and error over the centuries of democratic forms of society to be the best policy."

The correspondent is right, but I suppose if the agenda is a lengthy one and something has to be cut, reading of the minutes is probably the only thing the president can dispense with.

* * *

THINGS I WONDER ABOUT:

An enquiry in a question and answer column of a daily newspaper, "How do you get hair spray off a mirror?" What happened? Did someone take those TV commercials seriously and try spraying a mirror with two kinds of hair spray?

A child's shoe lying in the road. What happened? Did a child run home in fright, not caring that he had lost a shoe. Did a child with a sense of mischief or out of pique take off his shoe and throw it from a car window?

An ad on the bulletin board of a supermarket. "Wedding dress, never worn, size 14," and a pen and ink sketch of a full-skirted dress with lace bodice, the kind described any day in the marriage columns of this paper. What happened? Did he change his mind? Did she? Did parents interfere? Did they elope and never use the dress?

A remark overheard on the street: "I feel terrible. If I had any nerve I'd go home and shoot myself." What happened? Did he lose his job? Did he have a fight with his wife? Was he in trouble with the law? Was it a health problem?

A dog lying dead at the edge of the road. Was it a child's pet? Was it following some lad to school? Was it a derelict, homeless and hungry, and seeking someone to give it a pat on the head? Could someone have avoided it by driving just a little slower?

Why people crowd into the back seats at church when the front ones are empty, and when the same people would pay top prices for front seats at a hockey game or at the theatre; is it the old association with the penitents' bench at the front of the church, or in order to make a quick exit?

Women's Institutes

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

MARKORA — The regular monthly meeting of Markora Women's Institute was held on Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. R. E. Neal with 18 members present, four guests and one new member.

Following the usual opening of the meeting by the president, Mrs. George Empey introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Beaby of the Women's Auxiliary of Belleville General Hospital who explained how the organization made its money and how it was used. The many purposes mentioned showed the benefit it was to patients and their waiting friends, one example is the coffee shop and lunch room. Mrs. Casey also of the Auxiliary answered some of the many questions.

Mrs. D. Bailey thanked the speaker and presented her with a small gift.

Plans were completed for the Valentine party for the Senior Citizens which was on Valentine evening.

Mrs. Marie O'Neill and Miss Peggy Vansickle have completed the leadership course in pyhtography and will bring it to the 4-H girls each Saturday beginning February 15th until finished.

The meeting closed and lunch was served by the hostess.

HURT MORE OFTEN

TORONTO (CP) — Married women who work have more accidents than single working women, reports Mrs. Ethel McLellan, director of the Ontario labor department's women's bureau. Of the 8,016 temporarily disabled in 1963, 2,551 were married. All of the five fatally injured were married. Half of all working women are married.

Every Woman Is Insured Against Nepal Widowhood

By RUKMINI DEVI
Canadian Press Correspondent

BOMBAY (CP)—In the Himalayan kingdom of Nepal, where life insurance is practically unknown, every woman is insured against widowhood.

There are few widows in the maharaja - ruled Hindu realm bordering Communist-held Tibet, thanks to a simple religious ceremony which every female child goes through at the age of 10.

Hundreds of girls are currently being "married" to Suvarna Kumar, or Son of Gold, a mythical bridegroom or "husband in the mind," as a Nepalese paper describes him. Mid-February is the mythical marriage season in Nepal.

On a single day, 1,500 small girls were married to the eternal husband. The City of Katmandu, capital of Nepal, and other towns were gay with the music of bands, the ringing of temple bells and processions of elephants bearing the little brides.

All these girls will get real husbands in four to six years. And even if their husbands die, they will not be considered to have become widows. For, they are primarily the wives of Suvarna Kumar who lives forever and ever.

The custom was originally born out of the fear that widows will be ill - treated. With the spread of education, the once-a-year ceremony which every female child goes through at the age of 10.

The devotional portion of the meeting was led by Rose Adams.

The entertainment for this meeting was a contest concerning old western days and conducted by program director, Frank Rood. The most correct answer were achieved by Gordon Lloyd and Gary Wilson, Gordon winning the draw.

Final plans were approved for the club to sponsor a new club in Avonmore charge, in Glengarry county which is now under the direction of a former minister, Rev. Donald Pipe.

A bus is being chartered on March 14th and applications for the extra seats are accepted.

NEW OFFICERS

The officers for 1964, as installed at the January meeting by Mr. David McIntosh, of Belleville, who is chairman of the Men's Club committee are as follows:

Honorary president, Maitland Jackson; immediate past president, Gordon Lloyd; president, Don Southorn; vice-president, Cory Burris; secretary, Harold Parnyhe; treasurer, Albert Fox.

WOMAN CONSUL

Britain's first woman consul was appointed to Havana in 1964. She is Miss Mildred Forrester, 56 at the time of her move.

CONSECON AOTS

The February meeting of the Consecon Ladies AOTS Men's Club was held at the V. and W. hall with the ladies' group from Salem serving a potluck supper.

The supper period was kept in a jolly mood with president Don Southorn in the chair, assisted by sergeant-at-arms, Cecil Rakely.

Successful Living

Confined to Home, Must Draw on Inner Resources

DEAR DORIS I am almost a shut-in. I only go outdoors when it is warm and I can only stay up for one hour. I find the time very lonely. I am living with my mother. She is 60 and I am 40.

I have been in hospital and Sanatorium ten times. I am unable to work and I don't know what to do to pass away the time. I would like to be able to correspond with some sensible person, preferably female. — VICTOR.

DORIS CLARE

DEAR VICTOR—I know a woman of 47 who is confined to her home with Buerger's disease. Her bubbling sense of humor draws everyone to her. How about that?

It's not easy to be bottled up, but you are not dead yet! Anybody want Victor's address?

* * *

DEAR DORIS — I'm planning a birthday party for my three year-old daughter, with boys and girls ages three and four. I'm really looking forward to this party and I would appreciate it if you would give me some ideas on games for the children to play. — MOTHER OF ONE.

* * *

DEAR MOTHER — The trick is to keep things moving. Little tots won't concentrate for long on any one game. Try:

Hunting for Peanuts: This means hiding peanuts (in their shells) behind every table leg, curtain, doorstop. It's amazing how little can successfully screen a peanut from view. Youngsters coming up with largest haul gets a lollipop.

Balloons are good for gaiety. Each child has his own inflated balloon to bat around and keep in the air.

Blowing Bubbles. Yes, it's messy, but if each little guest has a bubble pipe and blows his own they'll glory in it for ages — well, say 15 minutes!

Then there's Coloring. When they are all breathless, this'll slow 'em down. Pass out the coloring books and crayons for some original art work. And let them each take his home. Dandy loot!

* * *

DEAR DORIS — What I would like to know is, how old do you have to be to leave home? Sometimes I don't get along with my father, and my girl friends don't like him too much either. I am 15.

Any time my girl friends phone he's always asking questions or closing the phone, telling them I'm not home. He promised me I could go out Friday nights, as I'm not allowed to go out any other time unless I walk out and go anyways. I'm never allowed to talk to a boy or he'll tell him to stay away from me, or other harsh language.

He hardly ever lets me do anything my friends do, which are perfectly all right. Especially the basketball games after school; I'd love to see them but if I'm not home a certain time, he almost raises the roof off the house. Doris, do you think he's being fair to me? — WANTING TO KNOW.

* * *

DEAR WANTING — Now let me ask you something: Do you keep your promises about coming home? Have you made it a habit to "walk out and go anyways?" Has he any reason for thinking you would keep your word about a date?

A girl of 15 may leave home, if she can support herself. But wherever you are, you'll have to be trustworthy. Talk with your mother about what she thinks would be fair.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — To settle an argument, please tell us, where did the saying: "Beware a wolf in sheep's clothing" originate? — JACK AND JILL.

DEAR JACK AND JILL — In an Aesop's fable. The wolf draped himself in a sheepskin and pretended to be one of the flock. Such a one is up to no good!

Old Bathroom Chains Make Fine Jewellery

VANCOUVER (CP) — Those heavy bits of jewelry festooning the lanky actor of the Shakespearean theatre may actually be nuts and bolts or a length of old bathtub chain treated with silver spray.

At least it's likely to be the case when Louise Clennie is in charge. The attractive blonde is wardrobe mistress for the Playhouse Theatre Company's production of Julius Caesar which opened here in January.

Part of her job of carrying out the designer's every whim as to robing the actors, she says she often finds herself prowling hardware and five - and - dime stores, second - hand stores, churches in the process of being demolished, even used car lots.

"Old bathroom chains are wonderful. Some very old ones are quite heavy and patterned—all they need is a little silver spray."

The life of Louise Glennie in the theatre has taken many twists. Her first appearance on stage was as the reeree in a kangaroo boxing act staged in Trail, B.C., before she was 16. At the time she was travelling around British Columbia with two other girls.

MIND WANDERED

Later she danced for Vancouver's Theatre Under the Stars, "usually as Oriental desert girls or a villainess." She worked her way into revues, went east and then to England as an actress.

"But whether I was dancing or acting, I never thought the way a dancer or an actress is supposed to think. When I was dancing I'd be thinking of the emotional quality of each step—dancers are supposed to think of line.

"And an actress usually thinks only of her role. When I was acting I'd be thinking of the production as a whole. I'd see a certain character or scene and wish I could do the costuming.

"Then when you do costumes, you always see a part you wish you had. But it all balances out eventually."

Miss Glennie recalls she got into the costuming end of the theatre while dancing in a show in Connecticut. They were playing a small town and the costumes arrived—untrimmed. Off she went to the local 15-cent store for braid and gee-gaws.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

COURTESY TIPS FOR SHOPPERS

The basic black number that looked so chic and sophisticated on New Year's Eve, probably looks pretty drab at this point, especially in comparison with the new spring styles that are currently creating a rainbow of color on store racks.

Bright yellows, lots of white, muted plaids and off-beat shades of green and red are brightening the brown tweed suit that looked so sprightly at luncheon the fall makes you feel tacky when you're about to wear it for the umpteenth time with a fair share of winter still in the offing.

When the mid-winter doldrums strike, one tried-and-true female antidote is a new dress. It does give one a needed lift, and the marvelous range of colors and fabrics this year seem to give added impetus in rushing the season a little faster than usual.

Since stores are bound to be crowded with shoppers looking for resort wear, as well as morale-boosters for a winter - weary wardrobe, extra care should be taken while trying on clothes, both as a courtesy to the store and to shoppers who come after you. So, to avoid getting suits and dresses badly woman-handled during a shopping spree, here are a few pointers to remember:

Try not to thumb through racks at such a clip that clothes are knocked off hangers. If one should slip through your fingers, be courteous and put it back on its hanger so it won't be trampled underfoot.

PROTECT FROM MAKE-UP

When trying on a dress, be careful not to leave your lipprint in the form of a lipstick smear on the skirt or bodice as you slip it over your head. Either remove lipstick completely (it takes just a second to pot on a fresh coat when you're finished) or grip a piece of tissue between your lips as a protective measure.

Resist wearing a dark pancake that might rub off on the neckline. If you must wear more than a smidgin of powder, make sure make-up is well-blotted — to protect delicate fabrics from stains.

After trying on a dress, put it back on its hanger instead of tossing it over a chair or hanging it from a hook by its neckline. Make sure belts are coupled with the proper dresses, so they won't be lost in the confusion.

If a dress seems too small (go ahead and admit you put on a few pounds over the winter months) don't try to force zippers and buttons fast to try to prove you can still wear a size 10. Something's got to give, and in this case it's wiser and more thoughtful if you let your ego give in before a seam gives out. Try on a 12 instead.

As usual, zippers, despite the change in styles, are still in the most hard-to-reach places. If you have trouble, don't be impatient and try to do the impossible. Wait until your saleswoman pops in to see how you're doing and let her do the zipping for you.

U.C.W. Meeting

VICTORIA U.C.W.

THE GORE — Victoria U.C.W. met on Wednesday evening at the home of Miss Audra Brickman with a good attendance. An interesting program was enjoyed. Plans were made for catering to a Boy Scout banquet on February 24th, in Belleville.

Mrs. Winston Pulver and Miss Margaret Montgomery spent Wednesday and Thursday in Picton attending the Leadership School for the next 4-H Club girls' project on "Clothes Clinics."

Mr. Burton Fox, Wellington, and Mr. Raymond Fox, Toronto, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Will Fox.

Mrs. Bert Hatfield is home from the Belleville Hospital.

Victoria school pupils with their teacher, Miss Blackburn, sponsored a hay ride on Saturday evening. The bit of snow made it possible to take sleighs and some 40 enjoyed the drive. They returned to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Pulver where doughnuts, cocoa and coffee were served and brought to a close a happy evening for both children and parents.

The Canada Pension Plan was introduced last year, and revised in January following consultation with the premiers.

A government source said the government will stake its political life on this modified version of the complex scheme affecting about 8,000,000 people in all provinces except Quebec.

It has been strongly criticized by Ontario Premier Robarts and by insurance firms and other interests operating private pension plans. The plan faces an exhaustive going-over before a Commons committee.

As usual, the throne speech divulged few details of proposed government legislation. But informants indicated the shape of some of the measures.

The railway legislation, following generally the lines of the 1961-62 proposals of the Macpherson royal commission, would ease some of the regulative ties on railways' ability to compete for business.

The Senate retirement age, not specified in the throne speech—would be 75. But it likely would apply only to new appointments to the $15,000-a-year posts in the upper chamber. Present senators were appointed for life.

Senators showed no visible reaction as they heard the news, and a government spokesman indicated the reform measure has a low priority in the legislative program.

The throne speech said the provinces will be consulted before the measure for interest-free loans to university students is introduced — education is the constitutional prerogative of the provinces. The government hopes the plan can start by fall.

Both Mr. Diefenbaker and Gilles Gregoire (Creditiste—Lapointe) raised a question of federal invasion of provincial responsibilities in the government's plan.

There's no intention of taking immediate steps to put a limit on campaign spending in federal elections. But an inquiry will be launched into "the best practicable way" of doing this. Informants said the study might also cover the possibility of financial aid from the federal treasury toward campaign costs.

The throne speech's program of legislation is not the final word. Other measures can be introduced, most notably tax changes in the budget speech which are never announced in advance.

However, there were some notable omissions of programs forecast last session and in the Liberal party's election campaign platform. Among them:

1. The Canada Development Corporation to funnel up to $1,000,000,000 in Canadian savings into industrial growth. Government sources said it's unlikely to come forward this session in view of the expected big build-up of investment funds in the Canada Pension Plan and the shrinkage of inflows of American investment capital.

2. A university scholarship plan for 10,000 scholarships worth $1,000 each annually, and extension of family allowances beyond age 16 for students remaining in school.

3. Revision of the unemployment insurance program as recommended by a Conservative-appointed special committee of inquiry, to put the fund on a sound actuarial basis.

4. Adoption of a new national flag—promised by the Liberals within two years after taking office. The government has 14 months left.

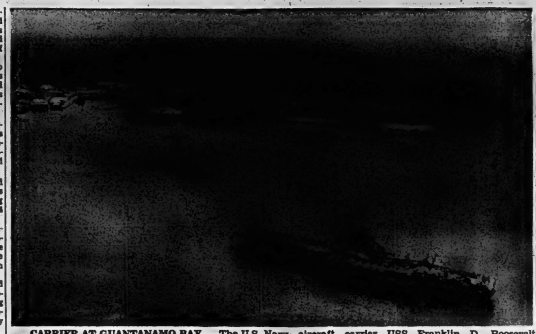
Unlike last session's legislative program with its heavy emphasis on measures to spur the economy, there was little in the new throne speech dealing with economic affairs.

In general terms it promised "a variety of measures" to increase employment, raise living standards and strengthen Canada's primary and secondary industries.

The government will reintroduce legislation held over from last session to spur slum clearance through a $100,000,000 loan fund for municipalities and the extension of National Housing Act mortgages to older homes in areas of urban redevelopment.

Another piece of unfinished business from last session is the plan to set up independent commissions to revise the boundaries by federal electoral constituencies, a job hitherto handled by parliament itself.

Among other old business will be measures to aid Canadian-published magazines — a problem which governments have tried to solve since 1956—and to give equal citizenship rights to all Canadians wherever they were born.



There was no indication of what will go into the proposed new labor code, covering some 500,000 workers under federal jurisdiction. Last year's Liberal election program included a city will include a new system of marketing boards. But further consultation with the provinces is planned before it takes shape.

The throne speech announced legislation on two measures of government reorganization foreshadowed by the cabinet shuffle last January.

—A new post of president of the treasury board, to be taken by Privy Council President George McIlraith, will be set up to oversee government spending and carry out administrative reforms.

—Another new portfolio of minister for rural development—in effect, a second agriculture minister—will be created. Forestry Minister Maurice Sauve is tabbed for the job.

Other, unspecified, measures to aid agriculture are promised. One step may be an increase in the present $27,500 limit on loans by the Farm Credit Corporation.

Secret U. S. Satellite Can Map World

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Air Force has secretly launched into polar orbit a new type of satellite that makes precise mapping of the world possible, a defence department official disclosed Monday.

The satellite was launched from the Pacific missile range Jan. 11 and is performing exceptionally well, said Dr. Albert C. Hall of the defence department office of research and engineering.

Britain Angry As Aid Is Cut Due Cuban Trade

LONDON (Reuters) — British newspapers reacted angrily today to a U.S. decision to cut off small amounts of foreign aid to Britain and other countries trading with Cuba.

The amount of funds involving Britain was only about $5,000. In the case of France the figure was $25,000 and about $20,000 for Yugoslavia.

The two other countries affected by the announcement Tuesday—Spain and Morocco—were told that aid would be frozen at its present limits until the U.S. discovered what steps they were taking to halt trade with Cuba.

Spain receives $31,800,000 in U.S. military assistance, but no economic aid. Military assistance to Morocco is classified, but economic aid amounts to $21,600,000.

In an editorial headed Petty Spite in the Family, The Guardian of Manchester says: "Officially or unofficially, boycott of firms doing business with Cuba is an active element in U.S. policy."

"In this the U.S. government is at odds not merely with Britain but with all her European allies . . ."

NOT RIGHT WAY

Noting the effect of the cutoff on the other nations involved—France, Yugoslavia, Spain and Morocco—as well as on Britain, The Times says:

"The countries on the European and African side of the Atlantic dislike the Castro regime, but they do not believe that cutting off trade is a proper or effective means of getting rid of it."

In Paris, French officials were unable to give details of the "small military aid" which the U.S. announced it would cut. American embassy sources said any military aid to France was "very small" and was in the nature of "leftovers" from earlier aid programs.

These speeches should take up most, if not all, of Thursday. Friday would bear leaders C. Douglas of the New Democrats, Robert Thompson of Social Credit and Real Caouette of the Creditistes.

Mr. Pearson's forces number 129 to 126 opposition members. Thus, it would take a concerted vote by the four opposition parties to fashion a government defeat and no such alliance has been indicated on any topical issue.

PLANS NEW TOWN

ST. MARY CRAY, England (CP)—The council is planning to pull down this ancient village in Kent because of a £5,000,000 plan to build a new skyscraper town in its place. A council spokesman said negotiations were under way with a firm of private developers. Building would start in 1966.

STONE WALLS of the new branch library at Victoria and Farley should be finished by tonight. The taken inside the plastic and plywood hoarding around the job, shows masons Dave Walt and Bill Stapley at work on one corner of the building.

Construction Roundup

By ANDY TURNBULL

UNION CARBIDE

Prestressed concrete roof was put on Union Carbide's new warehouse last week, but the waterproof composition layer will take another week or so, according to Carl Knudsen of White Lumber and Construction. Master contractor Roy Bradshaw has a few blocks still to lay, to bring the walls up around the roof hole to close a hole that was left in the east wall so the crane could get in. The building may be temporarily closed by the end of the week.

BRANCH LIBRARY

Stone walls should be completed by tonight at the new branch library, Victoria and Farley, according to David Walt, Whitley and Walt, Trenton masonry contractors, have been on the job for a week and a half now, hidden from the public, (and shielded from the cold), by plywood-and-plastic hoarding. One plaster in front of the front door has still to be completed, then the masonry may be finished by next week.

Inside, Dick Wickering of Mi-ron-Wiggers planned to pour the floor this morning. Shelves are being pre-fabricated in Trenton and there isn't much else except trim to be completed. The jalousie windows have not yet been delivered, but installation will be simple when they arrive, Wickering says.

BELL TELEPHONE OFFICE

That plastic around the second floor of the new building at Pinnacle and Victoria is part of the preparations for pouring the top slab. Heat will be turned on in the second floor area when the slab is poured, to heat the concrete from the bottom. Superintendent on the job, Charles Farmer, expects to pour tomorrow if the weather is right.

The footing could be closed about a month after the pour, (the supports for the new slab will have to be left in place for at least two weeks or that), and the building might be finished about six weeks after it is closed in. That would be sometime before the middle of May. Exact time table depends heavily on luck in weather and delivery of materials on time.

SMITH TRANSPORT

Rafters went on the offices section yesterday afternoon, and the precast slabs for the roof and floor of the new terminal being built for Smith Transport by the Tatham Co. This means the first floor of the office section for the Bradford firm will be a steel laying block under John Cressy's. More blocks is to be laid later, at the end of the warehouse section and in the basement, but not for a coupe of weeks, at least.

Pyramid Steel Construction Co., of Agincourt, put in the steel slats in the office section yesterday. They were working as subcontractors to Foley Foundry.

SIDNEY COURT

R. W. Solmes is laying block on the walls of the two apartment six-plexes of the Carsen-Lambert Sidney Court development. Most of the two six-plexes are finished and occupied now. Basement blockwork of the third building was to have been finished today.

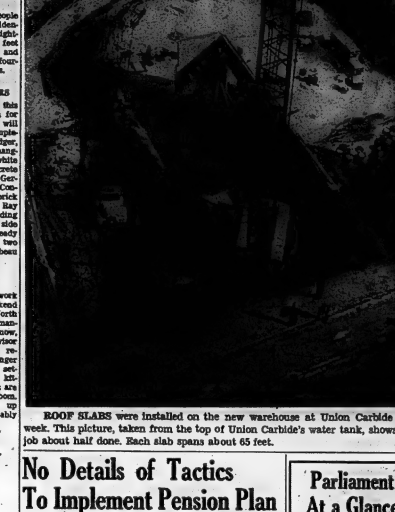
LEO BUCKLEY —

Right beside Sidney Court, Leo Buckley has his second six-plex closed, and is working on insulating lath, and plastering. First one is in the trimming stage.

HOWARD THOMPSON

And another developer is getting into the act. Howard Thompson of Belleville, already the owner of one six-plex on Sidney St., got permits from city hall yesterday to build two more. These two will make a total of eleven six-plexes in the area, and are for three of Thompson's and four each for Buckley and the Carsen-Lambert interests.

NORTH FRONT STREET



The city surveying crew working under instrument man Doc Dalrymple on North Front St. is making a preliminary survey for possible street widening. No decisions have been made, but some people who know expect the widening won't be this year. Right-of-way is only about 60 feet wide most of the way up, and that's not enough for a four-lane road with sidewalks.

RAY HEDGER MOTORS

Work started again this week on the new quarters for Ray Hedger Motors, and will go straight through to completion, according to Ray Hedger. Specifications have been changed. The walls will be of white clay brick instead of concrete block originally planned, Gerald Thibeau of Bradshaw Construction is in charge of brick and block on the job, and Ray Hedger himself is spending most of the time on the side-line site. Building should be ready for the rafters in about two weeks, Hedger and Thibeau agree.

GOODMAN'S MOTEL

Begg and Daigle's work should be done by the weekend at the new motel on North Front St., according to manager Andy Ellis. George Snow, Begg and Daigle's supervisor on the job will probably remain at least a few days longer though. Subcontractors are setting up the coffee shop, kitchens and so on, and others are painting and laying broadloom. Most of the staff is lined up and the swing will probably be within a month.

ROOF SLABS were installed on the new warehouse at Union Carbide last week. This picture, taken from the top of Union Carbide's water tank, shows the job about half done. Each slab spans about 65 feet.

British and American Ships Remove Terrified Residents From Quake-Rocked Island

By GEORGE ARFELD

LISBON (AP) — Earthquake refugees from Sao Jorge began arriving on other islands in the volcanic Azores chain today as a hurriedly assembled rescue fleet pressed an emergency evacuation.

The first 510 islanders taken off Sao Jorge by British and American ships were put ashore on Terceira island 30 miles away. The vessels then headed back to Sao Jorge for more refugees, but heavy seas with 30-foot waves were delaying the operation.

Tremors also were felt Tuesday night on Terceira and elsewhere in the mountainous Azores, a Portuguese possession in the Atlantic 1,000 miles west of Lisbon. The quake waves have wrecked or damaged hundreds of homes on Sao Jorge, but no casualties have been reported.

Thousands of Sao Jorge inhabitants fled to a port at the west end of the island to await removal. They feared the quakes, now in their sixth day, would set off volcanic eruptions that would destroy their island.

Telephone and telegraph communications with Sao Jorge were shaky and reports from the stricken island varied. Some said virtually the entire population of 20,000 had assembled for evacuation; other reports put the number at about 7,000.

BEGIN EVACUATION -

The American freighter Steel Director and the British cable ship Mirror and freighter Patria began the evacuation. Other vessels were speeding to join the flotilla.

"The air is impregnated with sulphur," said one of the first arrivals on Terceira. "In the village of Velas only three homes remain fit for habitation."

Velas, Sao Jorge's chief town, had about 3,000 population.

Governor Teotonio Machado Pires, whose negra de Hersismo district in the central Azores includes the islands of Terceira and Sao Jorge, said the quakes on Sao Jorge, were "getting worse each minute. We're going through a difficult time, a terrible time."

He said he sent troops to the island with food and medicine.

The Portuguese news agency Anl said the tremors on Sao Jorge were the result of a new volcano building up on the ocean floor. Officials at Lisbon University Observatory declined comment on the report.

The quake waves had destroyed at least 47 homes on Sao Jorge and hundreds more were said to be near collapse. But no casualties have been reported.

The Portuguese Lusitania news agency reported the village of Velas was almost completely destroyed. The health department, post office and hospital collapsed, but the patients had earlier been evacuated.

FELT FOR 12 HOURS

Tuesday the tremors were felt for 13 hours in all the islands of the central group—Terceira, Graciosa, Pico, Faial and Sao Jorge.

The quakes occurred as people evacuated from six villages on Sao Jorge from a previous series of quakes were returning home.

Thunderstorms and gale force winds reaching 75 miles an hour followed the tremors.

A spokesman at the U.S. Air Force Base at Lajes, on Terceira island 20 miles away, said the tremors on Sao Jorge "have gradually got worse." The mountainous Azores islands are a Portugese possession in the Atlantic 1,000 miles west of Lisbon.

Portuguese Premier Antonio de Oliveira Salazar called a cabinet meeting in Lisbon to discuss the islanders' plight. A spokesman said emergency aid measures will be taken but did not spell them out.

SIX SHIPS ON WAY

The Arizpa, another American ship, was among six vessels en route to the 35-mile-long island in response to an S O S broadcast by the U.S. Air Force base at Lajes Tuesday. The other rescue ships were of British, Japanese and Norwegian registry.

Two Portuguese navy patrol boats were dispatched to join the hastily assembled rescue fleet, but a navy spokesman said 27-foot waves in the area may delay them considerably.

Sao Jorge's telephone and telegraph communications with Lisbon and other Azores islands were restricted to official calls. Authorities said one man stayed in a badly damaged postal building to transmit over the shaky circuit.

The islanders' terse S O S said: "Important damages. Many victims. Request all navigation available in proximity proceed southern coast this island render assistance."

IT'S OLD STORY

Severe earthquakes and volcanic eruptions have plagued the Azores for centuries. Sheer, crazy coastlines mark the mountainous islands. All the islands except Santa Maria are clearly of volcanic origin.

Two Governments Defeat Motions of Non-Confidence

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two provincial governments had no trouble Tuesday in turning back opposition non - confidence motions.

In Ontario Progressive Conservative government of Premier John Robarts used its top-heavy majority to defeat two motions of non-confidence 73 to 19.

In the Saskatchewan legislature, a non-confidence motion was defeated by a standing vote of 38 to 18 by CCF government supporters.

The New Brunswick legislature opened Tuesday, bringing to seven the number of provincial houses now in session.

Other legislature business:

U.S. — A royal commission set up to inquire into the cost of credit and borrowing money proposed in an interim report Tuesday that the government adopt immediately an unconscionables transactions relief act.

CRITICIZES SPEECH

N.B.—Opposition leader C. B. Sherwood said in a statement that Liberal government promises in the speech from the throne opening the legislature were not worth debating. He accused Liberal Premier Louis J Robichaud of producing a collective of negative proposals.

The speech, read by Lieutenant - Governor J. Leonard O'Brien, promised proposals "in due course" on possible revision of the province's elections act.

Quebec — Unanimous approval in principle was given Tuesday to legislation making fundamental changes in Quebec labor law. Union members would be allowed to have their employer deduct union dues from pay cheques.

Manitoba—Morris Gray (NDP linkster), veteran socialist member of the Manitoba legislature, said Ottawa should recognize Communist China.

SEES ACTION

Canada-Social Welfare Minister A. M. Nicholson called on Dave Bolt (L—Rothern) to apologize for charges made in the legislature last Friday that CCF organizers were demanding campaign funds from government employees and had threatened social aid recipients with loss of assistance cheques if they did not support the CCF.

Alta. — Education Minister A. O. Aalborg opened a broad revision of Alberta's foundation plan for education, which will increase education costs an estimated $12,000,000 next year.

B.C. — Kenneth Kiernan, minister, resources, recreation and conservation minister, announced the government will permit logging of over-mature timber and small-scale mining in provincial parks of over 5,000 acres.

Must Act Now To Stop U.S. Domination

OTTAWA (CP)—The Confederation of National Trade Unions said today effective governmental action must be taken now or it will soon be too late to preserve Canadian independence in the face of "domination" by the United States economy.

The CNTU, representing about 125,000 union members—most of them in Quebec province—presented its annual brief to the federal cabinet.

It said the attitude of many Canadians that Canada should unite with the United States could change if the federal government "clearly states the objectives at stake and agrees to play its role fully."

The governments of the country—federal and provincial—must compensate for the deficiencies of private enterprise and invest huge amounts in the industrial development of the country.

The brief said Canadian consumption is great enough to keep an efficient industry in operation in most cases "provided that the market is not divided up and multiplied by producers to a point where the advantages of mass production disappear and the cost is all."

The CNTU would not oppose changes in anti-combines legislation to facilitate the integration of some enterprises. "provided the consumer is well protected."

While Canada benefited from U.S. prosperity and power, "we cannot accept the price of whatever advantages gained should be the end of our existence as a sovereign country and the loss of our freedom."

Chilly Weather Reduces Crowd and Pageantry at Opening of New Parliament

OTTAWA (CP) —Chill cloudy weather at the Parliament Hill Tuesday reducing the pageantry and crowds traditionally associated with the opening of a new session.

Fewer than 200 spectators stood at the foot of the Peace tower as Governor-General Vanier arrived in a black limousine to be greeted by a guard over his blue general's uniform as protection against a biting north wind and 24-degree temperature.

The 100-man guard of honor formed by the 2nd Battalion of the Canadian Guards from Camp Petawawa, Ont., also were bundled up in great coats over their red uniforms.

Opening ceremonies were shorter than most, lasting 35 minutes. Gen. Vanier read the speech from the throne in 10 minutes. The speech, an outline of the government's legislative program, ran to 1,200 words, the shortest throne speech in many years.

Following a custom set last May, the speech was read alternately in English and French to save time and point up the country's bilingual character. Previously, the whole text was read in English, then again in French.

The Red Senate chamber and the public galleries were packed by 650 official guests in formal dress, the majority of them women.

Touches of color were injected by African diplomats in national costumes, the nine Su-preme Court judges in their scarlet and ermine robes and, inevitably, Mayor Charlotte Whitton in her scarlet cape and black tricorn.

Liberal MP Pauline Jewett broke with fashion tradition, appearing in a bright red wool dress instead of the usual black, brown or navy worn by the Commons' women members at past openings.

Health Minister Jody La-Marsh wore a black dress with a t o p. Mrs. Margaret Konantz (L—Winnipeg South) chose a rich brown boucle afternoon dress with three-quarter-length sleeves. The fourth woman MP, Mrs. Jean Casselman (PC — Grenville-Dundas) was not present.

Mrs. Lester B. Pearson, wife of the prime minister, chose a white gown of re-embroidered lace, with a matching bolero trimmed with white mink.

Mrs. John Diefenbaker, wife of the Opposition leader, wore a slim gown of midnight blue velvet with a diamond brooch at the neckline.

No Details of Tactics To Implement Pension Plan Given in Throne Speech

OTTAWA (CP) — The government announced Tuesday it will go ahead with a comprehensive system of contributory pensions at the new session of Parliament.

The bare announcement in the speech from the throne gave no details of the government's plan, which has been the subject of dispute between Ottawa and Ontario's Premier Robarts in the last week.

A measure will be placed before you to establish a comprehensive system of contributory pensions," the speech said.

The government previously announced that the pensions plan, when introduced, will be referred to a parliamentary committee for detailed study.

A caucus meeting of Liberal MPs and Senators passed a resolution unanimously Monday urging the government to proceed with the Canada Pensions Plan as modified last month following discussions in November at a federal-provincial premiers conference. Prime Minister Pearson said it would be given high priority.

HAS CRITICISM

After receiving from Ottawa the nine - page memorandum covering detailed changes in the original Canada Pensions Plan, Premier Robarts sent Mr. Pearson a letter last week saying the alternations were "little in accord with the representations that we have made."

A key point in the dispute is the use to be made of pension plan funds. Ottawa wants at least half of the money to be invested in federal government securities. Premier Robarts wants 95 per cent available for investment in provincial securities.

Mr. Pearson has reserved comment on the Ontario premier's letter.

It is considered likely the pension plan will be a major point in the eight-day debate on the throne speech which will open Thursday when the prime minister and opposition party leaders speak in the Commons.

The Canada Pensions Plan was originally introduced last July in the Commons by Health Minister Judy LaMarsh. It was to supplement existing old age pensions with monthly payments geared to earnings. The government estimated the plan would cover 80 per cent of Canadians between the ages of 18 and 64.

RELATED TO EARNINGS

Contributions and benefits were to be related to earnings to a ceiling of $4,000 a year. Last month, the government proposed raising the ceiling to $4,500 for the first five years.

The plan envisaged benefits ranging from $31 to $118 a month at age 65, according to earnings. .

The government has said its plan will mesh with existing private pensions, and proposed a formula to limit the earnings-related pension under the government plan.

The Canada Pension Plan was based on a 10-year transition period. The government hoped to have contributions start in 1965 and benefits begin in 1966.

To Stand Trial On Charge of Kidnapping

PRESCOTT, Ont. (CP)—Preliminary hearing of Edward Souci of Prescott, charged with kidnapping a young man and his pregnant, teen-age wife, ended here Tuesday. Trial was set for March 24.

Albert David Spencer, 20 of Prescott, alleges he and his wife Marilyn, 18, were taken to Niagara Falls, Ont., and held there for a week in January to prevent him testifying at another kidnap trial involving Spencer and Smiths Falls hotel owner Charles Austin, 42.

Austin was convicted of forcible confinement of Spencer by Lanark County court at Perth last Thursday and sentenced to 2½ years in penitentiary. Orville Lanning, 22, an accomplice of Austin who helped lock Spencer in a hotel room and later put him aboard a train for Ottawa, received six months in jail.

Spencer told Prescott magistrate's court at Souci's hearing Tuesday that before he was kidnapped the second time he had received two threatening phone calls from Montreal, demanding he withdraw the kidnap charges against Austin. He refused.

Sixteen-Year-Old Chess Player Says Blindness Not a Handicap for Him

By BOB PARKINS

WINNIPEG (CP)— Blindness a handicap? Not unless you let it become one, says a 16-year-old chess player, curler and jack - of - all activities named Harry Monk.

Totally blind, Harry manages to get along as well as most of his fellow students at Silver Heights Collegiate in neighboring St. James. In some cases he outshines his sighted classmates—he achieved a 77 - percent average in Christmas exams after only four months at the school.

Currently his first love is chess, which he first learned three years ago while attending Ontario School for the Blind in Brantford. With other enthusiasts at Silver Heights, he is engaged in a tournament at the twice-weekly noon - hour meetings of the school's chess club.

FINE STUDENT

At the Brantford school for the Blind, where he spent his first 10 school years, Harry was equally active and even better with his studies. He averaged 85-89 per cent and headed his class in grades 8, 9 and 10.

Now in Grade 11 at Silver Heights, he has suffered a drop in his average, but it was not unexpected. "It will take a bit longer for me to adjust," he says.

He is aided in his studies by tape recordings and braille supplies.

Among his other activities is the glee club, now preparing a production of Pirates of Penzance. He takes part in gym classes, is active in the school's United Nations club and is also treasurer of his class.

GETS AROUND

One of his favorite recreations is curling, and every Sunday he plays lead on a rink with other blind curlers on ice donated by the Deer Lodge club.

"Regular curlers are always there to line up our shots," he explains, "but it's still up to us to make them."

Harry did not become totally blind until he was 11 years old, but from his birth in Winnipeg he had had only partial vision. His stay at Brantford was interrupted for visits home in the summer and at Christmas, and, for the last four years, also at Easter.

His father, also named Harry, runs his own electrical contracting business and the youngster helps by answering the telephone in the shop in summer. Also at home are his mother, Jean, 11-year-old sister Pam, and a German shepherd, King.

Harry has learned to live with his handicap and make the most of life. He says "it's better than being deaf."

Canadian-Born Scientist Cited By Pentagon

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (CP) — Dr. Frank T. McClure, a prime example of Canada's brain drain, has received a high Pentagon citation for "inspired leadership" in heading a massive four-year effort to solve the costly problem of rocket shake.

These combustion vibrations, which could cause a missile to go off course or explode, are part of the reason why Republican Senator Barry Goldwater of Arizona, a presidential aspirant, has charged that U.S. missiles are unreliable.

The Pentagon has denied the charge, but McClure, Edmonton - born scientist, estimates that because of uncertainties involved through vibrations in solid rocket motors, the U.S. has had to add hundreds of millions of dollars in extra missiles to make sure that of the total, a certain percentage will be available to meet operational needs.

"PRETTY COMPLICATED"

"Rockets are pretty complicated pieces of equipment and in every new piece of equipment, there is always a question reliability—even in designing a typewriter," he said in an interview. "It is a serious and costly problem, though not as costly as some politicians suggest.

"You take account of the reliability problem by adding to the number of missiles put into operation. Every system has its reliability problem. On the battlefield, you judge that some of the soldiers won't be able to get through the enemy lines and so you add to your forces to take that factor into account."

Comb a 15 % instability in solid-fuel rockets sets up unpredictable and excessive pressures and vibrations in launch vehicles, missiles and boosters. Experts say the violent vibrations can damage the missile and in extreme cases cause the missile to explode.

Heading a cam of about 100 scientists and technicians, the 47-year-old McClure, chairman of the Johns Hopkins University physics research centre, tackled the problem about four years ago.

USED ANALYSIS

"In that time we've made a lot of progress. At one time it was widely held that combustion instability was too complex for analysis. Now we have found it can be analysed and that rational solutions should be possible."

In another four years the problem likely will be completely beaten, added the graduate of the University of Alberta who left Canada because Canadian research jobs were limited. He became a U.S. citizen in 1945.

McClure has won wide recognition in the field of rocket propulsion. President Truman cited him for merit in 1946. Two years ago he got the first invention award given by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. That was for creating the satellite navigation system which formed the basis of the U.S. Navy's world-wide all-weather ship navigation system.

In the latest citation, the defence department referred to combustion instability as "troublesome and described McClure's efforts as imaginative and constructive, leading to outstanding progress in understanding of the problem.

MOVES TO B.C.

VICTORIA (CP) — Dr. S. E. Jensen of Queensville, Ont., has been appointed head of the British Columbia government's consultative psychiatric services in Nanaimo, Health Minister Eric Martin announced Monday. Dr. Jensen, who has been directing a community mental health clinic in Ontario for four years, will take up his position April 1.

Dioramas With a Difference

Artist Treks Bush, Climbs Mountains Pursuing Realism for Museum Displays

By RONALD LEBEL

Not content with oil paint, he uses an unlikely mixture of materials to reproduce outdoor wildlife scenes for the National Museum.

Prairie sagebrush, fibreglass moss, artificial cactus, glass-fibre stuffed animals, pelts, soil samples and shredded nylon fibres are some of the items.

Armed with a camera, binoculars and a sketching pad, Tillenius explores the Arctic, climbs the Rockies or snowshoes through the bush to spy on wildlife in its habitat.

He returns to the museum here and spends about six months producing strikingly realistic three-dimensional exhibits of wild animals and their natural surroundings.

"We look for an angle that will stimulate the imagination," he says. "We set the scene—the time of day, the weather, the time of year. We paint the landscape so that people who know the area will feel they are there again."

LOST RIGHT ARM

The 50-year-old wildlife artist and magazine illustrator from Winnipeg has been under contract to the museum since May, 1962, working on a new mammal hall on the second floor of the old Victoria building.

With a small group of museum experts, he is completing the last of five dioramas showing caribou, dall sheep, moose, grizzly bears and pronghorn antelopes as they would look in the woods or mountains.

Artist Hugh Monahan, also from Winnipeg, completed work last October on three other displays depicting wood buffalo, muskox and polar bears.

Tillenius, whose right arm was amputated at the shoulder after he was injured in a construction accident in 1936, and who took three years learning to paint left - handed, has filled commissions for wildlife paintings from magazines, insurance companies, art galleries and private collectors.

The museum displays consist of glass-fibre shells 16 feet high and 20 feet across set behind plate glass windows and bathed in light. The artist paint the shell to represent a sweeping landscape and the experts build a six - foot - deep foreground around two or three stuffed animals.

PIONEER IN PLASTIC

Several museums in Canada and the United States now use this diorama type of display but Tillenius says the National Museum has pioneered in the use of plastics.

For the grizzly bear exhibit, for example, the museum staff hit on glass fibre as a light-weight material to simulate rock formations in the Rockies.

Moulds of actual rocky were made in latex, then cast with styrofoam. The styrofoam shells were then treated, glued with resin, painted and the sections bolted together.

At the man responsible for the overall design of the display, Tillenius begins by drawing in pencil a sketch one-sixth actual size, working from sketches and photographs made on his trips.

The background glass - fibre shell is covered with plaster and the artist draws an outline in charcoal. The outline is covered with shellac and then the scene is painted in oils.

The animals that go into the diorama are shot by expert marksmen of the museum staff and sent to a taxidermist in upstate New York who stuffs the hides with glass fibre.

The foregrounds are built with absolute authenticity — it took weeks, for example, before the right effect was realized in using white styrofoam and nylon fibres to simulate snow and ice.

But it's all worth it. The exhibits are built to last 25 to 30 years and they're put together in sections so that when the museum moves to a new building in 1967 it will be easy to take them along.

HUNTING DEATHS DROP

TORONTO (CP) — The Department of Lands and Forests reported Monday that hunting fatalities have decreased for the third year in a row. Last year, 15 persons died in 118 hunting accidents. In 1963, 17 died in 126 accidents, and 22 died in 126 accidents the previous year.

Retail Price Maintenance Is British Govt. Problem

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP) — When Sir Alec Douglas-Home said one night "we have grasped the nettle," everyone knew at once he was talking about resale price maintenance.

The Conservative government's plan to abolish resale price maintenance — RPM — has become one of the most-talked-about election year issues in this nation of shopkeepers where most of the small retailers are Tories.

The cabinet is expected to consider the RPM bill this week amid howls of discontent from the hinterland and wrathful attacks on Trade Minister Edward Heath, daddy of the measure.

Many observers are mystified as to why Prime Minister Douglas-Home has allowed the controversial issue to emerge now, filling small storekeepers with fears of cut-throat competition from the chains at a time when the election is not far off.

The theme of one of the premier's speeches indicated the government decided to risk unpopularity among traditional supporters for the sake of long-term benefits to the whole community.

CANADA HAS NONE

RPM was abolished some years ago in the United States and Canada.

"It is no use talking about modernization and sticking to the old ways," Douglas-Home said. "No use praising efficiency and shrinking from automation and competition."

One of Heath's bitterest critics is Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express, which predicts he might be unable to get the RPM measure through Parliament unless Douglas-Home puts off the election as long as possible —until October. The election is generally expected by June.

A spokesman for an RPM coordinating committee, representing trade associations with many thousands of members, told a reporter Monday it would be "monstrous" to make the blanket charge that RPM — in force in Britain for 60 years—is against the public interest.

One source predicted that the government's bill will not seek to condemn RPM in principle but establish a mechanism by which individual cases can be considered and acted upon.

On the other side of the fence, a spokesman for the Consumers' Council said that if inefficient small shopkeepers are squeezed out of business by competition, it will be "all to the good."

But the small storekeeper who provided extra service — and perhaps a good neighborhood location — had nothing to fear. There would always be a place for the merchant who provided an "extra something" in competition with impersonal chains.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

It's a far cry from hockey to Hamlet and the polite applause of a Shakespearian audience to the lusty roar of an arena crowd.

But the rules and regulations of the Canadian branch of the Actors' Guild puts it within the realm of possibility.

As is pretty well known, Bobby Hull and brother Dennis do a brief television commercial act favoring that well known hair tonic as against the "greasy kid stuff."

I do not know how the Chicago Black Hawks treat Bobby over the deal but up around St. Catharines the Junior "A" Hawks get a tremendous wallop ribbing Dennis.

Jack Gatecliffe, St. Kitt's sports editor, says the fans around the eight-club circuit have caught on and urged Dennis to use more of his sponsor's product. Which doesn't bother Dennis but should give his sponsor a pleasant feeling.

It seems that when the Hull boys completed the commercial they had to pay $50 dues to the Actors' Guild according to rules.

However, I do not imagine the brothers feel too badly about that since every time the commercial appears on the video screen, the next mail brings them a cheque.

And the postman brings other mail too. According to Guild operations every member is advised of new stage or television productions and are invited to apply for such parts they think they are fitted for.

"So far," laughed Dennis the other day, "they haven't come up with one to my liking.

The Hulls' commercial income will be steadier now since American networks have taken up the "plug."

But, Gatecliffe points out, the money Dennis is earning through his double career as a "TV star" and a pro-amateur hockey player is a pittance compared to what this talented young musclesan will pick up in the next few years.

He says "nothing is certain in hockey but barring an injury or the bankruptcy of Hawks' owner James D. Norris, Dennis will be the second member of the Point Anne Hulls with the NHL Hawks next season.

Dennis has one more year of junior eligibility but there is no doubt in St. Catharines circles that he will spend it in Chicago rather than St. Kitts. He will definitely remain with the Junior Hawks until the completion of this season.

Junior Hawks coach Ken Campbell is quoted as saying "Tommy Ivan has assured me that Dennis won't go up this year. He may play a couple of games with the big team but we have him locked up here until the end of the season. After that I can make no promises."

While the younger Hull lacks the finesse and polish of brother Bobby (give him time) he makes up for it in the proverbial Hull drive and go.

The youngster definitely found his hockey niche this season. He has developed confidence and a goal-scoring potential. His record at the moment is 34 goals and 46 assists for 97 points in 46 games which gives him node possession of fourth place in the Junior "A" League standing.

And don't forget if the Hull brothers continue their televised careers ,who knows, when their puck-chasing days are over they can turn to stage and screen.

I do not know anything about their dramatic ability or if they have a flair for musical comedy. God forbid they decide to enlist two other brothers, don wigs and come out as the Point Anne Beatles.

Sasky, BC Schoolboy Rinks Unbeaten

By WALTER KREVENCHUK

REGINA (CP) — Four high-school students from Moose Jaw, responding to pressure with precise draws and takeouts, have boosted Saskatchewan into the favorite's post in the Canadian schoolboy curling championships.

Showing unparalleled form in the 11-rink round-robin competition, skipper Bailey and his rink have scored four consecutive victories in the opening rounds of the tournament.

All Saskatchewan's triumphs have been easy—13-4 over Nova Scotia and 13-7 over defending champion Alberta Tuesday, 11-5 over Northern Ontario and 14-6 over Newfoundland Monday.

Only the British Columbia quartet skipped by Jim Mitchell has matched Saskatchewan's victory pace. However, the West Coast rink from Kitimat last failed to display consistent form.

B.C. defeated Ontario 10-4 in the fourth round, Prince Edward Island 10-6 in the third, New Brunswick 11-8 in the second and Quebec 8-4 in the first.

IS FIRST LOSS

Ontario's fourth-round defeat was the first for the Owen Sound foursome led by John Harris- It came after a 16-4 first-round verdict over New Brunswick, a 14-3 second-round decision over Prince Edward Island and a bye in the third round.

Following Saskatchewan, British Columbia and Ontario in the standings are Northern Ontario, Alberta and New Brunswick, all with 2-2 records, Manitoba and Nova Scotia with 1-3, Quebec and Newfoundland with 0-3 and Prince Edward Island with 0-3.

Alberta hit an even keel with an 8-5 win over Quebec in the fourth round and New Brunswick matched strides with a 7-6 squeaker over Northern Ontario. Newfoundland notched its first victory in the round, in which Manitoba had the bye, bouncing Prince Edward Island 13-5 and producing the championship's first six-ender.

British Columbia will retain its perfect record through the fifth draw today, in which it has the bye while Saskatchewan meets Manitoba, Alberta tangles with New Brunswick, Newfoundland tackles Ontario, Nova Scotia plays Quebec and Prince Edward Island looks for its initial win against Northern Ontario.

HAS BYE

Saskatchewan, eight-time winners of the schoolboy crown, drew the bye in the sixth round, which paired B.C. against Newfoundland, Ontario against Northern Ontario, Quebec against Manitoba, Prince Edward Island against Alberta and Nova Scotia against New Brunswick.

Manitoba likely will enter today's competition with only three men. Third Ross Mackenzie was ignored out of action Tuesday with mumps. A doctor said Mackenzie's illness may not be severe and there is a possibility he may return.

However, until he does, lead Doug Lawrence will have to throw four rocks.

Mackenzie was the third competitor to become ill. Earlier skip Doug Scheerschmidt of Alberta and lead Fred Prier of Northern Ontario had bouts with influenza.

Fire Dept. Meets Kingston In Exhibition

The City Fire Department hockey team will play a club called the Kingston No-Stars in an exhibition charity game here Wednesday, February 26th.

The Kingston team, said to be composed of members of the news media of that city is travelling around the district playing exhibition games to help finance a charity project called "Operation Peanies."

According to a fire department spokesman, the gate receipts will be evenly divided. The "smoke-eaters" will give their proceeds to a fund for a proposed new Youth Centre here.

Belch's Win Exhibition

In an exhibition hockey game played at Wellington last night Belch Construction, of the Quinte League, whipped Stinson Construction of the Prince Edward North Shore League 12-3.

Belch scorers were N. Bouter with four, D. Hallan, with three, T. Rowland, with two, and R. Porreous, Woodcock and L. Westfall, with one goal apiece. Pyke with a pair and Dickie with one accounted for the Stinson goals.

Quinte hockey league playoffs commence this Thursday night with all four teams taking part. Game times are at 8.15 and 9.30 but the league did not announce which teams are playing which.

'My Million-Dollar Baby'-Liston Cassius "Composes" For Beatles

MIAMI BEACH (AP)—The Beatles, the mop-haired British rock 'n' roll quartet, visited the training quarters of fellow entertainer Cassius Clay Tuesday but the atmosphere was no more zany than usual.

A few bored fight characters glanced up briefly when the Beatles walked into the shabby gym and a handful of paying customers, who had come to see "The Greatest" work out, showed passing interest.

Clay fights champion Sonny Liston for the heavyweight title next Tuesday.

"Where's Cassius?" the Beatles chorused when they walked in.

Told that he had not arrived, George Harrison of the Beatles said, "well, let's go then."

"Where's the Beatles?" asked Cassius when he strolled in 10 minutes later, one-half hour behind schedule.

Clay was taken into a dressing room where the Beatles had fled to escape the heat and the crowding photographers. When they came out a few minutes later, Clay said he was so pleased about the visit that he would compose a poem on the spot:

"When Sonny Liston picks up the papers and reads

"That the Beatles came to see me,

"He will become so angry that,

"I will knock him out in three."

Clay and the Beatles climbed into the ring, and chatted for a while, but the conversation was drowned out by Willie Pastrano the light heavyweight champion was pounding the light bag near by.

To please the photographers, the Beatles lay down on their backs and Clay stood over them, beating on his chest and holding up a badge which said, "Help stamp out the Beatles." The Beatles left without watching Clay at work.

Meanwhile, Liston predicted he would knock out Clay in three rounds.

Liston said he had not mentioned a fifth-round knockout. That was "managers' talks," he said. "I'd say within three rounds.

"I don't hate Clay," Liston added. "He means a lot to me. He's my 'million dollar baby'."

Wins Rugged Contest 9-4

Picton Defeats Napanee

By JACK FAWKES

PICTON (Staff) — The Picton Intermediates, after starting over two straight defeats at the hands of the Trenton RCAF, made every period a winning one as they dumped the Napanee Pringles by a lopsided 9-4 score in a home and home series in intermediate "B" hockey.

The score was indicative of the play as the Picton lads were all over the hapless Pringles like the proverbial tent. In one way it was strictly no contest as Picton seemed able to score just about whenever they wished.

Playing coach Davy Jones and John "Shaker" Baker each fired a three-goal hat trick, to lead the offensive scoring. They each fired two in the first and added one in the second.

There were only three penalties called in the first forty minutes, but in the last period, sticks and tempers came up, and seven minors were called with Picton taking the odd one.

At the 8.58 mark of the last frame, Keith MacDonald and Norm Parrish, Napanee's goaltender tangled in front of the Pringle net, and the referee's crew could stop them they were at it hammer and tongs. They each got in a few good licks before they were separated. The officials banished them for only two and a half minutes. For leading a helping hand, Toe Marcle was also thumbed for roughing.

Picton opened the scoring in the first period, when Joes walloped in on Parrish to beat him with an unassisted goal. Two minutes later Neil Denard did exactly the same. Then one more minute and it was Jones again, this time Claude Schrader and Baker helped.

Dave Brady fired one for Napanee at the 5.56 mark, but Carl Stacey got that one back four minutes later when he banged home passes from McDonald and Larry Cook.

Brady scored his second of the night for Napanee at the 12.33 mark, and Baker added his second of the night to give Picton a 6-2 edge going into the middle frame.

Napanee fired two quick markers to open the second period, Conway and Don Aylesworth each potting one before the five minute mark had been reached.

Less than 20 seconds after Napanee's goal, Davy Jones went sailing in again and fired his hat trick goal. Quinte Girls Win Title

By REBECCA YEARWOOD

Quinte Secondary School girls captured the Bay of Quinte COSSA "A" senior basketball title last night by defeating BCIVS 49-8.

The Quinte girls plodded through the BCI guards for a 11-3 lead in the first quarter, employing fine ball handling, then increased the lead to 21-4 by half time.

BCIVS attempted to fight back in the third quarter but Quinte's second-string girls added 12 points and held the homesteaders to a pair with short plays.

The winners also held a wide margin in the final quarter, adding 16 points, to win going away.

Quinte's high-scoring forwards, Clause, Miller and Kirkpatrick turned another good game while the entire guard also came up with a strong game.

Last week, Quinte also won two decisive victories, defeating Trenton 30-13 and O.S.D. 67-5.

Quinte Driving Club

Appoints New Officials

A resignation bolt-from-the-blue shattered ruined the 1964 plans of the Quinte Riding and Driving Club.

Four officials named at the annual meeting held a short time ago tendered their resignations en bloc leaving an almost-blank executive.

A special meeting held at Club Canara last night saved the club from suspending seasonal operations. The vacant offices were filled, albeit the new presidents accepted office on a two-months basis.

Resignations read at the meeting were those of club president, the Chief Venus, recording secretary Mrs. Gloria Vance, track official Al Vance and publicity director Ron Isaacs.

Some thirty members attended the night's special meeting. It was well-conducted and "quiet" compared to the fiery argumentative session that marked the annual affair.

Accepting office on a two-months' basis was president Doug Hedger. Other officers named last night are Brenda Hitchie, recording secretary; Mrs. Carol Young, treasurer; Al Casaldi, track official and Bob Barlow, publicity chairman with Lloyd Kellar named assistant.

Mrs. Evelyn Zebedee, named race secretary at the annual meeting with a weekly stipend of $25.00 will continue in that capacity.

The new executive will ad here to original plans of holding sixteen Saturday night meets during the summer.

A was decided to add two "Saturday matinee" meets prior to the scheduled night programs.

It was decided to put on a concerted membership drive while members will concentrate on the sale of tickets for the annual dance.

Plans Huge TV Package

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Professional baseball is planning a multi-million - dollar television package "which will dwarf the professional football TV blockbuster," sports columnist Bob Hunter wrote in Tuesday's Los Angeles Herald Examiner.

"Although details have been penciled out, they have not yet been polished to the point of formal presentation but 'could reach a figure of $50,000,000 on a term agreement,' according to a highly placed American League executive," Hunter said.

The project would include a 20 major league clubs and also the minor leagues, he continued.

The television pact will be ready for operation in 1966, the writer predicted.

Aces Dump Hershey 3-1, Reds Lose

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Quebec Aces have an eight-point lead in the Eastern Division of the American Hockey League but nobody can say they made it through victories over soft touches.

The Aces Tuesday night turned back the efforts of their toughest competitors, dumping the second-place Hershey Bears 3-1. It was the second time in three days Quebec has downed the Bears.

In the only other league outing, Baltimore Clippers dumped Providence Reds 4-3 to move within five points of the Bears. The triumph also enabled the Clippers to increase their spread over the Reds to three points.

Arranges Novel Bowling Tournament

K. 'KING' PINN

Rising to the challenge of an out-of-town bowl, Mr. Pinn spurred his Bowling Leagues to take a 300-mile jaunt to Kingston to test the keglers in a tournament. To keep enthusiasm high-spirited, Pinn had them chose a Canadian National Group Travel Plan and chartered a private coach for the trip. "The group really had a rolling time" ward to 'owning' a roomy, air-conditioned CN coach! It's certainly the low cost way for a gang to travel. For example, 60 of my teammates travelling in our 'own' coach, save as much as 23%— you can't beat that!" Pinn and his pals can also charter a sleeping car for long distance group travel. If the team is smaller, 10 or more, 'King' takes charge of all the rock-bottom Red 'Bargain' Days—and uses CN's Party Fare Plan for up to 20% discount. 'King' says, "It's become such a habit now, I wouldn't travel to the corner drugstore without consulting my friends at Canadian National."

Bruins No Patsies For Foe Goals

Averages Down

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Goals have been harder to come by this season in the National Hockey League and it's going to restrict the membership of the exclusive 20-or-better circle.

Eleven fellows have made it so far. But that's well off the pace of the last season. It could well be, too, that come the end of the schedule the 20-goal club will list less than 20 members and not for six years has it been that thin.

The principal reason for the general lapse in scoring is obvious.

No longer are Boston Bruins the defensive patsies they once were.

In seasons gone by, the boys used to fatten up their offensive production with prolific work against the Bruins.

But Boston's goalie Eddie Johnston logs the league now in shut-outs with six and so far the club has only allowed a respectable average of three goals a game, a full goal better than last season.

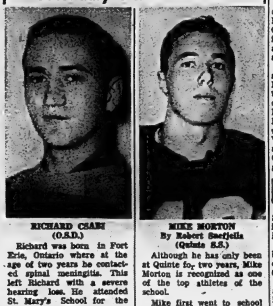
In tightening up defensively, the Bruins have apparently sacrificed offensive power. So they still lie last in the standings. But that's another matter.

Statistics show that in the five seasons leading up to this one there was an average of 5.93 goals in each NHL game.

GOAL AVERAGE DOWN

This season the figure for 186 games is 5.68 and it reflects in the number of 20-goal men.

At this point in the schedule last year, there were 15 with 20 goals or better. Another 12 players had between 15 and 19 goals From this bracket, nine more made it to 20.



Those who have reached the level so far this season with goals bracketed:

Bobby Hull (33), Stan Mikita (31), Kev Wharram (29), Camille Henry (23), Jean Beliveau (22), Dave Balon (22), Red Gilbert (21), Gilles Tremblay (21), Gordie Howe (2), Frank Mahovlich (20) and Bobby Rousseau (20).

Another five players have 8 or 19 goals and should make 20 without difficulty while six others have scored 15 or 16 and a couple of these will probably reach the 20-level.

Two games are on tap tonight, pitting Detroit Red Wings against the Maple Leafs in Toronto and Chicago Black Hawks against the Rangers in New York.

Mike first went to school in Hamilton, where he played basketball football. North Bay was his home for the next two years. There he played a year of bantam basketball and last a year of junior football. In North Bay too, Mike was skip of a curling team for two years. He then moved to Moncton, N.B., where he played another year of junior football.

Last year, when he came to Quinte, Mike played senior basketball. This year he was one of the defensive stalwarts on the senior football and is playing senior basketball. Mike is a fierce competitor and excels in all sports that he plays.

Mike stands 6 ft. ¼ in 18 years old, and weighs 170 lbs. He is a grade 12 student.

RIVERS GETS CALL

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Bruins called up right - winger Wayne Rivers from Hershey Bears of the American Hockey League Tuesday. He will stay with the National Hockey League club the rest of the season. Rookie Bob Leiter was loaned to Hershey to make room for the 22-year-old Rivers.

Minor Hockey

Playoffs got under way in the Belleville Minor Hockey Association's Squirt and Midget divisions last night. All games played were the first in two-game, goals-to-count series.

MIDGET

Canadiens edged the Black Hawks 4-3 in a tight affair. Rosebush starred for Canadiens with three goals and an assist on the other one. Beacher also scored while Hunter and Fahey drew assists. J. Cole scored twice and also got an assist for the Hawks. Ford was solo in on all three scoring plays with a goal and two helpers.

Bruins clipped the Red Wings 3-1. The winners got single goals from G. Cameron, Summers and Fullerton. J. Smith and Fullerton had assists. J. Ling potted the Bruin marker, aided by S. LaMoore.

SQUIRT

Rangers will carry a four-goal spread into their second game after downing the Red Wings 6-2. Cliff Jantisch paced the winners with three goals and an assist. Rick Meagher netted two other goals and Brian Cousins completed his club's scoring with a goal and two assists. Ken Cochrane and Robert Foster were the Wing marksmen, unassisted.

Leafs whitewashed the Canadiens by a 3-0 score. Jack Ralph, Ricky Watts and Norm Creelman fired one goal apiece in that order. Wayne Moodie and Greg Duffy each had an assist.

Black Hawks rode a high-scoring performance by John Mulvihill to a 8-1 victory over the Bruins. Mulvihill broke open a tight game by scoring Hawks' last four goals. Peter Fralick and Wayne Chapman posted the earlier markers. Wayne Werner, Jeff Fraser and Paul Reid had assists. Chatterly bagged the Bruin goal, aided by Cliff Allen.

"Y" Basketball

Pollock's thumped the C.N.R. by a 64-36 score. Teachers downed Holloway to the tune of 64-34.

Pollock's led from the start against C.N.R., ahead 40-26 at half time, but the losers rallied early in the second half and came within a few points of tying the score at one point.

Ian Houghin paced Pollock's with 26 points, followed by Terry Parker 14, George Campbell 12, Jim Cox and 11 and Graham Geldart seven.

Gord Williams and John Guthrie each hooped 14 points for C.N.R. while John Krupica had 10. Larry Gerow 8, Mike Vigrass 4 and Gord Cook none.

Teachers were never threatened in their tilt, in front all the way against the battling Holloway crew. It was 21-16 at the half-way point.

Murray Brydson topped the Teachers' scoring parade with 19 points. Max Woolley had 14, Wally Uhrynuk 11, Dave Bell 10, Jack Sisson six and Paul Reeve four.

Don Wilson and Ralph McCabe each dropped in ten points for Holloway, followed by Lynn Reynolds, John Morrow and Rich Clarke with four apiece and Larry Gerow with two.

Kelly Blames TV For Slump

TORONTO (CP) — Veteran centre Red Kelly believes the excitement of playing before a cross-Canada television audience is part of the reason for the current slump of his Toronto Maple Leafs.

Kelly says the other five National Hockey League teams play harder in Toronto than in other rinks.

"You know the majority of them played their junior hockey at Maple Leaf Gardens and it's sort of a home rink for them," he said in an interview. "Also they know that the game is being televised across Canada.

"I know when I broke into the NHL and played the first game in Toronto I was very excited. I couldn't sleep the night before the game, thinking about 'hockey night in Canada'. It's a night when you really want to do your best.

"I have talked to many players and they all feel the same way."

If Kelly's reasoning is right, the Leafs and Detroit Red Wings should start out even here tonight, because the game will not be televised.

It will be the third of four Toronto home games this season which will be piped to theatres only. The fourth will be against Boston Bruins March 4.

Guards Win Ring Tourney

By JACK FAWKES

PICTON — The 450 fans who attended the Eastern Ontario Area Boxing championships at the Armories last night, sponsored by the Army, seemed quite satisfied that they had been well and truly entertained.

There were seven bouts plus a Milling Competition and exhibitions of Judo.

The Milling Competition proved to be the highlight of a well-filled evening. In this one, two seven man teams are pitted against each other as a team.

Each of the seven men climbs into the ring and fights, exactly one minute, the bell rings, they jump out and two others jump in. There were knock downs aplenty, but no one was knocked out. The judges felt that the First Canadian Guards defeated the RCS of S. How they judged it, is their secret, but the crowd enjoyed every moments.

The light welterweight bout was taken by Gdsm. D. Keetch when the referee stopped the bout at the 1.43 of the first round. Sig. R. B. Currie was in no condition to continue.

The welterweight novice was stopped at 1.39 of the second round, when Gdsm. A. G. O'Quinn KO'ed Sig. E. J. Jasper of RCS of S. This was the only knockout of the night.

The light middleweight novice at 150 pounds was stopped at the 1.31 of the first round when L/Cpl. W. F. Keetch of First Cdn. Guards proved too much for Sig. W. B. Henshoe of RCS of S.

The middleweight novice went the full three rounds to no decision between Gdsmn. R. Y. Hildreth, Can. Guards and Cfn. R. J. Sumner of the RCEME School. The boys weighed in at 160 pounds.

In the light heavyweight novice, Sig. R. G. Foster, Number 1 Sig. had Sig/App. A. R. Bird on the canvas at 20 seconds of the third round and the bout was stopped. The boys weighed in at 172 pounds.

The heavyweight novice saw Gdsmn. John Sweeney at 189 pounds given the nod over Sig/App. H. J. Johnson in the three round fight.

A judo exhibition by four belt holders was well received. Those in the exhibition were: B. McElroy and K. Currie, Black Belt; Brown Belt, R. Genois and P. Lamoureux; Orange Belt, L. McCulloch, and B. Kux. Kingston radio announcer Ken Stevens, himself a Blue Belt holder, announced and described the various holds demonstrated.

Gdsmn. Bob Hildreth was presented with the Molson Trophy Mach, emblematic of being judged the "best boxer" of the championships.

The final standings of the tourney were — First Canadian Guards Camp Picton, 18 points; RCS of Sigs., 7 points; Number 1 Sig., 2 points; and RCEME, 1 point. The Guards men will represent Eastern Ontario area in the Command Finals in Kingston next week.

Sawchuk Breaks Record

MONTREAL (CP) — A National Hockey League record slipped by unnoticed little more than a week ago while Detroit Red Wings were hitting their hottest winning stride of this season.

Their veteran goaltender, Terry Sawchuk, surpassed the record for most games played by an NHL goalie, held until Feb. 6 by Harry Lumley.

Lumley, who played his last NHL game in the 1960-61 season, appeared a total of 903 times with Detroit, Chicago, Toronto and Boston.

Versatile Bill Stewart Dies

BOSTON (CP) — William J. (Bill) Stewart, 69, onetime National League baseball umpire and National Hockey League coach and referee, died Tuesday. He suffered a stroke two weeks ago.

A native of Fitchburg, Mass., Stewart grew up in Boston and was a versatile athlete, in baseball, hockey, track, and wrestling.

After playing, coaching and managing baseball in the minors he began umpiring and came up to the National League in 1923. He quit in 1935 after officiating in four All - Star games and five World Series.

Stewart, the only native American ever to coach a National Hockey League team, started professional hockey by driving the Chicago Black Hawks to the Stanley Cup in 1938. He was fired the next season.

It was the last time the Black Hawks had the Stanley Cup until the 1960-61 season.

After finishing third in the American division of the NHL, 30 points behind Boston Bruins, Stewart's charges went on to victory in four games in the best-of-five (series) against Toronto Maple Leafs.

Stewart officiated in the National Hockey League nine years and was a referee who brooked no back talk.

BARELY GOT IN

In the hectic 1938 hockey battle, Chicago had barely made the playoffs, winning only 14 and tying nine in their 48-game schedule. They got past the New York Americans and Montreal Canadiens but lost goalkeeper Mike Karakas with a toe injury on the eve of the finals.

REQUEST DENIED

In a violent committee-room tussle, Toronto turned down Stewart's request to borrow Dave Kerr from New York Rangers. Half an hour before game time, he was forced to settle for Alfie Moore, a minor-leaguer owned by the Americans, who had been sitting in the stands at Maple Leaf Gardens. Moore and the Hawks defeated the Leafs 3-1.

Before the second game, NHL president Frank Calder ruled Moore ineligible. The Hawks brought up Paul Goodman, a farmhand whom Stewart had never seen, and lost 5-1.

Karakas returned for the third game in Chicago which the Hawks won 2-1 after referee Clarence Campbell, new NHL president, overruled Toronto protests that the tie-breaking goal by the late Doc Romnes had hit the post.

Carl Voss, now the NHL's referee-in-chief, fired the winning goal as Chicago wrapped up the series with a 4-1 victory before 17,205 screaming Chicago fans.

Stewart's most controversial moment as a National League umpire came in the opening game of the 1942 World Series at Boston between the Braves and Cleveland Indians.

The game was scoreless in the bottom of the eighth inning with Boston catcher Phil Masi on second base and two out when shortstop Lou Boudreau, the Indians' playing manager, called for a pickoff play.

Pitcher Bob Feller whirled and Boudreau, Masi and the ball reached the bag almost simultaneously. Stewart called Masi safe.

Tommy Holmes singled Masi home with the game's only run and the ump's call appeared to have launched the Braves on a series upset. But Cleveland eventually won it in six games.

Regals Whip Athletics

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Guelph Regals may be starting a little too late in the season, but there's no denying they are on the move in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A league.

The Regals opened with five goals in the first period Tuesday and went on to hand Woodstock Athletics, co - holder of first place, a 7-1 drubbing.

The win, fourth straight for Guelph and the eighth in their last 11 starts, moved them past idle Oakville Oaks into fourth place in the six-team league.

Meanwhile, Galt Hornets blew a chance to snap the deadlock for the top spot by dropping a 5-3 decision to the cellar-dwelling Port Colborne Sailors. The win for the Sailors was only their sixth in 37 starts.

Keith Worrall paced the Guelph attack with two goals and two assists. George Usitalo, Don Duke, Ian Brown, Rick Hay and Willy Menard shared the others.

Bill McGowan, Bob Judge, Fraser Kilpatrick, Bill Searle and Roy Reeves scored for the Sailors.

Ron Hergott counted his 38th and 39th goals of the season to pace the Hornets. Joe Hogan, Galt's hottest shooter for the last couple of weeks, scored his seventh goal in four games.

URGE DRILLING BAN

TORONTO (CP) — A delegation from the city of Sarnia and Lambton County council urged Energy and Resources Minister Simonett Tuesday to ban proposed large-scale offshore oil and natural gas drilling in the Great Lakes. The delegation, meeting with Mr. Simonett in private session, said the drilling would pollute Lake Huron and threaten lakeshore communities with fire and explosion.

Marshall Leads AHL Score Race

CLEVELAND (AP) — Willie Marshall, veteran Providence Reds centre, scored five points in seven days and regained the American Hockey League scoring lead.

Marshall, with 21 goals and 42 assists for 63 points, had a one-point lead over Fred Glover of Cleveland Barons in games through Sunday night.

Wayne Hicks of Quebec Aces failed to get a point and dropped to a fourth-place tie with Bronco Horvath of Rochester Americans. Both have 60 points, one behind Hicks' teammate, Cleland Mortson.

Quebec goalie Gump Worsley leads in shutouts with four, one more than Cleveland's Les Binkley, Roger Crozier of Pittsburgh Hornets and Ed Giacomin of Providence.

Jeannot Gilbert of Minneapolis Bruins breaks the St. Louis monopoly with 42 goals and 31 assists for 73 points in fourth position, four points ahead of Gerry Ouellette, also of Minneapolis, who has 26 goals and 43 assists.

Boudrias String Broken

Hawks Tie Baby Habs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Centre Andre Boudrias failed to pick up a point as Montreal Junior Canadiens tied 3-3 with St. Catharines Black Hawks in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A league Tuesday, but this in itself was news.

Boudrias, lost in the shadows of Montreal's 58-goal scorer, Yvan Cournoyer, saw the end of his streak of 40 consecutive games in which he has scored at least one point. This bettered the old mark of 22 games set by Brian Cullen of St. Catharines TeePees during the 1953-54 season.

In the only other scheduled game, Toronto Marlboros had their lead over the Canadiens trimmed to four points by dropping a 4-2 decision to Oshawa Generals.

A goal by defenceman Art Graham with less than five minutes to go salvaged the tie for the Black Hawks. Other St. Catharines scorers were Fred Stanfield, his 51st, and Ken Laidlaw.

Bill Little fired two goals, his 34th and 35th, to pave the Generals' upset over Toronto. Ron Buchanan, second in league goal scoring to Cournoyer, counted his 48th. Rookie Jim Blair added the other.

Muskegon Loses To Komets 8-4

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Muskegon Zephyrs, who climbed out of the cellar in the International Hockey League a few weeks ago to fight their way up to fourth place, could be on their way back down.

The Zephyrs, who staged a two-week long battle with Windsor Bulldogs for possession of fourth, appear to be feeling the effects of the fight. Meanwhile, the Bulldogs are still moving up with designs on overtaking the third-place Port Huron Flags.

Tuesday Muskegon dropped their third straight game, losing 8-4 to the league-leading Fort Wayne Komets. The Bulldogs fought to a 7-7 overtime tie with Des Moines Oak Leafs and moved three points away from the Zephyrs.

Andy Williams Demonstrates Why Show Will Go Weekly

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Andy Williams demonstrated amply during his monthly variety show on NBC Tuesday why the network will star him in a weekly hour next season.

As usual, the show's music was tuneful, the dialogue amusing and gentle, the settings handsome and the people attractive. Perhaps the show's outstanding quality is good taste.

Williams has an elegant way with a song and an easy manner with his guests. Tuesday they were Dick Van Dyke, who has a lithe grace that reminds one of Danny Kaye, and Irene Ryan, a real surprise.

Miss Ryan, the sharp-tongued Granny of The Beverly Hillbillies, turned up in pink satin, shimmering sequins and dancing shoes, belted a few songs, shimmied like her sister Kate and brought down the house—one house, anyway.

Odds and ends: Allen Funt's Tell it to the Camera will disappear after 13 weeks on CBS . . . Bob Hope's anthology series will return to NBC for another season . . . still another game show, Jeopardy produced by Merv Griffin's packaging company, is expected to replace Missing Links on NBC in about six weeks.

Recommended tonight:

Dick Van Dyke, Show, CBS, 9:30-10 EST—first of a two-part episode with comedienne Rose Marie in the leading role.

Smothers Brothers Riding Craze to Pair of Fortunes

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Yes, Virginia, the name really is Smothers and they really are brothers. And the Smothers Brothers are riding the folk-song craze to a pair of fortunes.

Within three short years, the brothers have played most of the television variety shows and gleaned gold from concerts—100 in 1963. The jug-eared, staring-eyed pair net as much as $7,500 for a night's work.

They sing folk songs but they are different from most of the guitar-strummers. Their stock in trade is offbeat patter that seems to be created at the moment. It isn't, of course. Their ad libs are perfected by months of polishing.

Tom, the older, wacky brother, lives in Hollywood with his bride. Dick, two years younger, is at 25, makes his home with wife and baby in Salinas, Calif.—"My wife's home town and a good place to rest during the brief time we get off."

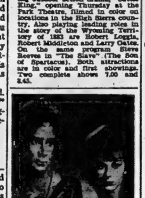
BUSINESS GOOD

"Business has been good," reported Tom. "In one week we were paid $7,500 for not doing our second Judy Garland Show (she decided to do it alone). On one day's notice we did a Hollywood palace show for $7,500. And we got $3,500 for appearing at The Troubadour—not our usual price, but our agent wanted us to play a local date so he could bring in people from the studios."

There's talk of movies and television series for the boys, and they'd like to stay in one place for awhile. But they have no real complaints. They've come far from their $4-a-night engagements at a San Jose State College hangout.

"That was a good break-in for handling audiences," said Tom. "The football team would be there and they'd shout 'you stink' and other comments at us and we replied in kind. By the fourth show we were shouting our act because by this time some of the audience was drunk."

So were we," Dick recalled. "The place gave us free booze."



Their first splash in the big time was on Jack Paar's television show three years ago.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

Question: How long before the New York Fair opens, and how long will it stay open? —Mrs. B., Odessa.

Answer: With only three months to go before the N.Y. World Fair opens its portals, visitors should be making their plans. The Fair begins on April 22nd at Flushing Meadow Park, located in the Borough of Queens, New York City. It will continue until October 8th, 1964, and will then re-open on April 21st, 1965 until October 17th. The Fair will feature some 200 buildings representing about 45 nations and 25 states.

Question: We are going to Florida this month, and want to drive down the most direct way. Which route should we take to miss the mountain roads, as I understand they could be snow-covered and dangerous to drive through? We would like to steer away from the moutains as much as possible. — Mrs. T. O., Belleville.

Answer: The most direct way to go to Florida from Belleville, keeping away from mountain driving is to drive to Watertown, take Route 81 to Syracuse, then Route 11 and 81 again to Norristown, Routes 220 and 40 to Baltimore, then Route 301 to Jacksonville and Route 1 to Miami.

Question: We are driving to Florida and would like to know if there are cabins or Tourist Homes on the way down to Tampa, Florida, and if ther is a YWCA in Tampa where we could stay for two weeks. This information would be appreciated as we are travelling on a tight budget — V. and D., Belleville.

Answer: There are indeed cabins and Tourist Homes that you could stay at on your way down to Florida. As they are not listed generally as are other hotels and motels, you would have to figure out how many miles you were going to drive each day and, what city or town you would then arrive at. Contact the local Chamber of Commerce (do this, if possible before 4 P.M.) and we are sure that they would be able to direct you to a good overnight place, or the YWCA. Do the same in Tampa, as the Chamber of Commerce there would have a list of all the approved Tourist Homes and YWCAs. This is an economical manner in which to travel, if you don't want the spit and polish of motels and hotels.

Question: I am making a trip to Washington and would appreciate any information you could give me on driving down, as to what proper highways, etc. — W. B. T., Napanee.

Answer: From Napanee to Ivy Lea and Watertown, then to Syracuse by Route 81, Route 11 to Binghamton, 81 to Norristown, 320 to Wilmington, then Route 40 to Baltimore and Washington. The local O.M.I. office would be happy to provide maps for your trip. The trip is one of approximately 565 miles.

FOXBORO W.I.

The February meeting of the Foxboro Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. G. V. Ducette. Mrs. Trupp opened the meeting in the usual manner and turned the meeting over to the citizenship convener, Mrs. B. Hollinger, with 17 members present.

Two articles from the current issue of the Junior Farmer and 4-H Club magazine, one by Miss Ethel Chapman (editor of "Home and Country") and Kate Aikens were read by Mrs. Hollinger as the opening for her part of the program. Mrs. Hollinger introduced Mrs. J. (Jean) Churchill, one of the 4-H Club leaders for "The Milky Way," who before introducing the members of the club gave a short resume of the work done by the girls. Fifteen of the 17 girls who started the club completed it. "What Milk Did for Molly," was a skit put on by the girls in a capable and interesting manner, and showed how milk in the diet can be of great benefit to one's health.

Mrs. J. Reynolds, as program convener called on Mrs. C. Hubble to read "The Women's Institute Alphabet."—Mrs. Ducette who had visited the Bahamas in February of 1963 showed some of her pictures and so gave a most interesting trip in a few minutes. Mrs. W. L. Johnston gave a reading.

The motto, "A good citizen is not content to just sit, he finds his place in a community," was prepared by Mrs. R. Groh who due to ill health was unable to be present and Mrs. Hayton read the motto.

Correspondence, including a letter from Mrs. Trevers, and two resignations were read.

During the preparation of lunch following the usual closing, Mrs. J. Reynolds conducted a "sing" contest which was won by Mrs. J. S. Haytor.

A social hour was enjoyed over the lunch which closed a most interesting meeting.

CARD PARTY

A successful euchre party was held in the Foxboro school auditorium on Friday evening, by the Foxboro Women's Institute. Thirteen tables were in play as friends were present from Rossmore, Wallbridge, Marsh Hill and Shannonville.

The winners were Mr. Harry Phillips, men's high; Mrs. A. Mann, men's second - playing as a man; Mrs. Carleton, men's low; Mrs. Alex Tanner, women's high; Mrs. J. Gould, women's second; Bonnie Carleton, ladies low; travelling lone hand prize money was won by Mrs. C. Cassidy.

Income Tax Explained

By C. A. MILLAR

Since I started writing this column on income tax, I have received hundreds of letters from husbands in regard to their wives becoming employed.

The instructions appear to be quite clear on page 2 of the short form return, but many are of the opinion that a wife's income should be added to that of the husband. This is not the case. A wife's earnings only affect the husband's exemption for her.

A wife may earn $250 before it reduces the husband's exemptions on her behalf. Any amount earned by her over $250 reduces the $1,000 exemptions normally allowed to the husband for a wife. The easy computation of this is to deduct the wife's earnings from the $1,250 and the difference is his exemption for her. Follow the instructions as set out on the return and you cannot go wrong.

When the marriage has taken place in the taxation year, it is only the wife's income earned after marriage that must be taken into account by the husband. What she earned in the year, prior to the date she became his wife does not affect him at all. This is a common error, made by husbands and persons. See the following article which gives all details regarding marriages in the taxation year.

An employed wife must file her own income tax return and if there be a refund coming, it will be paid directly to her. She can write on the bottom of her return that the refund be transferred to her husband's account if he owes a balance of tax. Such authorization must be signed by her. A husband may not claim his wife's refund unless she authorizes it on her own return.

For personal replies pertaining to income tax problems please enclose a self-addressed five cent stamped envelope and 25c in coin for each question you wish answered.

Question: My wife earned $2,000 before we were married but nothing afterwards. How does this affect my return?

Answer: It has no bearing on your return as she was not employed when she earned the money. Claim $1,000 for her.

Question: My wife worked for three months in 1963. She did not earn enough to file a return. Can I claim her tax deductions amounting to $68?

Answer: No. She must file her own return as refunds are only made from returns filed by the taxpayer who has them coming.

Watusi Children, Ill Clad And Hungry Fleeing Into Burundi From Massacres

By DENNIS LEE ROYLE

USUMBURA, Burundi (AP) It is a time of terror for Watusi children. Misery attends lithe young descendants of a lordly race which for 600 years headed a feudal society in the equatorial African land that now is Rwanda.

Ill-clad and hungry, hundreds of waifs are fleeing hand in hand into Burundi from massacres by the stocky Bahutus, former slaves who have swallowed up their aristocratic parents.

Sometimes the children are led by a tall and slender elder who survived the tribal warfare that missionaries estimate has cost the lives of up to 20,000 Watusis in the last three months.

Sometimes, ragged and ailing from exposure, they come alone to a new life in refugee camps set up for them by the Burundi government within a few miles of the frontier.

Burundi soldiers stand guard there with two assignments—to keep the Watusi boys and girls from wandering farther inland and to watch for marauding Rwanda troops.

The children help in building grass huts as shelter from seasonal rains and mid-day heat. Food is scarce. Refugee relief organizations are trying to truck in supplies to keep pace with the growth of the camps.

WORRIED BY INFLUX

With about 22,000 refugees already on hand, the Burundi government is seriously worried about the continued influx. It hopes to get neighboring Tanganyika to accept some of the load.

Working on behalf of the refugees in one camp is a blonde British girl, Rachel Yeld. She is staying on the job despite threats to her life by militant Watusi agitators called Inyenzi — The Cockroaches — who want to retake Rwanda from its new rulers, the Bahutus.

Backgrounding the trouble is the old enslavement of Bahutus by the Watusis. That developed when the Watusis moved their cattle herds southward — apparently from Ethiopia — in the 16th century to the lush pasturage between Lake Victoria and Lake Tanganyika.

Rwanda was part of a Belgian protectorate when the Bahutus, a pure-blooded Negro tribe, rebelled against the Watusis and drove out many to neighboring countries in 1959.

The current bloodshed started late last year when invading bands, challenging the modern weapons of Rwanda's Belgian-officered army of 1,200 Bahutus, launched a series of raids across the frontier in a desperate bid to retake the country.

Bomb Wrecks Negro Church

AMELIER, Pa. (AP)—An explosion ripped through the front of the Negro Bethlehem Baptist Church in nearby Lower Gwynned Township Tuesday $10,000 damage.

Sgt. John Smart said the explosion probably was set off outside the front of the building.

Members of the church choir had left the church just 15 minutes before the explosion occurred

The blast was felt in communities as far as three miles from here in the Philadelphia suburbs.

Highway Toll Is Record 4,200

OTTAWA (CP) — Deaths caused by motor vehicle traffic accidents rose in 1963 to a record 4,200, just 144 short of the 1961 population of Antigonish, N.S.

The bureau of statistics said today that the 1963 death toll on streets and highways was 8.2 per cent above the 1962 figure of 3,883.

However, the December toll decreased 11 per cent to 340 from 382 in the same month of 1962.

All provinces except Nova Scotia and British Columbia reported higher death tolls in 1962.

Ontario had 1,421 traffic deaths in 1963, highest of any province, compared with 1,383 in 1962.

Pembroke Home Builders Tour Cement Plant

PICTON (Staff) — The Lake Ontario Portland Cement Plant here is justifiably proud of their future operation and are happy to act as host to any interested group of people, who would like to know just how cement is manufactured.

The Pembroke and District Home Builders Association, an Affiliate of the National Housing Administration were quick to take advantage of an offer from the company to tour the premises, and on Tuesday, 16 of the 26 members of the association came down by bus from Pembroke and were the guests of the Cement plant for the day.

They toured the quarry and outer-portions of the operation in the morning and in the afternoon, dressed in white coveralls, coats, the compulsory helmet, or hard hat and protective goggles they were shown the "inner workings" of the huge plant.

Despite a really cool day, they were more than a little warm as they reached the "hot end" of the 370 foot kiln, inside the kiln, the temperature runs as high as 2500 degree.

The group thoroughly enjoyed the tour, and as one man put it, "we use a lot of cement and none of us know how much work went into the actual making of it".

It is a safe bet, that these contractors will specify Lake Ontario on their future cement requirements.

GETS BIGGEST SHARE

Ontario receives about 75 per cent of the total air travellers coming into Canada from foreign countries.

Toronto Detective Opens Crime Museum for Police

TORONTO (CP)—Sergeant of Detectives Maurice Inglis, who has investigated 170 murders, took a busman's holiday on a trip to England in 1946.

While browsing through crime doings at Scotland Yard he came across it's famous "Black Museum" of exhibits from noted cases.

As a result the Toronto force has been accumulating its own collection from the local realm of violence and skulduggery.

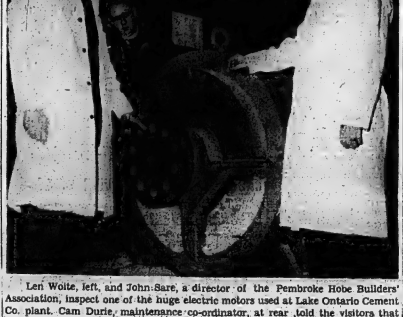
Until the sergeant got his superiors interested, these mementoes used to be neatly bagged after their courtroom usefulness was ended and deposited out of temptation's way at the bottom of Lake Ontario. Now he has a collection housed in a room at police headquarters.

There are enough weapons to start a banana republic revolution. Most of them have taken human life.

One battered revolver had a direct bearing on the history of the police force itself. A robber bent on trigger guard on the head of a holdup victim in 1899. When he turned the gun point-blank on Constable Samuel Dickson it wouldn't fire. Constable Dickson went on to become chief.

There is a pocket-size housebreaker's kit in a leather case. A gift prankite with a hacksaw among its blades sits beside a .32 revolver. They were found in a cake at Don Jail here.

Yellowing posters tell of the intensifying search for three-manager Ambrose J. Small, starting with a prosaic missing notice with no reward in 1919 and then going up to $50,000. The disappearance of Small, right after he sold out for $1,000,000, remains one of America's classic mysteries.



A manikin head used for shooting practice recalls the deadly Boyd gang of bank robbers of the 1920s. Holes are drilled between the eyes.

An untold story goes with a sub-machine-gun. It was found in a lakeshore motel after some Americans left.

A short and clear story goes with a hatchet. It was owned by a woman carpenter who used it to split her husband's head.

PLAGUED BY TRAGEDY

LONDON (CP)—A 73-year-old pensioner, Thomas Clark of Bermondsey, drew his life savings from the bank to give his wife a "treat," but she died just before Christmas and thieves stole the money before Clark could put it back in the bank. Also stolen were a gold watch, received after 50 years with an engineering firm, and a gold ring given by his wife.

BRITAIN FLYING TROOPS TO CYPRUS

Twenty Sailors Taken Off Ship, 14 Men Missing

British Captain Dies After Being Rescued

NEW YORK (AP) — A U.S. Coast Guard cutter and planes continued searching the North Atlantic today for 14 men missing from the storm - battered British grain ship, Ambassador, but their survival was considered improbable.

Twenty of the 35 crew members have been rescued. The captain died.

Coast guard area headquarters reported that a Dutch tugboat today took over the listing and abandoned Ambassador as a prize of the sea.

The coast guard cutter Coos Bay radioed at 6:28 a.m. that the tugboat Elbe put men aboard the Ambassador. They stopped flooding in the No. 3 hold and the Elbe started towing her to the Azores islands at 5:45 a.m. The Elbe had sped to the Ambassador, for salvage purposes and arrived at 9 p.m. Wednesday night, the coast guard said.

WEATHER BETTER

Weather in the vicinity of the Ambassador improved considerably before dawn and the first plane of the day's search arrived from Argentia, Nfld., at 5:30 a.m.

The Coos Bay radioed about dawn that a snow storm had stopped, the mountainous waves had subsided to seven to 10 feet, the wind was about 30 miles an hour, visibility was four to six miles and the temperature over the spot in the Gulf stream was 63 degrees.

Twenty - one of the men aboard the vessel when she began to list on a week end tipped badly were dramatically picked up by seamen of the cutter and the Norwegian freighter Fruen. But Capt. Harry Strickland, master of the Ambassador, was dead when brought aboard the Coos Bay.

ARE IN GOOD SHAPE

The cutter reported that the 11 men it picked up were in good condition. No word was received immediately about the men aboard the Norwegian vessel.

"There was plenty of grog aboard," said John Bowie, cook aboard the Ambassador. "We weren't low on food."

The survivors were taken ashore by a line Wednesday. Several of them were dumped into the water, but were quickly pulled aboard the two rescue vessels.

The winds were reported as high as 80 miles an hour and waves were 35 feet high during the height of the dramatic rescue operation.

At one point Wednesday night,

PC Chief To Open Debate

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Diefenbaker squares off with Prime Minister Pearson today in the Commons in a major debate that could set the tone for the whole session.

After listening to government legislative plans and oratory for the first two days of the new session, the Conservative chieftain will launch the eight-day throne speech debate.

The lead-off speech traditionally ranges over all the great issues of the day and ends with a motion of non-confidence in the government. The motion would come to a vote Tuesday night under Commons rules.

Mr. Pearson will then reply for the government and may expand on the legislative program outlined vaguely in the throne speech, read Tuesday by Governor-General Vanier.

New Democratic Leader Douglas has his turn next and has the right to introduce a second non-confidence motion. This motion would be voted on Friday.

The Social Credit and Creditiste leaders, Robert Thompson and Real Caouette, will follow Tonight or Friday.

QUESTIONS PLENTIFUL

The second day of the session consisted of a 75-minute question period and speeches by two freshman Liberal MPs. Jean-Pierre Cote (Longueuil) and Ron Basford (Vancouver-Burrard) moved and seconded the traditional address in reply to the throne speech.

Mr. Cote, a 38-year-old dental technician from the Montreal south shore district, called for fiscal and constitutional changes to give more powers to the provinces, especially Quebec.

Mr. Basford, 32-year-old lawyer, took a different approach. He was disturbed about a tendency by the present generation to downgrade the role of the federal government.

They agreed, however, that the large majority of French-Canadians do not share the "extremist" views of Quebec separatists and the Creditistes.

Mr. Cote compared Quebec to an unlucky wife whose husband —the English-speaking majority —flirts with other women and pinches pennies.

Letter to Mrs. K. Wins Her Leave To Live in Canada, With Pension

VANCOUVER (CP) — Russian authorities said Ekaterina Aron Frese could not come to Canada, so she wrote to Nina Khrushchev.

Today's Chuckle

Small children alternate rapidly between being a lump in the throat and a pain in the neck.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Colder air will drop overnight temperatures to around 5 in the south to near 25 below in the north country. The prospects for Friday are for continuing variable cloudiness and some snowflurries with mild afternoon temperatures ranging from the 20s in the south to the teens in the north.

The Russian premier's wife took a hand and Mrs. Frese now lives here, with $ 29 a month in a Russian pension to boot.

Interviewed Wednesday through an interpreter, Mrs. Frese, 62, said she first applied to emigrate 3½ years ago.

"I wanted to come to Vancouver to see my mother who was 91 and couldn't expect to live long. She died a few months before I arrived. But my brother Henry has been in Canada for many years."

Her letter to Mrs. Khrushchev brought a personal answer, she said, and shortly after authorities told her she could go to Canada.

Mrs. Frese recently left Yakutsk in the territory of Kazakhstan in Soviet central Asia, and lives here with her brother. She said the pension is being paid at the request of Mrs. Khrushchev.

Sailor Declared Hostile

By STRUAN MATHESON

MONTREAL (CP) — A former sailor the Crown thought would give key testimony in the preliminary hearing of Hal C. Banks, 55, president of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada (Ind.) on a conspiracy to commit assault charge was instead declared a hostile witness Wednesday.

Judge Emile Trottier declared Ron Milijre, 23, hostile after the Crown contended his evidence contradicted a statement he admitted signing last August after questioning in Vancouver by an RCMP officer.

The case was adjourned until today.

Milijre, a former night club bouncer and part-time sailor, was brought to Montreal Monday from Vancouver where he was being held without bail awaiting trial on charges of breaking and entering.

He made a statement to the court that he "had lived in daily fear, been constantly harassed, threatened and offered bribes" to testify since he had been "mixed up" in the case 2½ years ago.

He did not identify his alleged tormenters.

OTHERS CHORES

The witness then testified he had never performed any services for the SIU outside of a few union hall chores and had never received any money from the union or officials.

After being declared hostile—leaving himself open to leading questions from the prosecution and perjury charges — Milijre admitted performing additional

Watchdog Role Of Auditor

By DON HANRIGHT

OTTAWA (CP) — Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson has assigned himself to another watchdog role—that of seeing that the government only does something about the recommendations of the Glassco royal commission on government organization.

Mr. Henderson, whose job is mainly to see that the public's money is properly spent and accounted for, will be officially to "follow through" on the Glassco report and keep Parliament and the public posted.

He said he thinks it is important that commission recommendations for "outdated procedures, uneconomical operations and wasteful practices be effectively implemented" only in the interest of improving efficiency, but because of the substantial savings in public funds which could result."

Mr. Henderson noted that the government already has said it approves of 68 of the Glassco recommendations and is implementing them.

Meanwhile, the auditor-general criticized the "irregularities"—among others—in handling public funds during the 1962-63 fiscal year, last fiscal year of the Conservative administration.

The mother of a soldier killed in 1945 was awarded a $50-a-month pension on the basis of need. Ottawa has made a $10,500 interest-free loan to her son-in-law.

DOCTORS PAY HIGH

Some civilian doctors who examined recruits for the special 1962 militia courses were paid as much as $300 to $400 a day.

A 40-year-old serviceman discharged for misconduct was awarded a pension worth $53,700.

The government loaned $52,500 to 15 Eskimos to build houses at Frobisher Bay on Baffin Island, then decided it would pick up the full cost of the houses—but didn't recall the loans.

Kennedy Sees Beer Monopoly Threat, Seeks to Block Labatt Sale to Schlitz

WASHINGTON (CP) — Attorney-General Robert Kennedy says there's a threat of a beer monopoly in the move by the Jos. Schlitz Brewing Company of Milwaukee to acquire control over John Labatt Limited, London, Ont., and has called on a federal court to block the stock sale.

The justice department's surprising action—which a source said was taken after U.S. consultations with Canadian authorities—was initiated in federal court in San Francisco Wednesday. District Judge George Harris issued a 10-day restraining order to halt the Schlitz purchase of Labatt stock until the U.S. government's charges can be examined.

Kennedy said in a statement that Labatt controls Universal Brewing Company of San Francisco which, in turn, operates Lucky Lager Breweries Company, the largest beer producer in the West with breweries in California and Vancouver.

POSSIBLE MONOPOLY

Once Schlitz got control over Labatt, it also would have control over General Brewing and, together with previously - acquired control over Burgermeister Brewing Corporation of San Francisco, the Milwaukee company "would substantially lessen competition and tend to create a monopoly in the sale of beer," Kennedy said.

Thus, by acquiring Labatt, Schlitz would become the largest brewer in the U.S.

"The district court should thus forbid consummation of the Schlitz purchase of Labatt stock and order Schlitz to divest itself of the Burgermeister assets it acquired in 1961," Kennedy said.

Schlitz, which declined to make immediate comment on the anti-merger moves, initiated a deal to buy 750,000 shares of Labatt stock from the Labatt family Feb. 8. Six days later Schlitz was offered an additional 750,000 shares by other Labatt stockholders. This would make Schlitz the largest single Labatt stockholder with 34.7 per cent of the common stock, Kennedy noted.

RANKED THIRD IN 1961

In 1961, Schlitz, including Burgermeister, ranked third in California beer sales with 12.14 per cent of the market. By acquiring Labatt and through Labatt, General Brewing, Schlitz would get more than 30 per cent of the California market.

"Schlitz' acquisition of Burgermeister already has resulted in the substantial lessening of competition in the sale of beer, particularly in California," Kennedy said.

His complaint said five of the eight directors of General Brewing also were directors of Labatt in 1962 and that Labatt owns "at least 49 per cent of General's stock."

General's Lucky Lager beer had 18.36 per cent of the California market in 1962, the Schlitz' sales nationally totalled $184,433,000. Lucky Lager sales that year totalled $85,690,000.

In London, Labatt's also declined comment on the U.S. government action.

But a Schlitz source said in Toronto that cheques totalling $17,250,000 had been mailed to members of the Labatt family as payment for their 750,000 shares only a few hours before the restraining order was issued.

Bond Salesman Held In Cass Robbery Here

A 22-year-old bond house representative appears in a Belleville court February 26 charged with possession of bonds stolen from Belleville lawyer, Ronald Cass.

Andre Gagnon was arrested and arraigned in Montreal yesterday when the date was set for his preliminary hearing.

He is described as a "salesman for a mutual fund organization," but other details on his background were not revealed either in Montreal or Belleville.

It was the first arrest in the investigation by Belleville and provincial police that, so far, has lasted nine weeks and stretched from Montreal to Miami.

"And there are others involved," said city police chief, J. B. McLauchlan this morning. He would not elaborate.

To date, only $30,000 in bonds from the total $85,000 stocks and bonds stolen from the Front Street law office of Mr. Cass, have come to light.

These were recovered at a branch of the Banque Canadienne Nationale, in downtown Montreal some time after the robbery December 10-14.

Police allege that Gagnon, as a known bond house agent was able to pass the securities at the bank.

It is believed investigators have wanted to question Gagnon since January 30 when Belleville police were first called to Montreal.

At one point last week Inspector Harry Sayes of the OPP's Criminal Investigation Branch, who has been assisting local officers, flew to Miami to question a suspect believed to be the accused man. By that time, however, Gagnon was in Montreal, said police.

It was only another bizarre aspect of a case that baffled investigators from the start.

No one knows when the bonds were taken from the Cass offices. They were last seen there December 10. They were reported missing December 14. By the latter date there had been no sign of forced entry into the law firm. The office safe where Cass had deposited his securities, had not been tampered with.

Ruby Trial in Third Day With Not One Juror Chosen

DALLAS (AP) — Legal duelling over selection of a jury for Jack Ruby's murder trial goes into the third day today, intensified by new defence contentions that 12 impartial jurors cannot be found in Dallas.

Not a juror has been accepted from the first 16 persons questioned.

In the record is a dramatic plea by Melvin Belli, chief defence counsel for Ruby, to move the trial to some other city in Texas. In urging District Judge Joe B. Brown to grant his motion, Belli said:

"You can't find a city with finer men of integrity than in Dallas. They are men of family, men of God, men of the church. They are willing to do their civic duty."

But, he argued, "so much has happened here," that it is difficult for such men to do this civic duty conscientiously.

Brown overruled the motion.

Ruby shot Lee Harvey Oswald in Dallas two days after President Kennedy was assassinated here. Oswald had been charged with murdering the president. Ruby is charged with murder with malice and the state will demand the death penalty.

Belli's renewed plea for a change of venue came during questioning of Hugh (Pete) Dancer, an accountant. Dancer said he had formed an opinion about Ruby's guilt or innocence after seeing a rerun of the televised scene of the shooting.

District Attorney Henry Wade told reporters the defence lawyers think Judge Brown will transfer the case from Dallas "if they carry out the trial long enough."

Greek Cypriots Fire At Patrol Near Truce Line

UN Debate in Recess, Private Talks Staged

By A. I. GOLDBERG

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Diplomats negotiated privately today on proposals to keep the peace in Cyprus while Britain began flying 1,500 more troops to the eastern Mediterranean island.

Security Council debate on the Cyprus crisis was in recess until Friday afternoon, and there were no sure prospects for agreement on proposals for an international force to take over enforcement of the shaky cease-fire between the Greek- and Turkish-Cypriot communities.

U.S. Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson called on the council Wednesday to endorse a western proposal to bolster the British troops on Cyprus with soldiers from other nations.

Seeking to avoid Soviet intrusion into the dispute, Stevenson added that agreement on the force would require the approval of Cyprus and her three guarantors under the 1960 independence treaties — Britain, Turkey and Greece.

SEES PLOT

The U.S. delegate spoke after Chief Soviet Delegate Nikolai T. Fedorenko charged that the 1960 treaties had been imposed on Cyprus and denounced the British force as a western plot to establish a NATO bridgehead in the eastern Mediterranean.

Backing the Greek - Cypriot government of President Makarios, Fedorenko demanded that the council first give guarantees for Cyprus' territorial integrity and against aggression. The Greek-Cypriots demand council guarantees.

Fedorenko said the people of Cyprus were entitled to settle their own affairs.

He said the presence of British, Greek and Turkish troops violates Cypriot sovereignty.

Britain's Sir Patrick Dean replied that the country had intervened at the invitation of the Cyprus government and that Britain had grounds for taking on the peace mission.

A Cypriot source offered hope that behind - the - scenes talks may lead to an agreement on Thant's proposal for an international peace force linked to the council through him, an impartial mediator and Security Council guarantees (See Page 2).

In Nicosia, Archbishop Makarios said he had no objection to an international force on Cyprus "provided we agree to its composition and terms of reference."

OBVIOUS BEATLE FANS

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Three teen-agers were arrested Wednesday in connection with the theft of a stereophonic record player, plus 15 record albums and a box of 45 RPM singles—all by the Beatles.

NICOSIA (Reuters)—A patrol of British troops was fired at by Greek - Cypriot irregulars near the cease-fire line in Nicosia, Cyprus, during the night, a joint truce force communique said today.

The communique said a patrol was in the Paloosiotissa district of Nicosia, about 100 yards from the cease-fire line, when the incident occurred.

A Cyprus government spokesman said two or three shots were fired but it was not ascertained that Greek - Cypriots fired them.

The communique said the British commander in chief later called a Greek police patrol and the chief of police.

From the building from which the shots came was searched and two armed irregulars found.

The communique said—"It seems likely that the shots were fired on some individual's initiative and were not a deliberate or co-ordinated action.

NO ONE HURT

"It is now agreed that only uniformed police will patrol. There were no casualties and the situation passed off amicably."

The Cyprus government spokesman said the island was calm and the only other incident during the night was a few shots fired by Turkish-Cypriots from Kokkina village in northwest Cyprus.

The spokesman said armed Turks shot their way into a cement factory Wednesday between Nicosia and the coastal town of Kyrenia. Information received in Nicosia indicated the Turks pulled out of the factory after hoisting the Turkish flag and seizing a bulldozer and other machinery.

The incident came as President Makarios inspected Polis, the northwest village where tension between Greek- and Turkish-Cypriots had been rising all week. Following the visit, a government statement, said, it was decided to remove all guard points, firing posts and roadblocks along the main Polis-Kokkina road and on roads to neighboring villages.

The island meanwhile awaited the arrival of more British peace-making troops. Britain, which already has some 5,000 troops here, planned to airlift another 1,500 men here starting today.

OFFER SHIP ON LOAN

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain has offered to lend Australia a ship to replace the ill-fated Australian destroyer Voyager, the chief lord of the Admiralty, John Hay, said Wednesday. But there has been no Australian reply. The Voyager lost 79 men when it sank last Monday after a collision with the Australian aircraft carrier Melbourne.

Quakes Rock Isle for Seventh Day As Mercy Ships Evacuate 1,060

CP from Reuters-AP

LISBON—Earthquakes shook the stricken island of Sao Jorge in the Central Azores for the seventh day early today.

The new quakes on the island —threatened with destruction by an underwater volcano— were reported in a message quoted by the official news agency Lusitania.

A fleet of mercy ships evacuated 1,060 residents from the island Wednesday amid continuing tremors caused by the volcano threatening to erupt.

Rough seas hampered operations as the refugees were taken to Angra do Heroismo, capital of nearby Terceira Island.

Tents, medicine and food were rushed to homeless thousands still on Sao Jorge. Some 19,000 inhabitants chose to stay on the island.

The American freighter Steel Director joined nine British, Norwegian, Italian and Yugoslav ships in removing dazed refugees. Two landing craft from the U.S. Air Force base at Lajes, on Terceira's eastern shore, brought the refugees from the larger ships to shore.

Most of the 1,600 buildings in the area of Velas, Sao Jorge's chief town, were reported destroyed.

Portugal, which rules the volcanic Azores chain 1,000 miles west of Lisbon, sent troops to Sao Jorge with relief supplies.

Antonio Lourenzo, a refugee, said he lost count of the tremors which began last Friday. "There must have been over 1,000 of them," he reported.

Four Conditions Laid Down by Prime Minister

OTTAWA (CP)—There would have to be an "association" of any international peacekeeping force for Cyprus with United Nations before Canada would contribute a contingent to it, Prime Minister Pearson said Wednesday in the Commons.

This was one of four conditions laid down by Mr. Pearson for any Canadian participation in such a Cyprus force.

The others:

—A force should not be of indefinite duration and a solution to the dispute between Greek and Turkish Cypriots should be found by a mediator in a reasonable time.

—A force would have to be acceptable to the Cyprus government.

—Its terms of reference should contribute to peace and stability in the island.

The prime minister, replying to T. C. Douglas, New Democratic Party leader, said the government has taken no decision in the matter. It might be premature to speculate on such a decision because it now was before the UN Security Council.

Mr. Douglas asked Mr. Pearson to clarify what he meant by an "association" between the proposed 10,000-man force and the UN.

The prime minister said he didn't wish to complicate the matter.

In reply to Robert Thompson, Social Credit leader, External Affairs Minister Martin said nothing more would be said until the UN Security Council disposed of the resolutions before it.

Mr. Pearson also said that if a request is made for a "substantial" number of Canadian troops "we would bring the matter before Parliament before any final decision is taken."

Youth Pays Dearly for Shooting Dog

A 17-year-old Point Anne boy who shot a normal hunting retriever because it bothered his hunting, was ordered to pay its owner $100 today.

In addition, David Loft was fined $50 and costs by Magistrate Hollis Baker.

"Your act is just completely beyond the bounds of what you expect from a normal hunter in this day and age," rapped the magistrate. "It is ridiculous."

Loft seemed to blanche when the magistrate added: "As a lesson to you and a deterrent to others I feel very much like imposing a jail sentence on you for this."

OPP Constable Dick Lewis said Loft was hunting with other youths February 1st in Point Anne field when the incident happened.

"They had shot a rabbit and the dog ran over where the rabbit was and ... Loft grabbed it," said the officer. "The accused said if he saw the dog again he would shoot it."

Later the Labrador — owned by David Lean, also of Point Anne — was again approached and started barking.

Loft, said Constable Lewis, asked a companion for a 22-calibre rifle but "he changed his mind and shot it with a shotgun."

"You were in fear of the dog?" asked the magistrate.

"Yes — I was," said Loft.

"You've been hunting some time?"

"Yes I have."

"You know that a Labrador can carry an egg in its mouth without breaking it?"

"No, I didn't."

"A pretty dangerous dog when they can do that," snapped the magistrate. "If a child had come along before you would you have shot that?"

He imposed an alternative to the fine of a month's imprisonment.

No Long-Term Agreement on Sugar Supplies

OTTAWA (CP)—Sugar prices are falling, and this is no time to enter a long-term supply agreement, Trade Minister Sharp says.

Prices should decline considerably by the end of the year, he has been advised by the trade, he said in a written Commons reply to Barry Mather (NDP-New Westminster).

Mr. Sharp said he and officials have talked since the end of the parliamentary session Dec. 21 with refiners, beet sugar representatives and Commonwealth observers.

"In general, we have come to feel that this is not an opportune time for entering any long-term arrangement."

That judgment had been borne out already by price trends, with the international price down to about £80 sterling per long ton against a peak of £105.

OFFERED SUGAR

Commonwealth producers had offered to provide sugar within a minimum and a maximum price range if they could depend on filling almost all Canada's needs.

The maximum price to apply would have been substantially below the then-prevailing level, Mr. Sharp said, for delivery late this year.

But the minimum price also would have been substantially higher than any prices other than those prevailing when Cuban shortages sent prices shooting upward.

Mr. Sharp, who said he will continue to study the feasibility of long-term Canadian sugar supplies and lower prices, included a letter received from the Consumers' Association of Canada.

Mrs. A. F. W. Plumptre of Ottawa, national president, said the association did not favor signing any long-term agreement at a time of high prices.

Seek Reaction To Unification Of Air Traffic

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (CP) — The state department is seeking reaction from U.S. air carriers to the sweeping report of Professor John Kenneth Galbraith which, it understood, suggests that Canada and the United States be considered as one country for purposes of future sharing of air traffic across the border.

Such a concept, if adopted by the two countries, would give Canadian air carriers an opportunity for greater penetration of the U.S. air market. However, informants said strong resistance to the recommendations of the Canadian-born economist are anticipated from some American carriers.

They said a summary of the confidential report, endorsed by the late president John Kennedy and tentatively accepted by President Johnson, was circulated by the department among U.S. carriers at an unpublicized, closed-door meeting here late last month.

The carriers now are reported studying the document and preparing comments to be turned over to the department on a confidential basis. It is understood some carriers are only mildly critical of the report while others are preparing strong protests.

These later carriers, which would include some of the largest in the U.S., have said privately that the Galbraith concept—to view Canada-U.S. air traffic on a continental rather than a two-country basis—would give Canadian carriers greater penetration of the long - haul U.S. market without comparable advantages for American carriers in Canada.

They view the Canadian market as a long reserve city, with virtually all the lucrative routes now fully served by airlines. The pressures for revision of the existing Canada-U.S. air agreement is on the Canadian side with Canadian carriers seeking to extend the present Montreal-Toronto route to Tampa, Fla., to Miami, and to establish a Canadian line from Montreal-Toronto to the U.S. West Coast.

It appears possible, however, that despite resistance by the American operators, the Galbraith report may become the basis for renegotiation of the existing air agreement next April. Both Johnson and Prime Minister Pearson agreed last month that renegotiations should begin almost at once, based on a "North American" approach.

Unemployment Said Regional Not National

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is shifting totheory that unemployment in Canada has become a regional—instead of a national —problem.

This change in emphasis has come with unexpected swiftness, due chiefly to brightening economic conditions that have opened up new job opportunities faster than the growth in the labor force.

Less than a year ago, the speech from the throne at the opening of Parliament May 16 described unemployment as the most urgent of our domestic problems." In the throne speech Tuesday, the accent was on accelerating employment.

This new approach is reflected in the latest job figures, which show employment rising everywhere except in the Atlantic provinces.

GAINED IN EAST

The weight of unemployment is centred in the Atlantic area, where 12.8 per cent of the labor force was jobless last month, compared with a national level of seven per cent. Quebec was next with a 9.1-per - cent unemployment rate, followed by 7.8 per cent in British Columbia. Ontario and the Prairies were under five per cent.

The main attack on unemployment in the months ahead may be concentrated in special fic programs aimed directly at boosting slow-growth areas and opening up new jobs.

The area development agency set up last year is stepping up its work in boosting 33 areas of high unemployment and slow economic growth—12 in the Atlantic provinces, 12 in Quebec, eight in Ontario and one spanning the Alberta-British Columbia border.

Plan Meeting Of Building Inspectors

That convention accommodation must be booked a long time in advance is well known by company and organization officials doing the planning.

This is borne out by the fact that the Ontario Building Officials Association has booked convention accommodation in Belleville seven months in advance and before builders have completed construction of the convention quarters.

The provincial building officials have their ninth annual convention slated for October 15-16 at Goodman's North Front Street Motel. Association officers are still applying the finishing touches.

Approximately 120 building officials from all parts of the province are expected to attend.

Baker Refuses To Turn Over Finance Records

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bob Baker faced his former Senate associates Wednesday and refused to turn over his financial records or answer their questions.

They told him to come back next Tuesday for a public hearing and threatened him with contempt of Congress citation if he persists in his refusal.

The 35-year-old former Senate aide invoked the fifth amendment protection against possible self-incrimination and a variety of other constitutional rights.

One of his two lawyers, Edward Bennett Williams, protested that the Senate rules committee was conducting an unfair "inquisitive trial" of Baker, whose appearance brought an overflow crowd of spectators outside the committee's closed door.

L. P. McLendon, the committee's special counsel, termed Williams' charge "ridiculous and totally unfounded." McLendon told reporters that a foundation was laid for contempt proceedings" at an hour-long session with Baker.

COULD GET A YEAR

Conviction for contempt of Congress carries a possible penalty of one year in prison and a $1,000 fine.

Williams displayed to reporters a plastic - covered device which he described as a combination wiretap and radio transmitter. He said it was found secreted in the automobile of Baker business associate in Las Vegas, Nev.—Edward Levinson.

The inquiry, which led to Baker's resignation last Oct. 7 as secretary to the Senate's Democratic majority, is aimed at determining whether he used his official position improperly.

In 60 Years in Yukon Miner Collected 600 Fine Books

By JOHN LeBLANC

TORONTO (CP) — Professor Charlie Tennant may not always have eaten regularly during his 60 years in the Yukon, but he was never without plenty of food for thought.

Death ended Charlie's long search for the mother lode at Dawson City 15 years ago, and Wednesday at auction all some of the contents of his shack showed that the lode for gold was only one of multifarious interests that nourished the old miner in the years after he toted his belongings over the Chilkoot Pass in 1896.

A story goes with the sale of Charlie's 600 well-thumbed books—many of them old first editions—in the posh downtown galleries here.

Charlie, whose origin seems to be unknown, stayed around Dawson City after the original gold rush faded. He lived in apparent poverty and kept to himself, apparently reading his books.

When he died, a saloon-keeper wanted to acquire a fine old oil lamp in the shack, but found he had to buy the cabin too, for $300. When he got the cabin, he also acquired about a ton of books.

SOME OF IT JUNK

Much of the hoard was junk, but in 1958 an alert young prospector from Montreal—David Lank—ran across it in the back room of Onnie Christenson's saloon and skimmed off 53 books which he estimated to be worth $5,000—for an investment of $410.

They included rare editions of such as William Penn, Calvin, Defoe, Bunyan and Voltaire.

In 1961, Tom Patterson of Stratford, founder of the Stratford Festival, was in the Yukon as consultant for the Dawson City Festival of 1962, and he came across Charlie's library. He bought it at what he describes as a very considerable profit to the saloon owner and had the books shipped to Stratford.

With the chaff winnowed out from the original 1,500 or so items, the remainder of Mr. Patterson's purchase went on sale at the Ward-Price auction rooms Wednesday and showed that, if Charlie's life itself was circumscribed, his mind roamed unfettered through the writing world.

For instance, just one of the 60 lots lumped Rambles and Recollections of an Indian Official, a 1921 automobile encyclopedia, Memoirs of a Bar Sinister, an 1869 edition of Robert Southey's poems, Boyle's Fashionable Court and Country Guide (1790) and a Bible in Chinese.

GOING UP IN FLAMES

Greek Prince Named Regent As Father Ill

By PHILIP DOPOULOS

ATHENS (AP) — Greece's new government drafted a decree today naming 23-year-old Crown Prince Constantine regent for his ailing father, King Paul.

The king was expected to sign the decree today.

A medical bulletin from the royal palace announced at midnight Wednesday that the 62-year-old monarch was suffering from stomach ulcers and is great pain. He is expected to undergo surgery in a few days.

The king has made no public appearances in the last two months and has kept to the Tatoi Palace, 26 miles north of Athens. Last month he was reported suffering from lumbago, and a bulletin on Feb. 9 said he had recovered.

Rumors about the king's health have circulated since his wife, Queen Frederika, cut short a trip to the United States and flew home Jan. 25. Palace sources said the announcement of the monarch's illness was withheld to forestall anxiety during last Sunday's national elections which brought Premier George Papandreou and his Centre Union party to power.

SWORE IN CABINET

The king swore in Papandreou's cabinet at Tatoi Wednesday, just 12 hours before his illness was announced.

services for the union.

Banks is charged with conspiring with SIU vice-president Leonard McLaughlin and former Vancouver SIU official Norman Cunningham to assault and cause bodily harm to Richard Greaves, a marine engineer.

Greaves, now president of the National Association of Marine Engineers the association's secretary at the time of the assault Jan. 30, 1958, testified he refused to sign open he did not know following a lengthy union dispute with the SIU.

Milijure testified Cunningham had told him "not to do anything to jeopardize the SIU" after he applied for a probationary permit in 1959. He said Cunningham knew about his criminal record and warned him to "conform to certain basic moral and ethical principles of the SIU."

HAD MET BANKS

Miljure said he came to Montreal—headquarters of the SIU Canada in 1959 and lived here "illegally" during the winter. He met Banks both in Vancouver and Montreal but "could not remember" if he had seen him previously. He was paid by money by the union or officials.

When the witness was declared hostile the police and defence lawyers were given copies of the RCMP statement signed by Miljure but it was not admitted as evidence.

Miljure had testified the RCMP "put a statement written 'whatever he wanted to put down" but that he himself did not read the statement. However, he had insisted on including a paragraph saying the statement could not be used against him in court before signing the document.

Crown Prosecutor Jean Martineau was attempting to bring out the contradictions between Miljure's evidence and testimony as the case was adjourned for the day.

ADMITTED FERRY JOB

On cross examination, Miljure admitted the statement he signed was correct in saying he had taken special trips on ferries between Vancouver and Vancouver Island to take off organizers of the rival Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers (CLC).

Banks also faces trial March 16 for conspiracy to commit assault on Capt. Henry Walsh, a Canadian merchant service guild organizer, with intent to wound, maim or disfigure. Walsh was beaten up in Owen Sound, Ont., in August, 1957.

Banks faces a preliminary hearing March 3 on a charge of conspiracy to violate the Canada Shipping Act in connection with the Great Lakes SIU seamen's strike in Toronto last October in protest against the federal trusteeship over maritime unions.

Cigarette Smoking Falling Off

By RICHARD H. HOENIG

NEW YORK (AP) — Colored pipes for women, intensified anti-smoking campaigns and a flood of cigarette substitutes are among the many signs of what some experts consider the most critical period for the 27,000,000,000 U.S. tobacco industry since John Rolfe planted his first tobacco crop 350 years ago.

Last month a blue-ribbon scientific panel convened by the surgeon general of the United States branded cigarette smoking a hazard to health, the main cause of lung cancer and a contributing factor to other diseases. Remedial action was urged.

Cigarette sales immediately plunged. Some guesses on the size of the drop ran to 30 per cent.

However, sales apparently are coming back up now. An Associated Press survey of retailers, distributors and wholesalers across the U.S. indicates that sales clearly remain below the levels before the report was released, but the upward movement is upward in at least 12 of 17 major cities surveyed.

Among the countermoves by cigarette manufacturers only one has given any direct indication of recent sales. The Reynolds Tobacco Company, the No. 1 cigarette maker, said last month that orders being placed by wholesale distributors "indicate a drop nationally in retail sales of our products but it is not more than normal at this time of year."

'SAME OLD THING'

The attitude of the major companies was summed up by the representative of one: "There was no new finding in the report; it was the same old thing. There is no sense quarrelling publicly about it. . . . Everyone will forget most of it in time. We know more study is needed and we're all for that."

Another indicator of sales is cigarette tax collections. Figures of January figures for 19 states showed 16 declines from January, 1963. However, in more than half the cases where state officials commented, they said the "unusually mild weather" report could not clearly be blamed.

One fact was clear from the survey reports. The demand for cigars, pipes and smoking tobacco has increased.

"It's like Christmas in February—we've got so many pipe orders we don't know what to do," said I. C. Legros, president of Shulick Taylor Distributing Company in Wheeling, W.Va.

Major cigar manufacturers shimmed the report.

But one industry source cautioned: "No one really knows what the real health" report is—everyone will go back to cigarettes."

In the month following the report, the stocks of five major tobacco companies traded on the New York Stock Exchange declined an average of less than $1 a share. One issue, American Tobacco, was about unchanged. Liggett and Myers was up about $6 a share and the others were off about $1, $3 and $5.

Operator Must Show Meat Is Inspected

TRENTON — The operator of a meat - packing firm from Warkworth will be required to produce evidence for Trenton authorities that his meat undergoes proper inspection. The issue was raised by clerk - comptroller O. W. Larry at a board of health meeting yesterday. Mr. Larry told the board he had seen advertisements in the local newspaper offering to deliver the meat to Trenton customers. He said that he had no way of knowing of the meat was inspected or not, and Dr. E. W. Dow, MOH, asked him to make enquiries.

UNFIT TO DRINK

H. S. Pane, chairman of the Trenton Board of Health, reported at a meeting of the board yesterday that he had found the water in two wells in the recently annexed areas of the town unfit for drinking purposes. One well is in east Trenton; one on the Wooler Road.

Dr. E. W. Dow, MOH suggested that the well owners be asked to install a chlorinating system, or, in the case of the east - side user, hook up to the town water supply.

MUST BE X-RAYED

The owners or operators of 60 places in town where food is prepared and served have been asked by health board chairman H. S. Pane to have all employees x-rayed for T.B. if they have not had a check-up within the past eight months. Mr. Pane said a health board meeting yesterday that between 180 and 200 employees were concerned.

WANT PRIVATE BILL

Trenton health board members in the City of Trenton asked the town council to have passed a private bill, similar to that of the City of Belleville, which is to enable the demolition of dwellings, designated as unfit for human habitation.

By the terms of the private bill, once a house had been condemned, the owner would have a year in which to improve his building or sell it. If he failed to take no action, he would be sent a notice at the end of the year, giving him 30 days in which to take action, or have the building taken away with by the town and the cost charged back to him in taxes. The owner could then take the case before the county judge if he so chose and would have to abide by the judge's decision.

Pilots Rescued By Helicopter Off James Bay

TRENTON — The RCAF said Wednesday that Jim Foster and Aubrey Utting, both 25 and both from Vancouver, were picked up from shore of James Bay by helicopter Tuesday and taken to Winisk. Both are in good condition.

The men were sighted camped alongside their crippled helicopter by a Hercules after a searching RCAF aircraft had picked up a distress signal from the pair.

Rugged terrain made it impossible for the search plane to land, so the pickup was made by a helicopter owned by Okanagan Helicopters Limited of Vancouver, under contract to the RCAF at Winisk, 256 miles north of Fort Albany on the west coast of James Bay.

The RCAF said an earlier report that the rescue attempt had been postponed until Wednesday was erroneous.

Fire Losses For Last Year Total $66,000

TRENTON— An emphasis on fire prevention is credited by Fire Chief Cecil Ellis in his annual report, released this week, for keeping fire losses in the town during 1963 to $66,000. The department answered 361 alarms. One fatality due to fire was reported and there were two major fires, one in a commercial property, one, industrial.

The Trenton department last year answered 28 calls to out-of-town emergencies, 25 in Murray Township. One Mutual Aid call was answered, to Belleville.

Chief Ellis said in his report the telephone system which makes it possible to call all regular and volunteer members at once has proved to be very useful and time-saving and he recommends placing an alarm in the community gardens, connected to the fire hall. More pumping equipment in the fire trucks would also be useful, the chief states.

Regular inspections of the schools, factories, commercial properties and other buildings, such as churches, the hospital, etc are carried out by the men of the department. Schools in Murray Township were also inspected.

Chief Ellis notes that his men have been trained in the vehicles and equipment where possible, thus saving money for the town.

Sewage Problem Discussed by Health Board

TRENTON — "In view of a very serious sewage problem in Trenton South," the members of the Trenton Board of Health yesterday voted to ask town council to form a committee which would attempt to prevail upon the Trenton Public Utilities Commission to inaugurate a system of surcharging water users in the town a special rate, at a more realistic cost to council than that charged by the PUC.

Council suggested to the PUC last year that a surcharge be added to the water bills, in order that necessary sewer works could be carried out without adding perceptively to the town's total debt. Recently, council was told by the PUC that such a charge could be levied, but that it would cost the town $11,000 to collect $66,000 annually. These figures would fluctuate from year to year. Council can't see its way clear to paying the required $11,000.

The health board members, disturbed by Ontario Water Resources Commission reports regarding the discharge of raw sewage into Bay of Quinte in the Dufferin Ave. South area, are anxious to see the sewer installed.

Miss Eva Baker, above, is secretary-treasurer of the Trenton Board of Education. Only five other women in Ontario fill similar positions.

Miss Eva Baker, One of Six Women School Board Officials in Ontario, Enjoys Work

TRENTON— One of six women school board secretary-treasurers in Ontario, Eva Baker of Trenton has seen the increase from approximately 1,300 in 1952 to 3,350 now and the combined high and public school budgets jump from under $300,000 in 1952 to more than one million dollars, in 1963.

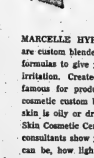
In 1952, when Miss Baker started out as secretary to V. P. Carswell, who then combined his duties as board secretary-treasurer with those of public school supervising principal, there were 15 high school teachers; now there are 54. In 1952 there were 37 public school teachers; now there are 74.

Mr. Carswell and Miss Baker had a small office in the basement of College Street school in 1952. Later, Miss Baker carried out her clerical duties at the board room at North Trenton School. In August, 1961, Miss Baker became secretary-treasurer and Mr. Carswell undertook the expanded duties of supervising principal.

As an experiment, at first Miss Baker was given a staff of three and the North Trenton office set up on a semi-permanent basis. Her present duties include the taking of minutes at board meetings; sending out notices of meetings; mailing out reports of meetings to board members and the press; answering all supplies for the schools; handling all board correspondence and the annual census.

Miss Baker is presently taking her first university year in school business administration from the University of Toronto. She has written and passed the examinations and will, she hopes complete three subjects this year. When one other paper has been written, Miss Baker hopes to have gained her certificate in business administration.

The highlight of the school year to Miss Baker is her attendance at the School Business Officials Conference, where she picks up pointers for a better carrying out of her duties.



A charter member of the Trenton Business and Professional Women's Club, and a past president of that club, Miss Baker finds it takes an active part in club activity.

Added to this she has been for the past six years a leader with the First Trenton Air Ranger Flight and is area camp adviser for Girl Guides in an area stretching roughly 100 miles from Bancroft on the north to Picton on the south, and Brighton on the west to Napanee on the east. All problems to do with Guide camping pass through her hands.

For relaxation, Miss Baker indulges in her favorite hobbies, knitting and sewing, making many of her own clothes.

Two Battle Lines

In troubled Africa there are two lines of demarcation, and not merely the one that some Western observers, preoccupied with the future of their own kind in the Dark Continent, have pointed out.

Most people, by now, have come to accept the existence of the hardening line between so-called "white Africa," lying under the Southern Cross, and the black Africa to the north, stretching through the equatorial regimes to the Mediterranean.

Events in this region are inexorably pushing us toward the conclusion that there are only two questions which remain to be answered about this demarcation line. Where will it finally be drawn? When will it be assaulted in force? Unless there is a remarkable change of heart on the part of white Africans, sometime late in this century or early in the next we shall witness there one of history's great tragedies.

But besides the demarcation line between white and black Africa, there is also another dividing line, potentially as dangerous, between Negroid Africa and Arab Africa.

Here fighting is already in progress. Some of it is confused by religious issues. This is the case in East Africa, where the "black Arabs" of Somalia seemed about to clash with Kenya's Negro regime, but instead are now locked in conflict with the black Christians of Ethiopia. This conflict, though, has served to focus attention on other areas of unrest and we learn that a hit-and-run war has been raging between Arab and African for a year in the Sudan. This dividing line between Arab and Negro, though far from distinct, stretches across the breadth of the continent. The Arabs carry on their shoulders the weight of history, for they have for generations dealt in slaves and continued to do so after the white man ceased to purchase from them. They are well-hated.

One may hope though that in some lands, such as Nigeria, the memories of old terrible wrongs will not be as potent a good as lesser, but continuing, injustices are likely to prove far to the south, where the Negro faces another foe wrapped, like the Arab, in the conviction of superiority by right of race, religion and education.

A New Development

Elder statesman George Papandreou and his Centre Union party won a sweeping victory in Sunday's election in Greece.

The victory ought to encourage men of good will everywhere and would be highly significant if it were to prove to be the fore-runner of a world trend.

Papandreou's party had the largest representation in the Greek Parliament after elections last Nov. 3, but lacked a clear majority. As a result, it was given but a vote of confidence and since the affairs of the country have been in the hands of a "caretaker" government, pending the results of another election.

This is news.

Moderate leftists, fearing a swing to the right, have themselves supported the extreme left. Moderate rightists, fearing precisely this development, have also turned their back on the centre and moved to the right wing.

This was how Hitler came to power in Germany, this was the process which seemed to be underway in France before de Gaulle stepped into the breach.

But here, in Greece, we have seen the voting public react in the opposite way, moving in to support the centre against the extremists of both wings.

It has been said that the only thing we learn from history is that we learn nothing from history. Now the Greeks are proving that even this rule is not without its exceptions.

Friendship can make the whole world warm. It's the finest form of central heating there is and it doesn't cost nearly so much. But it's got to be guarded—it won't just grow by itself; you've got to keep looking at the foundations and seeing that they are still firm. Insure it, do everything you can to safeguard it, and remember that as you go on the road, you may find lots of things that are pleasant, even valuable, but that your old friends are jewels, and value them as the most precious jewels you are ever likely to have in your possession.—Novelist Naomi Jacob.

Are Real and His Ralliement Du Creditistes Losing Punch?

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — To hear both the Conservatives and Liberals, with undisguisable satisfaction, tell it, last week's two Federal byelections in Montreal took care of Social Credit — Eastern and Western varieties alike — as a serious national political force.

The Western Thompsonites didn't run, perhaps instinctively knowing they stood even less chance than the gimmicked-up "Rhinoceros Party" which did run up with all of 300 votes.

And the Eastern Creditistes made what political spit-baller Real Caouette had indiscreetly boasted in advance would be their ultimate effort, and fell flat on their faces.

The Liberals did, well, all right, holding the two seats which had always been theirs.

And the Conservatives, perhaps surprised themselves, picking up an increasing percentage of the vote that just might signal the beginning of Quebec recovery.

But it was Real Caouette and his Creditistes who gave the by-elections meaning, who put them out of what otherwise would have been the obscurity of being a pair of relatively unimportant political contests in bedrock Liberal constituencies where the results were more than foregone conclusions.

THE WORKS

It didn't matter so much that the Liberals won, as just about everybody, with the possible exception of Real Caouette, expected.

What really counted was that the Caouette Creditistes were written off, and rightly so, as a second to third place in St. Denis, with Jean Luc son, Gilles Caouette, forfeiting his $200 deposit in Laurier.

Any way you look at it, only the Creditistes really worked on those two byelections.

The Liberals coasted; it was that much of a sure thing for them.

The Conservatives didn't really try very hard, because they didn't honestly think they had much of a chance, right up to the last few days.

The New Democrats, rank outsiders, didn't lose any sweat or sleep.

Only Caouette and company gave it the business, the whole political works, staking what turned out to be a considerable remnants of their national reputation, or more accurately, their notoriety, on the outcome.

Real Caouette and every last one of his small band of 12 rebel Creditists of normal size in the two constituencies, and spent the last three weeks of the twin campaign in an old-fashioned series of "kitchen rallies."

From all over Quebec, from as far west as Ontario, the cohorts of Abilah and Gaspe, they brought in 400 crack organizers.

Then they marshalled 800 of the residents — 400 in each constituency — an army of partisans, supposedly, to spread the fiery flame of the Creditste cause as to be willing to take two weeks off from their jobs to help campaign a full-time, day-and-night, all-out, bobbed-barred drive.

This clearly, was to have been it.

The out-of-town Creditiste troops were then watered and housed by party sympathizers in the two constituencies.

"We didn't ask for rooms to suit a Monseigneur or a cabinet minister, but just ordinary lodging for plain folk, and that suited me," explained Real Caouette playing his role of "One-of-the-Folks" to the hilt, before he had a room, just like all the other 400 campaign "imports."

"We didn't have much money in each riding they were able to hold better than a dozen a day — they rarely had, indeed, such an average 50 cents per head to finance the high pressure electioneering.

The crowds were never better. Right hundred at a meeting was a good one for them.

And they had — or thought they had — Separatism going for them.

For in the dying days of the campaign, perhaps out of sheer desperation, both Real Caouette and his lieutenant, Gilles Gregoire, appeared to buy the whole hooky Separatist package.

It was a miscalculation. For it didn't get them anywhere, except maybe a little further behind.

Those who watched Real Caouette perform this time, have the feeling that not only is the fire going out in Social Credit, but in the man himself, too.

He didn't have the steam. Or at least, he didn't manage to work up that kind of hysterical sweat of other campaigns that he used to spray like a human fill gun all around him within a radius of six or seven feet. Perhaps he knew that he and his Ralliement du Creditistes had had the course.

Strictly Personal

We Are Prey To Our Own Deceptions

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices: Wives who bitterly blame their husbands for being "weak" never blame themselves for having taken weakness; "I was deceived," they may say or hint, in matters of the heart, no one is deceived; we deceive ourselves.

People who are superficial usually miss the deeper causes of the conditions they analyze; but people who are profound often commit the opposite error of ignoring the accidents and capriciousness of events, and making a System out of what is merely a fortuitous combination of circumstances.

Misadventure is one of what the human race grandly calls "history" is, at bottom, just criminality on a large scale — and the history of mankind — which consists of the ideas that have always changed and the mind — is confined to footnotes in the textbook.

One of life's most exquisite minor pleasures for parents is spending a country weekend as a house-guest, overhearing their child crying early in the morning, realizing it is not yours, smiling sweetly, and turning over to sleep again.

A psychological paradox: those who are most afraid to die are most afraid to live.

It is easier to forgive someone who injures us than someone who does us no harm but regards us with polite contempt; we can grudgingly respect power, but we can only resent the cool assumption of superiority.

Scientists who are impatient with all non-facts should read and reflect carefully upon the words of Whitehead, one of the great thinkers of our time, who warned that with the best of ideas, it is necessary to remember that influence on hard-headed clarity is not necessarily beneficial, as it were a mist, clouding the perspectives of fact. Insistence on clarity at all costs is based on sheer superstition as to the way in which human intelligence functions."

One of the most malevolent and vulgar attitudes is to encourage the confidences of those in whom we have little interest, and for whose problems we have no solutions; it is reprehensible to ask to look at a wound we have neither the ability nor the willingness to bandage.

Murder mysteries are so perennially popular because they enable us to satisfy two needs at the same time: to discharge aggressive tendencies by vicariously murdering someone, and to assuage our consciences by seeing the murderer captured and punished. Mysteries are the classic literary example of having our cake and eating it, too.

Mankind reaches a highly arguable moral point whenever someone invents a method to warn against the presence of The Law.

There is argument now over a $50 transistor device that emits a beep cautioning a motorist to slow down on approaching a radar trap. It is illegal under the Federal Radio Act to install them in private cars, but enforcement is left to local authorities.

Their availability may comfort those who motorists as they continue their way after being flagged to the curb—that radar traps are more often placed to plump the township exchequer than they are to control the traffic.

Commenting on the transistor device, Hamilton Traffic Inspector John Robinson has said: "They accomplish what we are trying to do—get people to slow down."

Paroxysmal Tachycardia May Require Treatment

By JOSEPH C. HOLMES, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What is paroxysmal tachycardia? My 16-year-old son has been told not to take gym or swim after a doctor found this condition in a checkup. — A. D.

"Tachycardia" means a speeding up of the rate of the heart beats. "Paroxysmal" means that this comes on in sudden spells.

The condition may be more of a nuisance than anything else. It may indicate that treatment is necessary.

From your letter I can't be sure whether this condition was noted in a routine, mass check-up at school, or whether your physician discovered it.

If it was the former, you should take the boy to your own doctor, or perhaps to a heart specialist.

However, if your own physician already is in charge of the case, he will continue periodic checking.

It may be that your son can return to athletics again, if he may be necessary for some program of treatment.

Dear Dr. Molner: I had rickets as a child and am slightly swaybacked. Is there any way to correct that? — Mrs. H.

Usually not, after you have reached maturity, so I suggest that you let orthopedic specialize whether exercises will help; whether a brace or special garment will help; or whether you should accept the condition — and forget it.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please describe epilepsy. My grandson, eight years old, was found on the floor at 7:15 a.m. in front of the TV. Don't know how long he had been there but he was jerking all over. Later he got up and went on as though nothing had happened.

He has always made good grades in school. The family doctor advised my daughter that it was epilepsy, but not to tell the boy — to treat him just like they had always done. — P. V.

Epilepsy is a condition involving the nervous system — part of the brain — so that the muscles go into convulsion. There are many degrees of this. Sometimes the sufferer falls to the floor. In another type, petit mal, there may be only very brief moments; the person merely pauses in the middle of a word, then continues as though nothing had happened. Sometimes, the flickering of the TV screen may trigger an attack.

There is no doubt why this little fellow shouldn't be good in school. Epilepsy (with some exceptions) isn't related to intelligence; noted geniuses have had it.

The boy should not be bothered now with trying to understand epilepsy. That can come later. His doctor should prescribe daily medication to prevent the convulsions, even though this cannot "cure epilepsy." Modern drugs' (non-habit-forming) have been developed to the degree that many children have got along for years without an attack.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have been troubled with gouty arthritis for five years. Recently I have been taking colchicine pill daily to ward off attacks. Is this too frequent? — Robert T.

It is not too frequent.

Rail Rates Unreasonable

Montreal Gazette

It is a strange fact that when Canada has produced record huge quantities of wheat to Russia, Eastern Europe and China that, of all the parties involved in the production, transportation, storage and handling of this commodity, only the railways are restricted to the rates of remuneration set in the days of Queen Victoria.

These ancient rates have long been a conspicuous anomaly. But they have never been as anomalous as they are today, when so much of the obligation of carrying so much grain is placed upon the railways at charges set in such far off times.

The story of these fantastic rates is worth recalling. It begins in Queen Victoria's reign in 1897. At that time the CPR entered into an agreement to reduce the rates on grain and flour to the Lakehead from such shipping points as then existed in the West. The reduction in rates was three cents per 100 pounds. In return for this reduction in rates, the CPR received a subsidy of $3.4 million to assist in the construction of a railway line from Lethbridge in Alberta through the Crowsnest Pass to Nelson in British Columbia.

This explains why the term "Crowsnest Pass rates" came to be used. In all the years that have passed since 1897 not only have these rates not been increased; they have actually been reduced.

* * *

The old Crowsnest Pass agreement of 1897 terminated in 1933 and the CPR's profit by it. Though it had received a subsidy of $3.4 million to assist in the construction of the line through the Crowsnest Pass, the cost of the line was in excess of $11 million.

In 1925 the federal Parliament, so far from revising the old Crowsnest rates in accordance with changing conditions, actually revised them downwards. The rates of 1925 were set at three cents per 100 pounds lower than those of 1897.

Moreover, all railways became obligated in 1925 to carry export grain and grain products from all the shipping points on all their lines. Still further, they had to carry this freight not only to the Lakehead but to the ports on the Pacific as well.

The new situation created by the massive shipments of grain to Russia, Eastern Europe and China should bring about the end of these anomalous "Crowsnest" rates. The importance of Western agriculture to the Canadian economy, and the need of assisting its transportation to its markets, are not the questions in dispute. The trouble has arisen from the very fact that Western agriculture is not receiving the subsidy that is believed to be needed.

The device of having the railways transport Western wheat and flour at rates even lower than those of 1897 is not subsidizing Western agriculture so much as it is dislocating the Canadian economy through the distortions in the freight rate structure. It is evading public responsibility to Western agriculture by creating a private railway problem for the public.

All that the railways ask is that the assistance being granted to Western agriculture be recognized for what it is and not to be used to subsidize industry by the people of Canada. If it is a matter of national policy that Western agriculture should be subsidized, then it becomes a public responsibility. It is not one that should, or can, be assumed by the railways.

The old so-called "Crowsnest Pass" rates are no solution whatever; they can never be a solution. The policy of trying to evade one problem by creating another is not only becoming increasingly anomalous; it is also becoming increasingly futile. The time has come to bring it to an end.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden resigned from the cabinet of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain 26 years ago today in 1938—in protest against the Munich pact with Hitler. Later he was for five years a foreign secretary in Churchill's war cabinet, to rally, briefly, as the first prime minister, himself in 1955 but resigned in 1957 following the storm of controversy over the Suez crisis of 1956.

1457—James I, king of Scotland, was assassinated by a group of nobles.

Few People Today Are Fit

Brantford Expositor

Four Canadian executives out of five cannot pass a simple test of physical efficiency and tested to Canadian youth have shown that 86 out of every 100 are unfit.

The standards applied in each case were not those one would expect of a trained athlete or long-distance runner, but were measurements of normal functional efficiency and ability to perform ordinary daily tasks without undue fatigue. Similar tests of the same time showed a higher rate of fitness among European youth.

Almost any Canadian or American you meet will readily admit that he gets little or no exercise and that he owes it to his house to garage and from parking lot to office, factory or shop, with, in some cases, maybe a weekly round of golf or an occasional swim.

Many people are mildly disturbed about their lack of adequate exercise, but few have the willpower to do anything about it. Almost all of us have succumbed to the ease which mechanization has imposed on our lives.

So far as it has taken the drudgery out of certain household and industrial tasks, it is to be welcomed. Even so, it is probable that much of mankind's daily activities keep her fitter than other members of the family, for housework is more strenuous than most males think.

Members of Seven Churches In East End of City Hold Brotherhood Week Dinner

International religious are coming much closer together as result of inter-faith work done in the past five to ten-years.

This was stated last night by Rev. Edward L. Bader, Paulist priest from Toronto as he spoke to approximately 150 East Belleville, church congregationalists at a Brotherhood Week banquet held at St. Joseph's Church parish hall.

Congregation members from seven churches of different faiths in the east end of the city attended the function, which has now become an annual event. Last year the Brotherhood Week dinner was held at Eastminster Church.

Father Bader said that the little-talk work being carried on at the priest, minister and rabbi level was resulting in changing attitude toward other religions.

AT PARISH LEVEL

This, he said, was very good, but for ultimate effectiveness the work must also be carried on the parish level.

"Unless the people themselves are brought together there is not much use," Father Bader said. "The people must come together on terms of understanding."

One of the most important things about inter-faith work is that you must learn to listen — not just wait until the other persons is finishing, speaking, the speaker went on.

Parish groups invariably start out on the defensive when inter-faith talks are commenced. This, however, was wrong. People should not try to prove but rather explain the structure, attitude and history of their own religions.

This, Father Bader said, was an approach to change which was coming in inter-faith talks today.

COULD SEE CHANGE

Father Bader said he could see the change in inter-faith relations particularly among students.

"They are interested in trying to understand; they realize that people cannot stay apart."

Such an attitude, Father Bader said, did not lead to indifference, but rather to a deepening of what other faiths believe—and why.

In conclusion the speaker said that inter-faith discussions were trying to accomplish at the local level, what the ecumenical council was trying to do in Rome.

Bernard Hoey, president of the St. Joseph's Holy Name Society, was chairman for the Brotherhood Week dinner, while Ted Schwab introduced the guest speaker. Mayor Jack Ellis extended a civic welcome.

Church heads of all congregations in East Belleville were head table guests for the dinner.

HEAD TABLE GUESTS

Head table guests included: Rev. J. A. Dunlop, St. Margaret's-on-the-Hill; Dr. Alfred Arthur, Emmanuel Baptist Church; Rev. N. W. Hutchinson, St. Columba Presbyterian Church; Rabbi Joseph Berglas, Sons of Jacob Synagogue; Mr. Max Wodzak, Holy Trinity Church; Rev. J. J. V. Buckley, St. Joseph's Parish, and Rev. A. McDowell, Eastminster United Church.

An atmosphere of brotherhood was seen throughout the meeting with the occasional touch of humor serving to enliven the occasion.

Senior Citizens Hold Meeting

The Senior Citizens met in the Recreation Centre on Wednesday evening with a good attendance. The evening was spent playing penny bingo and the lucky draw was won by Mrs. Milne.

Following the evening's activities, refreshments were served by Mrs. Ford and her committee.

Father Buckley said the fact that the sale of tickets had to be limited spoke more for brotherhood than anything else he might say.

Rev. A. McDowell of Eastminster Church, said that when he first came to Belleville his first services were conducted at the Sons of Jacob Synagogue.

And when Rev. N. Hutchinson of St. Columba Presbyterian Church, introduced his parishioners he wondered if he might not call them "Knights of Columba."

HANDS ACROSS THE TABLE . . . are symbol of togetherness at last night's "Brotherhood Week" dinner at St. Joseph's Parish Hall. Left to right are Rev. J. A. Dunlop; Father P. J. Buckley; Rev. A. McDowell; Father Edward L. Bader, guest speaker; Rev. N. Hutchinson; Ralph Berglas; Bernard Hoey, president of St. Joseph's Holy Name Society; Dr. Alfred Arthur, and Mr. Max Wodzak.

Deseronto News

More Money Asked for Two Sections

DESERONTO — Under the head of new business two chairmen of Committees made agend to get proposed inclusions in their budget discussed in Council on Monday last.

On the call for new business Chairman Howard of the Fire and Police Committees rose to inform Council of proposed additions to his budget.

He said that he was going to recommend an outside switch to be placed on the fire alarm of the tower, recommend the removal of the tower to another site, purchase of a portable telephone with plug-in attachment that could be carried from house to house.

The chairman was unable to provide actual estimates of cost for these additions but did intimate that the cost two would run over seven hundred dollars in cost.

He stated that he had been unable to get an estimate on the telephone. He thought that he "might have to go to Detroit to do this."

Chairman Howard neglected to state why the telephone was needed.

Chairman Percy Brooks added his proposed budget additions when-he brought up the question of the purchase of a new truck for the town.

He carefully outlined the various considerations that might be made in the purchase raising the question whether the old truck should be kept, adapted to new needs that could be found-on a completely new vehicle.

Reeve Alford agreed that a new truck was necessary and that "too much was being spent on the old truck."

After some discussion the Mayor informed the Council that the requests of committees should be considered in budget requirements in full so that they could be dealt with under the proper circumstances.

Owner Protests Nearness of Cream Stand

DESERONTO — Among letters read at the meeting of the town council last Monday was that of Mr. T. Kirby of Kingston who was writing on the problem of the ice cream stand on Stanley Street.

Mr. Kirby said that he was in full agreement with the letter council received from the Jordans, the family living next door to the ice cream refreshment booth stands, and wished to add his protest to theirs.

He indicated that he is now full owner of the property next to Jordan's and bordering the Public School and would therefore like to enter his protest along with that of his neighbor. Council stated that the by-laws committee had already discussed the receipt of the letter and had in fact recommended that it be turned over to the Board of Health.

He indicated that he is in discussion from the Board of Health as to what action it will take on the issue.

RESIGNATION ACCEPTED

Council was read the letter of resignation from former Constable Harry Allan "for personal reasons" and moved that the resignation be accepted.

A letter from the Commanding Officer of the now disbanded Golden Hawks acknowledged receipt of the request for the use of the Deseronto area for aerobatics.

The letter explained the reason for the cessation of flying and said that residents or Deseronto was no longer be so inconvenienced.

A letter from Branch 280 of the Royal Canadian Legion (Deseronto) was received and the request to obtain use of the local park for a Jamboree on August 14th and 15th granted.

Board Takes Steps to End Cold War

DESERONTO — At a special meeting Tuesday night the School Board of this town took the first step towards ending the cold war that has existed between them and the Council.

Acting on the advice of their solicitor and on the recent amendment to the School Administration Act the local board rescinded a previous motion to seek the aid of the court for monies to meet their commitments.

On the basis on the new bill they will now exercise their own borrowing power.

The meeting was called by Chairman John Neal of the Board when it became apparent that the motion made by the Town Council in January requiring an itemized breakdown of expenditures on the operation of the High School Account could not be legally contested.

A letter from K. G. M. Ross, council for the Board, indicated that the motion of the Council was too ill-defined and failed to make express indication that the funds would not be paid.

His recommendation was that the Board rescind their motion and secure their funds on the basis of the new bill recently put on the Provincial books.

The Bill, No. 96 of the School Administration Act, now authorizes Boards for Education to borrow from chartered banks in order to meet their expenditures.

In order to best present their case the School Board met and discussed the situation as a committee of the whole then opened the meeting to the public the two motions now in effect.

The first motion, rescinding that of two weeks ago seeking legal advice, was a recorded vote, and was carried unanimously.

The second motion, also unanimous, authorized the Board of Education "to borrow money from a chartered bank by way of promissory notes until sums as the Board may deem necessary to meet current expenditures of the board until current revenues have been received."

'Lines on Life'

By Dr. Stuart B. Rosenberg

"There is so much good in the worst of us,
So much bad in the best of us,
That it scarcely behooves any of us,
To talk about the rest of us!"

Dr. Gordon Allport, eminent psychologist, has been studying these problems for many years. His researches offer us tell-tale clues about the nature of prejudice and the mental processes which are part of prejudice. The most significant fact he has taught, must be carefully remembered: "The style of thinking that is characteristic of prejudice is a relation, by and large, of the individual pattern of way of thinking about anything."

This basic pattern in the mental life of prejudiced people can be demonstrated in four tell-tale ways.

DISORDERLY THOUGHT

In the first place, such folk habitually engage in what might be called black-or-white, "either-or" thinking. Either a thing is good — or, it is bad. Either a man, woman, race, religion, or country — is good, or it is bad. There are only two categories for any given situation: good or bad; right or wrong. That both good and bad, right and wrong intermingle and criss-cross in virtually every human being or group, seems to be an impossible thought for the prejudiced mind to harbor. It cannot conceive of "maybe" as an answer to any given question.

Second, the mind that is capable of irrational prejudice against fellow human beings, has now been shown, is also a mind that has no tolerance for ambiguity. It has a need for definiteness; it wants always to be very, very certain about things. Public Image Of Farmers Needs Changing -- Hays

TORONTO (CP) — Agriculture Minister Hays told the annual meeting of the Holstein-Friesian Association of Canada today that "the public image of Canadian farmers needs improvement."

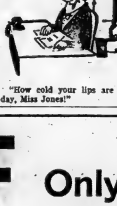
The Canadian farmer feeds the average Canadian cheaper than any other farmer in the known world and feeds him well too, he said.

"Just 19 cents of the average Canadian dollar goes for food. Only the United States shows a lower figure but the consumer pays through subsidy programs that dwarf those of Canada.

"When people leave the idea that farmers are heavily subsidized they will actually, only three per cent of their disposable incomes goes to support agriculture compared with 20 per cent for health and welfare and defence and 15 per cent for service to the public debt.

"In the U.S., 7% per cent is spent on agriculture," he said.

Ralph Winkler, Consecon, vice-president, told the annual meeting that of the 16 shipments of foreign countries last year, three—to South Africa, West Germany and Bolivia — were first shipments.



Secretary - manager G. M. Clemons of Brantford said membership in the association is 13,837.

Six Ontario members were awarded master breeder shields, the highest award offered breeders. They were: H. S. Ruckle, Ingersoll; Byrd Bikker and Robert Perrin, Ayr, Ephraim Fried, Kitchener; Stewart Nelson, Keene, and Hooper Bros. Bay, Moss Jones!"

EXPECTS WARM WELCOME

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson said Wednesday he is sure Queen Elizabeth will receive a warm welcome in Quebec in October. Mr. Pearson was replying to Robert Muir (PC — Cape Breton North and Victoria) who suggested that the Queen visit Nova Scotia instead of Quebec in view of some expressed opinion that she will not be welcome in the French-speaking province.

Council Votes To Spend $250 On Duct Work

DESERONTO — Acting upon the recommendation of the chairman of property the town council voted Monday night to authorize the expenditure of $250 for duct work in the fire hall.

Chairman Sharpe was following up his report to the January council meeting at which he indicated the survey of the town's fire hall had shown a definite need for a more efficient heating of the building.

"The vents from the furnace are at the ceiling," he said. "Temperatures at that height are often as high as 90 degrees. By bringing the duct work to floor level a more efficient job will be done in heating the rather difficult building."

Mr. Sharpe pointed out that the furnace had been installed by an out-of-town firm. Since there was a local firm to both install and service the equipment he thought it only fair that the local merchant get the job.

Council agreed with the chairman and voted to expend the money required to improve the heating system.

At the same meeting a report from the fire and police committee requested the sum of $75 towards expenses for the March meeting of the Firemen's Mutual Aid Society.

Council agreed to provide the money and indicated to the committee chairman Hubert Howard that they will be in attendance at the Mutual Aid meeting, when held in the local Legion hall on March 4th.

Postulant's Day Carefully Planned at Novitiate

Wedding Ring Club Holds Variety Night

The Wedding Ring Club of College Hill United held a variety night on Monday evening in College Hill social hall with a large crowd in attendance.

The program consisted of Charleston dance number; skits of "Dr. Hasty" and "Before and After in Driving Lessons"; piano duet; pantomime; fashion show; barbershop harmony; magic act; recitations; ballet and old time music.

Rev. Bruce Bexley of Engelhart acted as master of ceremonies and the Rev. Gordon Hoult of Little Britain was a guest artist. Both of these gentlemen were former ministers of College Hill.

The club plans to have a repeat performance, same place, same time on March 2nd.

A short business meeting was held after the program with president Lewis McMillin in charge.

Refreshments were served to the east by Keith and Joan Richards' group bringing on other delightful evening to a close.

RICHMOND HILL, Ont. (CP) — Rosy - cheeked girls frolicking in the snow fitted into what seemed to be a typical winter scene in a recreation area of this Toronto suburb.

But underneath the bundling of winter clothing with its gay colors were plain black dresses and veils.

The girls are postulants, preparing to be nuns in the Order of Our Lady's Missionaries, and fun in the outdoors has a place in their training.

"A postulant's day is carefully planned to foster good sense, emotional stability, adaptability and a sense of humor, all necessary qualities to be a good nun," says Sister Mary Joseph, the superior general.

The novitiate is the only Roman Catholic missionary order for English-speaking girls in Canada. Young girls train for three years on traditional precepts of study, prayer, work and recreation.

For two hours each day the postulants join with the novices and nuns in tobogganing, playing hockey, baseball or bridge.

The order is relatively new, founded in 1949 by the late Rt. Rev. D. R. MacDonald at Alexandria, Ont. The oldest nun is 42.

JOBS ARE VARIED

The postulant starts her day at 6 a.m., spends three hours in the chapel and doing spiritual reading, another three hours in class studying such subjects as theology and scripture, and three hours more at household chores which include preparing meals, doing laundry and ironing.

When the girls complete their postulancy they exchange their simple black skirts, jackets and veils for the white traditional ankle-length novice habit. And after two years as novices they make their first profession of vows of poverty, chastity and obedience. These are renewed each year for five years until final vows are made. The girls are free to leave the convent anytime before then.

A variety of professions is offered the candidates after her first vows. She may be trained in nursing, hospital administration, catechetics, social work, x-ray technique, sports instructing, midwifery, drug dispensing and teaching are options.

Sister Mary Joseph says the order is growing fast. In 14 years it has grown to 64 sisters with 14 novices and nine postulants training here. Candidates include girls from Cuba, the Philippines, South America and every province but Manitoba.

The order's common goal: "To go forth as missionaries and give to others what we have received."

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

On Tuesday evening, February 18th, Xi Beta Zeta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi entertained two sister chapters at the home of Mrs. Bruce Bishop. Members of Alpha Lambda and Gamma Mu Chapters were treated to a spirited auction of children's clothing under the direction of Mrs. Fern House and Mrs. Verna Nettleton. A plentiful basket of groceries and canned goods was the object of a draw. A sale of home baking was taken advantage of by all, and the table was soon depleted. Sandwiches and coffee served by the social committee brought a most successful evening to a close.

The regular meeting of Alpha Lambda Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority was held on Monday evening at the home of Mrs. G. Brown.

The president, Mrs. Joan Thompson conducted the business portion on the meeting.

Mrs. R. E. Wood introduced Sorority sister, Mrs. F. Boretski, who presented a program entitled "Express Yourself." Each member present gave a three minute speech on a subject of her choice and Mrs. G. Brown was presented with a corsage for the prettiest talk.

Mrs. R. Lumbers, on behalf of the Sorority thanked Mrs. Boretski for her interesting presentation.

Refreshments were served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. B. Wardman.

Two Couples Enjoy Job Working Running Horses

CALEDON, Ont. (CP) — For sheer togetherness, two couples at Conn Smythe's thoroughbred racehorse farm near here are way out in front.

Jim and Theo Miller form a husband - and - wife combination as exercise boys (or girls), Ruth Woodcock has the same job, and her husband Charles is a groom.

The four started out in Suffolk, England, tending horses, and when they came to Canada they all obtained jobs at the farm operated in the Caledon Hills northwest of Toronto by Mr. Smythe, former boss of the Toronto Maple Leafs hockey team and one of Canada's most successful horse breeders.

In England, exercise boys look after two horses each and are expected to do all their chores for them. In Canada, however, the work is limited to riding — although they handle more horses.

Mrs. Woodcock confesses her interest in horses goes back to childhood although she's not sure how a youngster brought up on the outskirts of London could develop such an interest.

"I took up my mind I wanted to ride and learned by riding the ponies in Hyde Park. As soon as I left school, I applied for work at a thoroughbred stable. That's where I met my husband Charlie."

She explains that Charlie is too big to be a rider but that his size is an asset in his work as a groom — "when Charlie holds a horse's head I know it will be held firmly."

Morning starts at sunrise for the riders, even during sub-zero weather.

"When it's very cold we keep the horses out for shorter periods of time," Mrs. Miller says. "But they have to be kept in condition even if your fingers go numb."

Fortunately for the girls they're not particularly interested in affairs that call for dresses and hats.

"I feel completely undressed in a sheath skirt," says Mrs. Miller. "Give me jeans and leotards any day."

Even recreation involves horses-on days off they get out to the racetrack to watch one of their favorites run.

The only regret the wives have is that they can't hope to become jockeys, although Mrs. Woodcock was allowed to ride at the Caledon Fair last fall and won.

"Jim can hope for a chance to become a jockey," Mrs. Miller says. "But this field is closed to us."

Local Union Picks Queen

Mrs. Pam Hay was chosen Queen of Hearts at the Valentine dance sponsored by Local Union No. 439 of Belleville. It was presented with a box of chocolates and a bouquet of roses. Miss Jean O'Hara was runner-up, and Mrs. Judy Ryan was second. They both received chocolates and a bouquet of chrysanthemums.

A large crowd was present and enjoyed dancing to the music of Ray De Francio and his band. A number of door prizes were given and refreshments were served.

VON Report Shows More Visits Made

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of the Victorian Order of Nurses was held on Monday, February 17 at the Y.M.C.A. The new president, Mrs. James Neiles presided.

Miss Connor and Miss Olive Root reported on their visit to a joint Victorian Order of Nurses and Canadian Cancer Society dinner meeting in Trenton.

President Mrs. Neiles read a letter from head office giving notice that the 66th Annual V.O.N. meeting will be held at the Chateau Laurier in Ottawa, May 7 and 8th.

It is hoped that president Mrs. Neiles, head nurse Miss Connors and national representative Mr. Franklin will attend.

It was suggested that Mr. Larry Lynch be appointed to represent the V.O.N. on the United Appeal committee. A letter was read from the National Board of the Victorian Order of Nurses advising that bursaries are available to interested girls in their final yea, of training.

Miss Dorothy Connor reported that in January, 548 visits to 170 patients had been made, an increase of 70 more patients than January last year. Five half days were spent at special activities; two half days were spent at Douglas Aikin School and three half days at Carnahico-Corbyville School.

Mrs. Robert Smith was appointed convener of the V.O.N. tea to be held early in May.

Successful Living

Mother of Six Feels Swamped and Inadequate

DORIS CLARK

HELP, DORIS! — My nightmares have returned and I wake each morning with an urgent desire to run and/or disappear. Sure hope you can help!

What I wouldn't give to be back in a nice hectic country school with nothing to worry about but teaching eight classes! But with six youngsters — who can do that?

I only wish I'd had the same kind of training for marriage, home management and child raising that I had for teaching. After struggling on my own for ten years and being a complete flop, I must find help and encouragement somewhere.

Housework is always behind, my food bills and cooking are ridiculous, child training is pitiful and my appearance and theirs worse. The children don't know what it's like to have a happy, smiling "Mom". All they have is a screaming maniac who keeps yelling "Who made this mess?" I'm a nervous wreck and I'm driving them into being resentful, hateful, disobedient little creatures.

Please, where do I start? Where can I find out how to do things efficiently and keep some kind of routine? And somehow find time for me, my appearance, and one or two of my interests? — NIGHTMARE.

DEAR NIGHTMARE — You and several thousand — or is it million? — others! Raising a family of six takes rugged resolution and uncommon strength. If we didn't love the little creatures so much, we wouldn't pull through as often as we do.

Fractionize — which is a favorite technique of social workers. Means tackling one thing at a time.

I'd start with a cleaning woman, for the heavy chores. Then the beginnings of cheery, competent child training. Your little ones are bright enough to enjoy making a game, with you, of bedmaking, dishwashing, picking up toys. Praise and rewards — instead of screams — can steady your nerves and theirs.

Agreed that you need training for this career. How about an extension course in household science — or just plain cooking?

When you've made some inroads write again and we'll talk about budgets.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — My steady used to be so sweet, and we would never be angry with each other. But lately he has been snapping at me almost every time I speak to him. He makes me feel dull to be with.

I couldn't stand losing him. Although I don't boss him around or anything, lately he seems to get a kick out of ordering me around and saying things that hurt me a lot.

Is it possible that he is testing me out to find out how much hurt I will take and to find out if I really do love him? — TORMENTED.

DEAR TORMENTED — Well, if he is, you'd better show you won't take it. My guess is he's showing his true colors — unless he has suddenly taken ill!

P.S. — Anyone may have a private reply by enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Your letter also asked about this.

* * *

To S. S. — Apply to your local Y.W.C.A. and to the National Employment Service. Girls often go together to work at the same camp or resort and are company for each other.

* * *

To WANTING PEN PAL (S.S.) — Write to Mrs. Hilda McNutt, Director of Overseas Correspondence, c/o United Nations Association in Canada, 329 Bloor St. West, Toronto 5, Ontario, for the name of a pen pal in Australia.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — In a recent news item I see that the World Health Organization supports the U.S. findings that there is a connection between the number of cigarettes smoked and lung cancer rates.

If this is so, why don't people just quit? Would you take poison if there was a chance it would kill you? — QUERY.

* * *

DEAR QUERY — That's too open and shut. Of course not.

But smoking and other long term habits don't respond so easily to sudden resolutions — They meet "an emotional need"! So the secret is to fill the gap with routines just as satisfying and better for you. Not easy, but it's being done all over the place.

I'm sending you the leaflet "Why Smoke?", which outlines some practical strategies for deserting the noxious weed. (Available to anyone sending in ten cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

Question: My fiance has always been called "BILL," and that's the name he wants used on our wedding invitations and announcements. Since his given name is William, I think this should be used. I have to give the copy to the printer shortly, so would you please settle this little discussion for us as soon as possible? — M. C., Bay Shore, N. Y.

Answer: Only formal legal names of both bride and bridegroom are used on wedding invitations and announcements. Nicknames are not correct in this instance.

Question: I wasn't able to send thank-you notes for all of our wedding gifts before my marriage. Many arrived the week before the wedding, and I'm now catching up on this task. My problem, though, is the signature for the notes. When I acknowledged gifts before my marriage, I signed notes with my maiden name. Should I continue to sign only my own name — using my married surname, naturally — or should the signature contain both our names?

Like "Mary and Jim!"? I'd appreciate your help with this problem. — Mrs. E. W., Boston, Mass.

Answer: Thank-you notes are signed only with the signature of the bride, signing them from "Mary and Jim" is incorrect. "Jim's" appreciation of the gift is expressed in the note itself — something to the effect that "Jim and I just love the tea set," etc. A note sent to a relative or best friend would simply be signed "Mary." One sent to someone who might not readily recognize your married name would be signed "Mary Jones Taylor."

U.C.W. Meeting

RAWDON U.C.W.

RAWDON — The February meeting of Mount Pleasant-Rawdon United Church Women was held Wednesday with 22 ladies present.

Mrs. Garth Joslin was pianist and Mrs. Donald Knight presided and lead her call to worship on the theme, "Prayer." A brief silence was observed for a deceased life member. Reports were presented by Mrs. Robert H. Hoard and Mrs. Raymond McConnell. Delegates were appointed to attend the Presbyterial meeting at Napanee.

Mrs. Ross Jeffs and Mrs. Oscar Merrick were in charge of the program centred on "Love" with a Bible selection read in unison. Mrs. Burton Sharpe gave the meditation and Mrs. Percy MacMullen dedicated the offering. A sing-song of hymns on the theme followed. Mrs. James Hoard read an inspirational paper on "Love and Prayer" and Mrs. Ernest Spencer closed the devotional.

The convener conducted the Bible study on stewardship, which was followed by a discussion. Mrs. Herbert Smith and Mrs. Raymond McConnell gave the highlights of their recent visit to the United Church Publishing House, the Overseas Depot where good used clothing is prepared for shipment at the Fred Victor Mission. A glowing account was given of the work carried on at this institution.

Mrs. Ralph Jeffs and Mrs. Norman McConnell provided the refreshments and all enjoyed a social half hour.

Women's Activities

CHATTERTON W.I.

The February meeting of the Chatterton Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Albert Carson with an attendance of 15 members and two visitors.

The president, Mrs. Carson, opened the meeting with a poem. A summary day for "Focus on Finishes" will be held on February 21st at Stirling Community Hall. A letter was read from the provincial president, Mrs. Mary Trivers.

The convener for the program was Mrs. Harold Reid. The topic on education was prepared by Mrs. Leonard Frost and read by Mrs. Gerald Irvine. "The child has four teachers—the home, the school, the church and the community. From his own community, a boy or girl can rise to any post desired: ambassador, statesman, leader in church, art, law, medicine. Parents should take a long look when a baby comes into their home that they do their part to prepare that child to fulfill the life his Creator intended he should."

The current events were given by Mrs. C. B. Gardiner. Mrs. David Little gave a two-minute reading from the handbook on the standing committee of a branch, its duties and functions. Mrs. W. D. Dixon and Mrs. Little favored with a duet. Mrs. Harold Reid gave a reading, and also conducted a contest.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Frank Follwell.

Spanish Picadillo With No Peccadillos

by Mary Moore

In December, '62 a reader asked me for a Spanish main dish to serve to friends leaving on a trip to Spain. I had one from a trusted food expert but had not tried it. I admitted this but gave it in the column because the reader was in a hurry.

This turned out to be a great success with other readers, so I decided I should know what they were raving about. This week we made it, making a few minor changes, and it is a dandy dish. I used ground chuck, but you could try ground round or even good-quality hamburg if you like.

Dinner Menu

THURSDAY

Roast Chicken; Chicken Gravy; Red Currant Jelly; Hot Tea Biscuits; Kernel Corn with Chopped Steamed Green Peppers; Relishes: Celery and Carrot Sticks; Fruited Orange Whip (see Tuesday); Tea.

SPANISH PICADILLO (a highly recommended ground beef dish):

¼ cup butter or margarine, 1 garlic clove, chopped, 1 large onion, chopped, 1 green pepper, chopped coarsely, 4 sprigs parsley, chopped, 1½ lbs. good-quality ground beef, ¼ cup Sultana raisins, ¼ cup blanched almonds (whole), 2 tablespoons sliced stuffed olives, 1 tablespoon capers (optional), 2 bay leaf, crumbled, 2 teaspoons salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ½ cup tomato paste, 1 cup water, ½ cup dry wine (optional).

In a large frying pan melt butter or margarine and in it gently saute the garlic, onion, green pepper and parsley until limp but not brown. Add beef stirring with fork to break up all lumps and brown it until gold. Add all remaining ingredients but the wine, and simmer, covered for 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add wine and serve very fluffy rice. Serves 6.

Besides delighting you because it is another ground beef dish to add to your bulging file, this meat dish may be made in advance and stored ice cold in your refrigerator for a day or two and is excellent for your chafing dish.

If you are going to make it in advance and reheat it you will have to add a little more water, — about ½ to 1 cup — to make it moist enough to stir while it is heating up. If you are going to serve it from your chafing dish, reheat it first over low heat on the stove, stirring, then place it over sterno flame in chafing dish.

The method for cooking rice so that it results in separate, fluffy grains has been given here umpteen times but I still get requests for cooking it properly. So here goes again: In a heavy pot to one cup long-grain rice (not quick-cooking) add one teaspoon salt and 2 cups boiling water. Cover and bring to boil. Do not remove lid. Turn off heat for 5 minutes. Turn on heat as low as possible for 25 to 30 minutes until all water is absorbed and rice is tender.

Mary Attend Valentine Ball

Amid cupids and hearts and heavily laden banquet tables approximately 200 dancers entered in the Valentine season at the annual Valentine ball in St. Michael's auditorium, sponsored by St. Michael's Catholic Women's League.

The guests were welcomed at the door by C.W.L. president, Mrs. Marge Rachotte and dance convener, Mrs. Helen Sheridan and shown to their tables by ticket convener, Mrs. Marg. Donoghoe.

Mr. Bruce Lynch was master of ceremonies who kept proceedings running smoothly from the first "Paul Jones," through the "Rye Waltz" led by Mr. and Mrs. Ben Burley, to the "Home Waltz". The winners of the various spot dances were: Mr. and Mrs. Ed. McKinney; Mr. Jack Marta and Mrs. Leo McKee; Mrs. Marilyn Marta and Mr. Rob Collins; Mr. Joe Miles and Miss Joan McPhie. A floral centrepiece was won by Mrs. Honor Burke.

The "Ball" is the one big event in the parish whose existence depends on the cooperation of all and this includes the women in the kitchen, those who check the coats, the men who sell the soft drinks, the dance conveners and last but not least all those who purchase the tickets for this special affair, all adding up to the ultimate success.

Trent Valley Area Executive Holds Meeting

By MRS. PERCY MacMULLEN

STIRLING — Mrs. Grant McQuest, Shannonville, Provincial Junior Director for Subdivision 6 of the Trent Valley area Women's Institutes, comprising three Districts in Hastings County and one in Prince Edward, held an executive meeting in the W.M.A. in Belleville recently.

The International scholarship fund is the only provincial project and it is hoped to complete it this year and thus reach $50,000. Mrs. Ira Privers, provincial great Institute organization should be recognized and urges that donations be channelled in the right direction.

The safety project for 1964 is "the use and misuse of poison." Each branch Institute is to work out its own program along these lines.

Miss Ethel Chapman's book, "Years of Rosedale Privilege" is available at 20 Spadina Road, Toronto, and all proceeds go to the scholarship fund.

PENNIES FOR FRIENDSHIP

Mrs. Goddrey Drage, the founder of "Pennies for Friendship" died in November 1963. A memorial page appears in the Countrywoman magazine. F.W.I.O. donated the $300 collected since October to her memory. Mrs. Drage was born in 1878 and in 1913 she and Mrs. Alfred Watt began the W.I. movement in Wales. In 1931 as chairman of the A.C.W.W. Simmee committee she decided that if countrywomen wanted international work to flourish they must pay for it themselves, through the idea of pennies for friendship.

The A.C.W.W. competitions at assay and song are to be judged at District level and one of each forwarded to the provincial office by July 1st.

The national convention will be held in Wolfville, Nova Scotia in June, and the program will be centred around "a look at the Province."

The A.C.W.W. conference sessions are in Ireland in September, 1965. A plane has been chartered to accommodate 135. Institute members and should be made at an early date.

HANDICRAFT BOOTH

Articles for the handicraft booth at the national convention should be forwarded soon to the District secretary-treasurer. Each Board is asked for one article valued from $1 to $1.50. This officer will receive full directions from the provincial office.

Prince Edward county has instituted its own scholarship of $2,000 and presented it to Mrs. Ingrid Holder for F.W.I.O.

It was stressed that conveners at all levels send in their reports and thus have 100 percent reporting at the annual meeting.

On November 17 in the Agricultural Hall of Fame in the C.N.E. grounds an unveiling ceremony was held. A painting of the founder of Women's Institutes, Mrs. Adelaide Hunter Hoodless was hung on the wall opposite the entrance. She was one of twenty people so honored.

Mrs. L. G. Lymburner brought in an emergency resolution which was accepted. This stated that "whereas there is an alarming shortage of persons qualified to teach home economics and persons to work in hospitals and institutions as dietitions and food supervisors, that the facilities at MacDonald Institute in Guelph be expanded, thus making it possible to accept more student applications and to have more research."

SUPPORT RED ENSIGN

The Federated Women's Institute of Ontario is one of several groups to support the Red Ensign as the national flag of Canada. To date over a million Canadian citizens have stated that they wish to have the Red Ensign retained.

The fees have been advanced to $1 per board member effective April 1964. Tentative dates were set for the four District annuals in this subdivision. The Federated Women's Institutes of Canada urge that the 1964 "International Day" program comprise a study of our Canadian North, which to date has ten branch Institutes in the Mackenzie district and also in the Yukon at Destruction Bay.

LIVING ALONE

MONTREAL (CP)—Mrs. Rodolphe Auger made a personal study of facility for the aged in Montreal and found that one segment is being neglected—those who have limited incomes and want to continue living on their own. The answer, she says, is special fire-proof apartment blocks containing bachelor-type units. She drew up plans for such apartments after studying facilities in other centres.

U.C.W. Meeting

U.C.W. AFTERNOON UNIT

Cannifton United Church Women's afternoon unit held a regular meeting in the church recently with 13 present.

The president, Mrs. D. Brenton opened the meeting in the usual manner, after which various reports were given including the treasurer's report by Mrs. Roy Pound. Thank-you letters were read from Mrs. Treasure, Mrs. Mills, Mrs. Loucks, Mrs. Packman, Mrs. Billings-Steele, Mr. F. Furnidge Sr. then and one from the evening unit. Since the last meeting two chairs have been purchased by the U.C.W. for the manse living room.

Members were reminded at this time of the World Day of Prayer service for all charges which was to be held at Canada United Church on the February 14, also of the Presbyterial convention to be held in Napanee on February 27 and 28. It was announced that allocation for the four churches had been raised by one third.

Mrs. T. Howard gave a fine reading based on stewardship and Mrs. Crosby in charge of the worship service had for her on "This is the Day" on which she gave a short talk.

Mrs. Roy Pound gave an informative reading on India dealing with the nation itself and the women. India is a strange mixture of the old and the new, of extreme squalor to magnificent riches. Today India is progressing politically, economically and religiously due to the willingness of other countries giving help to modernize it. Germany, Great Britain and Russia have each established huge iron mines and these have led to the growth of the larger cities. Progress is rapid when the dense population is considered. Much remains to be done and members were told it is up to the Christian churches in the western world to help India become a responsible unit among nations of the world. The women's world in India has changed and they now have the franchise to vote, act as polling officers and stand for office in elections. There are more women in public life in India than in any other country.

The president thanked all for taking part in the program and lunch was served at the close of the meeting.

The Experts Say "Cooking Should Be Creative" Claim Two Reforming Housewives

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP) — A reform school for cooks is being run by two Toronto housewives. It's called the School of International Cooking.

"We're not teaching our pupils recipes, we're teaching them to cook and they don't even know it," says the school's founder, Mrs. Benjamin Seton, wife of a Toronto real estate man.

"We seal them out of our classes changing daily cooking habits they've been using for 25 years," says her partner, Mrs. Benjamin Geneen, a psychiatrist's wife.

Mrs. Seton is a Canadian born woman who has been food conscious most of her life. Her father, in the meat business, loved to cook. The school began when she agreed to teach some of her friends and their daughters how to cook.

Mrs. Geneen, who came here from Scotland eight years ago, married into a Scottish hotel family. While her husband was in the services during the Second World War she took cooking lessons from hotel chefs and went on to classes at the famed Cordon Bleu school in London.

COOK TOO LONG

"If we had cooking should be creative so women because they have to do it," says Mrs. Seton. "An ordinary dish can become an extraordinary dish. Cooking is an art, not an occupation."

They agree that overcooking is a common Canadian fault and in class they spice recipe instructions with general hints. Mushrooms should be cooked four minutes. Vegetables should be cooked briefly in water at a rolling boil. The water should be saved for stock, because everything else should be cooked in stock, never in water. Water is for washing.

Pan-fried meats should be cooked one piece at a time and the pan allowed to come back up to proper cooking temperature before each new piece goes in.

They never forget why they're cooking. They urge pupils always to set the table attractively. For entertaining, the teachers are mid-buffet. "We encourage small, frequent dinner parties with hot food. "The smell catches the nostrils, opens the pores and sharpens the mind," says Mrs. Geneen.

"You never know what good conversation is in people until you get them around a table," says Mrs. Seton.

Coaxing the family to try something new should be no problem. "Often husbands have tried specialties in restaurants but are scared to suggest them at home because they think they take hours to cook," says Mrs. Seton. "But they also think things taste better outside. Gourmet cooking is not exotic and difficult, it's the result of care. The palate has to be developed as well as any other instinct."

BUILD SEASONING

"If the family is shy about new seasonings, use a minimum amount, say, half a teaspoon of curry when the recipe calls for a teaspoon," Mrs. Geneen advises. "Start small and learn to increase. And don't be afraid to alter recipes when you find spices you like, and the amounts that taste best to you.

"Actually, we find our pupils often say new spices don't seem to have enough taste. Their palates aren't educated yet. I think of hot dogs, and ketchup which is a staple item here, have given Canadians a taste for high spices. That's one reason Italian food is so popular."

The teachers want their pupils to try new foods when they eat out, but Mrs. Geneen says: "There is a food for hours and food for restaurants, and people shouldn't mix the two. Any food such as roast beef which should go from the oven straight to the table, should be eaten at home. In a restaurant it stands on the steam table."

"Meds to order foods which you have to wait for, or soups and sauces which need time to be at their best, are restaurant foods," says Mrs. Seton. "Good restaurants have stock pots which make fine soups."

Church Groups

EMMANUEL BAPTIST M.C.

Mrs. Paul Wiegand opened her home for the February meeting of the Mercy Ras mission circle. There were 16 present. Mrs. John MacGregor presided and Mrs. Charles Dondale presented the devotional period.

The "Faith of the Mentally Retarded Child" was the theme of the devotional and Mrs. Dondale expressed the thought that God loved children so much that He wanted none of them to remain children. A mentally retarded child has no attachment to worldly things, therefore there is a simplicity in their faith, they are receptive to religion and have an abundance of grace. Their faith should be an example to others.

Mrs. Blake Kerr gave a talk on the 1964 reading course, giving a summary of each book and stressing the reading of the Link and Visitor.

After a prayer by Mrs. Eric Quick, a work period followed. Refreshments were served by the hostesses Mrs. Sid Campbell and Mrs. Charles Dondale.

Legion L.A. Initiates New Members

On Tuesday, February 18th the regular monthly meeting of the Royal Canadian Legion Ladies' Auxiliary was held with over 40 members present. Five new members were initiated in a short but impressive ceremony. Four new applicants applied for membership.

A zone tournament for bowling will be held at Tweed on Saturday. There will be a meeting and entertainment afterwards.

The Valentine dance was a great success enjoyed by everyone. It is hoped the Spring dance will be as successful. It was reported that the euchre every Wednesday evening and Thursday afternoon were proving popular.

Mr. Dave Epstein gave a short interesting talk on the needs of the Physiotherapy department at the Belleville General Hospital. A social hour was enjoyed after the close of the meeting.

Five Sensible Reasons Why Not to Start Smoking

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am 14 and my brother is 16. We've read so much about cigarettes causing lung cancer and being bad for the heart that we are scared to death.

We aren't worried about ourselves. We don't smoke and we never want to start. It's our dad we are writing about. He smokes between two and three packs of cigarettes a day. Once in a while when he runs out he acts like a caged lion.

Mom has been after Dad to quit for a long time but he says, "What's the use? I've been smoking for 25 years. The damage is done now." Dad has a hacking cough and gets winded when he walks a flight of stairs. The doctor has said cigarettes are poison to him, but he argues with the doctor the same way he argues with Mom.

Do you think if he quit smoking now it might help him live longer? — HIS KIDS.

• • •

DEAR KIDS — I don't know if it's too late for your dad or not. I do know it's a lead-pipe cinch that he will add to the damage if he continues to smoke.

My major concern is the youth of this country — you whose lives lie ahead. If you are tempted to take up this foolish habit just remember:

(1) Smoking has never been known to improve man's physical condition or add to his years.
(2) Smoking undeniably has shortened the lives of many.
(3) Smoking is expensive.
(4) Smoking is neither sophisticated nor stylish.
(5) In the face of the damning evidence, particularly the Surgeon General's report, anyone who takes up smoking is stupid.

So who needs it?

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My friend has many sterling qualities. I value her friendship and would not want to offend her. Please tell me what to do.

For her birthday I gave her a costly piece of jewelry which I selected with special care. It was something I would have loved for myself.

She acknowledged the gift warmly, but I sensed a superficiality in her tone of voice — as if she was merely being polite. Three months have passed and I've been in her company at least two dozen times. She has yet to wear my gift.

I've tempted to tell her if she doesn't like the gift to please exchange it for something she would enjoy. Would this be rude? I need your frank opinion. — CHOMPING AT THE BIT.

• • •

DEAR BIT — Stop chomping and forget it. What you have in mind would be embarrassing to her — and to you.

One of your friend's "sterling qualities" is not graciousness. She should have worn the gift in your presence at least once — even if she thought it was atrocious.

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My husband and I both enjoy your column so much. We roared at your definition of Lace Curtain Irish — and then my husband added his own line. Will you print it?

"Lace Curtain Irish are people who have fruit in the house when nobody is sick — and flowers when nobody is dead." — THE McCARTHYS OF WHITE PLAINS.

• • •

DEAR McCARTHYS — Thank you, not only for your husband's improvement on my definition, but for your signature. Several Irish readers wrote to tell me they were insulted. I need some McCarthys on my side.

• • •

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Honor Mayor, Wife on 25th Anniversary

CAMPBELLFORD — Mayor and Mrs. Morley W. Tanner celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary here Sunday, when more than 200 persons called during the afternoon and evening.

They were married in Stirling on February 18, 1939, at St. John's Anglican church by Canon McConnell. Mrs. Tanner is the former Madge Hubble of Havelock. At the wedding 25 years ago, she was attended by her sister, Ida Hubble, now Mrs. Gerald Burkitt. Groomsman was Lorne Anderson. Both were on hand to help the couple celebrate Sunday.

Mr. Tanner is serving his second term as mayor of Campbellford.

During the afternoon, members of the town council, along with their wives, attended in a body, when on behalf of the council members, Reeve George H. Free presented Mr. and Mrs. Tanner with a silver tray. James McMullen, manager of the Public Utilities Commission presented a bouquet of flowers on behalf of PUC members.

FASHIONS FOR THE CANADIAN COTTON COUNCIL

The recent Canadian Cotton Council fashion show sponsored cotton fashions and made awards in many divisions and sections of the Canadian fashion industry. There were prizes for blouses, raincoats, beachwear, sportswear, patio clothes, sleepwear, dresses made to sell for less than $13, dresses selling from $13 to $25, and dresses going from $25 right up to $60. The winners were chosen by a panel of six judges representing retail stores. Their job was to pick the styles they thought would appeal most to the customer, in other words, the "most merchantable" fashions. They then picked the overall winner for the "most creative and merchantable" use of cotton.

Next, these same fashions were shown to a panel of fashion writers, who picked the winners, judging for "fashion excitement" only. Not one of the fashions chosen by the fashion writers had been a winner in the previous judging!

Both the fashion writers and the fashion buyers are exposed to the advance showings in New York, Paris, and the trade shows here at home. Some of the retailers have a great deal to say about the actual building of fashion lines as their international connections make them authorities in both the market here at home and the foreign markets.

DISTINCTION MADE

The distinction that the Canadian Cotton Council made was interesting, and after viewing the show, I thought that many of the styles which won in the "most merchantable" category had enough verve to be winners in the "most fashion excitement" groups. The winners in the "most saleable" groups were by no means dull and pedestrian fashions, and some of the winners in either category could well have qualified in the rival group.

All in all, I think the Canadian fashion maker deserves a hearty round of applause. The fashions were creative and imaginative in design and use of color. The accessories were of cotton and I had hoped to see a section featuring millinery made of cotton, included in the judging. There were some pretty hats shown, but they had been made specially for the show by only one milliner. There are many fine milliners specializing in pattern — fabrics to us, who would have welcomed the competition.

If you have a question on fashion, just write Pegg Rogers in care of this paper.

Canada's Largest Inland Fishing Industry Located On Great Slave Lake

By JOHN WARREN

HAY RIVER, N.W.T. (CP)— Scattered over the frozen surface of Great Slave Lake and smaller lakes almost to the Arctic Circle are more than 300 men gathering the raw material for Canada's largest inland fishing industry.

Three dozen weather-beaten boats and half as many tattered frame buildings rest here on the shore of Vale Island as a snow-covered reminder that Hay River is the centre of the industry.

In May the boats will take over where the ice fishermen leave off in the year-round process of gathering 9,000,000 pounds of trout and whitefish for U.S. markets.

This community of 1,800 on the south shore of Great Slave Lake 300 miles north of Edmonton depends to a large degree on the success of the fishing industry.

Buyers in Chicago, New York and Detroit pay between 30 and 35 cents a pound for whitefish (by far the largest part of the annual catch) and up to 50 cents for trout. The sales will pump more than $3,500,000 into the economy of this frontier town.

About 3,500,000 pounds of fish will be taken from Great Slave Lake alone this winter for preliminary processing at one of Hay River's four fish companies.

FACE LONG HAUL

The remainder of the winter's catch will reach Hay River by airplane, dogsled and bombardier, a rugged tracked vehicle capable of hauling several tons over snow and broken ice.

The longest haul is from Hottah Lake, 350 miles northwest of here, where the 12-man operation is typical of those launched on dozens of lakes north of here since the department of fisheries began encouraging the industry 20 years ago following extensive research on 21,000-square-mile Great Slave Lake.

The thing holding back expansion to "an almost infinite number of lakes" is transportation, says Jack Hitchcock, senior federal fisheries official in the region. "There's more water than land up here but you need aircraft to reach most of the lakes."

In the meantime, an estimated 70 bombardiers grind out from Hay River with supplies for hundreds of scattered fishing shacks and return with cargoes of fish.

Because fresh fish bring considerably higher prices than frozen fish, pains are taken to protect the catch from temperatures that reach 40 below.

Fish that cannot be taken immediately to the Hay River plant are carefully packed in snow where they will remain unfrozen for as long as 12 hours.

PACKED IN ICE

Heated bombardiers drive their cargo into the packing plants where it is unloaded and weighed into 60-pound lots. Still unfrozen, the fish is placed in crates between layers of ice. Transports leave almost daily with Hay River fish for the long trip down the Mackenzie Highway and into the eastern United States.

Gilead

GILEAD — Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Martin are enjoying a trip to the sunny south. They intend visiting Mr. and Mrs. Frank Walker who are spending the winter at Daytona Beach, Florida.

The men of the Friendship Guild are busy building cupboards in the kitchen of the hall. They are catering to the co-op banquet on February 25.

Mrs. John Huffman spent a few days with her aunt, Mrs. Tripp of Oshawa.

Mrs. James Huffman is spending several weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Dalrymple of Bowmanville.

The community welcomes back Mrs. Fred Yorke and Mrs. Chappell. Mrs. Chappell is much improved in health.

The ladies are busy quilting some quilts for a spring bride-to-be.

The sympathy of this community is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Frank McFadden in the loss of their little daughter, baby Wanda.

CHATHAM, England (CP)— The mayor of this Kent dockyard town has appealed to residents to entertain members of two Royal Navy frigates which are to visit the town. The crew members had received no invitations, although there were many when three German destroyers called here.

Uproar in City's Suburbia; Deer Run Earlier Than Usual!

By HARRY MULHALL

Yesterday of this week they caught a deer in time for lunch behind St. Joseph's School.

That's not quite as lunatic as it sounds — as the whole town knows by now.

In fact if there was any smidgen of lunacy in the situation it was caused by that fact — the whole town knew of it and too many people did the wrong things.

The same smiling to the affair is a tribute to the dogged civility of Lands and Forests game warden George Warner.

The deer caught yesterday was the male counterpart of a hoax (or whatever they call a doe of deer) which wandered within city limits three days ago.

One will never now know when or who the first child was that murmured "Mummy there's a deer at the bottom of our garden and was instantly under a one-month interdict placed under a six-month interdict from watching Disneyland to cure a fevered imagination. Suffice it to say, by yesterday morning the whole eastern suburbs were in genteel ferment over the wonder.

By late Tuesday afternoon warden Warner had pursued one deer — a doe — through entire subdivisions of back gardens, hoping to get it into open country. Although he was at times so harried as his target, he succeeded, if enthusiastic citizenry, he succeeded.

The doe disappeared along a railroad track heading east toward Shannonville and the Quebec border.

ON WITH STORY

However, the story strays. Back to yesterday-of-last-week's pursuit.

About 2 p.m.—which is the afternoon (after yesterday's experiences all things must be explained simply and straight) from the sniff-at the second deer definitely turned up in the eastern sebibvn.

This time it was a buck, clocking in at about 165 pounds by official estimates—and doing its clocking in the back garden of 17 Humewood Drive, the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Groves.

If ever there were sensible people it must be the Groves. As soon as they saw they had a deer in the bottom of their garden they behaved in direct contrast to the hitherto bellicose antics of their fellow citizens.

They let it stay. Further more, since it was still there Wednesday morning they established it was in need of food.

"We put out a carrot and some porridge and water. It ate it all," said Mrs. Groves.

The quietude of the buck was understandable. It transpired it had suffered a leg gash in its flight over fences and suburban hedges.

When informed of the plight of the second deer, Warden Warner decided a new tack was needed.

"We don't chase it back to the country if it's hurt," he said.

Instead, he decided, it must be captured, treated by a veterinarian and then released at Presqu'ile Park as the nearest provincial game reserve.

RALLIED FIREMEN

So, for the second day in a row he went suburban deer-hunting. This time he rallied three firemen, city dogcatcher Charles Thorn and a newspaper photographer.

The party's first efforts to capture the buck behind 17 Humewood saw a back-and-forth thrash over garden fences. Eventually it broke clothesline cover and headed out across Crestview Avenue and onto Bridge Street, opposite St. Joseph's.

An attempt to corner it against a nine-foot fence bordering the school grounds ended in failure. Despite its gamey leg the buck leapt the fence and took across the grounds. A second try in cornering it against another fence also was foiled. The buck then ran down a narrow covert of trees bordering the playground and an open field.

For the next hour it was a play of animal instinct against humane reason as the little party, led by the warden sought to snare the deer without injury.

In the narrow strip of brush the deer rested. The men crept up eye-level. A rope was thrown — the deer bolted. The chase was on. The deer sank down. The chase was off. The men eyed it, surrounded it. A rope was thrown — the deer bolted.

And so on — until 12.30 p.m. About that time, in one of the numerous forays back and forth local hunter Doug Rutan, who'd joined the band, laid out a plastic rope between two trees in the covert. For the umpteenth time the deer was scared from its roost and shooed toward the snare.. It darted forward, Mr. Ruttan heaved on his sare — and it held. It let go — it held.

BUCK BELLOWED

The buck bellowed once.

"I know old boy — I know how it is," reassured Mr. Warner, as he held it down.

Within minutes the deer was aboard the game warden's station wagon — its head covered to reduce respiratory panic — and on its way to the vets.

It was the end of a patient 24 hours for Mr. Warner.

The buck had only bellowed once — when finally roped.

"I know old boy — I know how it is," reassured the game warden as he held it down.

Together they had been most patient in bucking city dwellers as they tried to find a solution to the problem of a wild deer in suburbia.

At the tail end of the pursuit people presented more problems to the little hunting party than the buck itself. They flocked all over with everything from advice to movie cameras in the last minutes of the chase.

The only people who seemed to impose discipline were the sisters at St. Joseph's.

While some snuck in between neighboring houses after school lunchbreak not a school student ventured on the playground. And for a very good reason, apparently.

The chase was visible all the time from the school. After the buck was snared a lone sister trodded across the ice to the men roping it.

"We're very glad you caught the poor thing," she said. "I had the children say prayers to St. Francis that you would. He's the patron saint of animals."

"Of course," and it seems there was a curious twinkle in the sisterly eye as she added to the warden, "you're to be congratulated too — for your persistence."

CHILDREN OBEYED

Then her eye caught a couple of young lads venturing toward the scene.

"Get back children. You might get hurt," she commanded with immediate effect.

Then the sister was shuffling off again across the ice to school.

The hunters—and the warden particularly—could have done with more of that attitude.

Besides the women with cameras, the school children who flocked from between the houses there were also the menfolk with innumerable recipes for catching-a-wild-buck-deer-with-an-injured-leg-by-causing-the-least-grief possible to the quarry.

People, not deer were the biggest grievance.

"People know these deer were on the loose—yet they never kept their dogs tied up," said Warden Warner.

"Dogs running at large by nights, plus the happy-go-lucky pursuit attitude in daytime of city residents caused the unhappy situation in the first place," he said.

Still in the final hour of the pursuit, people closed in with advice.

They said:

"Are you the only one from the Lands and Forests?"

"Gee! You must have your work cut out. No one else, eh?"

"Keep saying 'baa' to it. They also calm down when you keep saying 'baa.'

"Why don't you get a tranquilizer gun. That'd fix it."

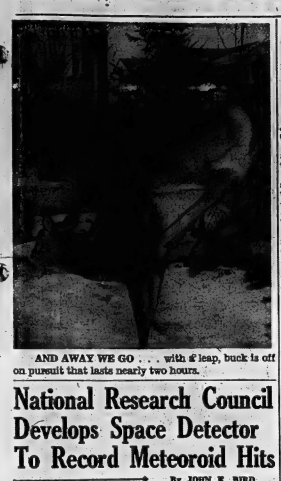
The warden hadn't time to point out he didn't need any more people from the Lands and Forests—that too many people were the cause of the trouble in the first place; that a tranquilizer gun can have a dangerous effect—or that he, the firemen, the dogcatcher, or the photographer hadn't time to say "baa"—even if they knew how.

He had all the frustration of trying to catch a wounded—and wild—animal, without adding to its injury, he apparently remembered he was a civil servant, and in uniform.

However, the point for him and his jaded when party may have been made by the photographer, against the butters-in-well-meaning, though they were.

About two hours after chase started—and as it neared the end behind St. Joseph's—one of the self-appointed whispered over the cameraman's shoulder:

"Why don't they sneak up behind him?"



"Sneak up behind him?"—and the newspaperman gave one of those long-suffering smiles as he backhanded 120 minutes of perspiration from his brow. "Sneak up behind him. Oh, that's nice.

"And how do you spell your name, sir? N-O-S-Y or N-O-S-E-Y?"

(Editor's Note—Well, perhaps he was impolite, at that.)

IN SAFEKEEPING . . . Game Warden George Warner masks buck's eyes to reduce panic after its capture behind schoolyard.

AND AWAY WE GO . . . with a leap, buck is off on pursuit that lasts nearly two hours.

HOW SWEET IT IS . . . Picture of innocence as fireman Bob Emerson sneaks up to attempt capture in Humewood Drive garden.

National Research Council Develops Space Detector To Record Meteoroid Hits

By JOHN R. BIRD

OTTAWA (CP) — An intricate electronic detector is being developed by the National Research Council in an effort to determine whether infinitely small meteoroids or space dust will have any damaging effect on future space vehicles.

The complicated instrument consists of a small crystal microphone mounted inside the nose cone of a Black Brant rocket and linked by radio to a recording station on earth.

The microphone is so sensitive that it can detect meteoroids striking the rocket's nose cone as it streaks through space at altitudes of 100 to 200 miles. The sound of each individual impact is transmitted by the radio link to receiving equipment at the Churchill, Man., rocket range.

The Canadian-designed rockets are being fired into the upper atmosphere at the Churchill rocket range as part of Canada's space research program.

Romeo Wiochowicz, of NRC's radio and electrical engineering division, said Wednesday in an interview that scientists want to know the exact meteoroids to increase man's knowledge of the universe and for a variety of practical jobs now associated with space travel.

Mr. Wiochowicz said space vehicles are not likely to encounter large meteoroids which are few in number. However they could be troubled by encounters with large numbers of meteoroids which are of the order of about one two-thousands of an inch in diameter.

The velocity, concentration and direction of travel of this type of meteoroid — known as space dust—was unknown.

Hubby Granted Damages Against Priest

CHICAGO (AP) — A U.S. federal judge awarded $14,823 damages Wednesday to a salesman who accused a Roman Catholic priest of alienating his wife's affections.

The judgment covered actual, proven damages of medical, legal and related expenses suffered by Robert P. McArdle Jr., 32.

Rev. Ronald B. Runkle, 50, now assigned to Odessa, Tex., N.Y., formerly lived in Highland Park, Ill., while Father Runkle was an assistant pastor of the parish church McArdle obtained a divorce last year from Patricia Rice McArdle, 26, whom he accused of adultery with the priest.

During the year Japan launched 2,357,333 tons, 184,206 more than in 1962. Her nearest competitor, West Germany, sent 970,589 tons of new shipping down the ways, a drop of 39,119 tons.

The Quebec government refused Wednesday to make public any of the reports it has received on the possibility of establishing a steel complex in the province. Rene Levesque, natural resources minister, said the matter is "terribly delicate" since it involves costs and type of plant planned.

NEW PLANT ANNOUNCED

Huron Chemicals Ltd. of Toronto has announced it will install a $300,000 sodium chlorate plante for Marathon Corp. of Canada Ltd. The Marathon plant will be leased for 20 years on a tonnage-produced basis. Marathon is about 150 miles northeast of the Lakehead.

Sinatra Denies Son's Abduction Was a Hoax

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Frank Sinatra Sr. denied Wednesday that his son's abduction was a hoax and said he never had asked the youth advice on publicity or how to deal with the press.

The sun-tanned 48-year-old singer testified for more than two hours at the trial of three men charged with kidnaping Frank Jr., 20.

The government accuses the three defendants, Joseph Amler and Barry Keenan, both 23, and John Irwin, 42, of kidnaping young Sinatra last Dec. 8 from a Lake Tahoe, Nev., motel room. He was released 56 hours later after his father paid $240,000 ransom.

The defence says it was a publicity stunt.

Sinatra Sr. testified he received eight telephone calls, apparently all from the same man—during the ordeal.

One of the calls, he said, asked for $340,000 ransom.

The last call, he said, was an apology.

"The voice said: 'I wish to hell I hadn't got into it, but it's too late to get out. I'm sorry.'"

27 Die in Hour-Long Fight As French Troops in Gabon Crush Revolt, Restore Govt.

By KENNETH L. WHITING

LIBREVILLE (AP) — President Leon Mba of Gabon resumed office today after French troops put down a two-day military revolt in his West African country.

Unconfirmed reports said 27 persons—25 Gabonese and two Frenchmen—died in the fighting Wednesday that ended the rebellion. Forty Gabonese and four Frenchmen were said to have been wounded.

Mba, a 62-year-old champion of close association with France, said in a radio broadcast that legislative elections would be held as scheduled Sunday. Mba had dissolved the National Assembly and called new elections in an attempt to freeze out Opposition Leader Jean-Hilaire Aubame. The military rebels apparently acted on behalf of Aubame, whom they proclaimed provisional premier Wednesday.

Mba said that members of the revolutionary committee who led the revolt have been imprisoned and will be punished. He did not mention Aubame and political associates named with him in the rebel provisional government, but presumably they also faced punishment.

SEIZE BUILDINGS

Rebel soldiers seized key government buildings in Libreville at midnight Tuesday and surrounded Mba in the presidential palace. They took the president to a house outside Libreville, announced he had resigned and proclaimed a 10-man provisional government headed by Aubame.

Not a shot was fired.

French Army airlifted some 400 to 600 troops to Gabon from the neighboring Congo Republic, Senegal, Cameroon and the Central African Republic. The revolt was broken in an hour-long battle when the French troops seized Baraka Camp, the capital's main army base.

The rebel command and ministers of the provisional government held out for some time in the presidency building. The rebel command included two army lieutenants and a lieutenant of the gendarmerie.

"All the rebels have surrendered," Libreville radio announced Wednesday night.

France is pledged by a mutual protection treaty to help its former colony maintain internal security, and the French foreign ministry said troops were sent in response to a request for help transmitted through diplomatic channels.

RELEASED FROM JAIL

CAPE TOWN (AP) — Lattie Sibeko has been released from a South African jail because she expects a baby next week. She was ordered to appear in court Feb. 26. Mrs. Sibeko was arrested last June, when she was a month prenant, and spent 160 days in solitary confinement as a suspected Negro subversive. In November she was charged with being a member of an illegal organization.

Haiti Rejects Protest Over Jesuits' Case

OTTAWA (CP)—Haiti has rejected a Canadian government protest against expulsion of 18 Jesuit missionaries from that country last week.

A statement released by the Haitian embassy here Wednesday said that "considering the extent of the plot contrived by the reverend Jesuits fathers for the obvious purpose of provoking a real upset and considering the flagrancy and serious nature of the facts, the government of the Republic of Haiti has, unfortunately, no other alternative but to reject the protest of the government of Canada."

External Affairs Minister Martin had called the Haitian charge d'affaires to his office last Thursday to say that Canada rejected the allegations against members of the Roman Catholic religious order.

Plan Plazas, Apartments Over Rail Yard

TORONTO (CP)—A $50,000,000 hotel - apartment complex over the railway marshalling yards, a park and plaza scheme in the heart of the financial district and a mall leading to the Art Gallery of Toronto were unveiled Monday in a revamped plan for downtown Toronto unveiled Wednesday by Planning Commissioner Malchew Lawson.

The plan, presented to a joint meeting of the buildings and development and public works committees, also calls for a series of pedestrian plazas over the railway tracks at the waterfront, a subway to replace street cars on Queen Street, and an office-hotel complex at the foot of University Avenue.

The plan, a revamped version of one presented a year ago, calls for three downtown streets to be lined with trees to give access to parking facilities at the periphery of the downtown area.

Mr. Lawson said more than $13,000,000 worth of public works will be necessary if the scheme is to be fulfilled.

This would not include the cost of the Queen Street subway.

DESERONTO

Reeve Will Not Address Ratepayers

DESERONTO—A personal invitation to the Reeve of Deseronto to speak to the Ratepayers' Association was brought before the Town Council Monday night.

Speaking as Chairman of the finance committee the Reeve stated he felt he was in no position to accept the offer and asked Council for their direction.

Although the proceeding was called out of order by Councillor Harris the Mayor allowed the Reeve to explain why he was asking for council's wishes in this matter.

The Reeve stated that his position as Chairman of the Finance Committee had not covered the period of 1963. Since the audit was not available as yet for that term he felt he could say little of value concerning it and wished to decline.

He added that he felt it would be to a better end "if the Deseronto Ratepayers' Association were to look at the records of the School Board to speak instead."

"They might be able to explain why they are doing the things they are," he said.

He felt this would be more important than any talk on the town's budget.

Council appeared reluctant to assume objection for the Reeve but moved that "he not attend until the facts of the audit were known."

In a conversation later, Jim McVicker, President of the Ratepayers' Association, indicated that the invitation was not intended to embarass the Reeve.

"Nor was it intended that he should speak on the budget alone," he said. "We wanted to provide an opportunity for the ratepayers to discover how a town was financed, how levies are made, and how the mill rates are set."

Mr. McVicker expressed hope that such a meeting would yet take place.

Mrs. William Hoey, principal of Campbellford's Merryvale School for Retarded Children, accepts projector, presented by Campbellford Shriner J. F. R. Douglas, Q.C., on behalf of the Kawartha Shrine Club of Peterborough. Mr. Douglas is Ambassador from Rameses Temple, Toronto, and a Campbellford attorney.

Retarded Association Receives Projector From Shriners

CAMPBELLFORD — The Campbellford Association for Retarded Children held their regular meeting at Merryvale School on Monday. Guest speaker of the evening was Mr. Peter Gomery, co-ordinator of development for Ontario Association of Retarded Children.

PRESENT PROJECTOR

Twelve members of Kawartha Shrine Club of Peterborough were present, ten of whom reside in Campbellford, and presented Merryvale School with a projector and screen. The presentation was made by Shriner Ross Douglas of Campbellford and Shriner W. Mathews of Peterborough.

Another donation, a cheque, was received by the Association from the Campbellford Nurses' Association which it is expected will be currently used to buy film strips which it is hoped will be the nucleus of a film library for the school.

The Shrine Club members were thanked by vice-president Rev. Father Walsh and the Nurses' Association by Mrs. F. Rutherford.

Mr. Gomery spoke of the incidence of mental retardation stating that 3 per cent of all children born are at birth, or will be later by disease or accident, retarded. Accidents being by far the greater cause, head injuries by striking the windshield in car accidents, falls from high-chairs and cribs, falls in play and being struck by objects such as baseball bats, and in other forms of sports.

18,000 IN ONTARIO

It is estimated there are 18,000 mentally retarded in Ontario and 55,000 in the Dominion. Only in the past ten or twelve years have Retarded Associations been functioning and now there are 87 such schools in Ontario.

Mr. Gomery stated that a ten-year-old child with an I.Q. of 50 assume objection for the Reeve but moved that "he not attend until the facts of the audit were known."

In a conversation later, Jim McVicker, President of the Ratepayers' Association, indicated that the invitation was not intended to embarass the Reeve.

"Nor was it intended that he should speak on the budget alone," he said. "We wanted to provide an opportunity for the ratepayers to discover how a town was financed, how levies are made, and how the mill rates are set."

Mr. McVicker expressed hope that such a meeting would yet take place.

The schools have been maintained by small grants and special services from the government, municipal grants and private donations. Legislation has now been written which will be presented for approval at the current sitting of provincial legislature and it is reported that in January, 1965, the total cost of operating schools for retarded children will be borne by the government. This will mean that many children will have a chance to develop whatever potentiality they may have and still remain in their own home with parental and family love.

Society is belatedly discovering a new way to fulfill on old Biblical concept, "In as much as ye have done it unto one of the least of these."

Mr. Gomery was introduced by Rev. G. Whitehorn and thanked by president William Lunch was served at the close of the meeting.

Tweed Kinsmen Entertained

CAMPBELLFORD — Several prospective members attended the regular meeting of the Campbellford Kinsman Club here Tuesday, when Gordon Chambers, president of the club presided at a business meeting following a turkey dinner at a local restaurant.

Among the guests were fifteen members of the Tweed Kinsmen club.

In a euchre tournament, Garnet Flaber and a fellow Kinsman from Tweed won first prize, while the booby prize was split between Clayton Smoke and Wayne Kerr.

Senior Citizens' Tea Marks 4th Anniversary

CAMPBELLFORD — The Campbellford Senior Citizens' Club held their annual Valentine tea on Saturday afternoon and evening. This is also an anniversary recognition, as the club was officially organized and held their opening four years ago on St. Valentine's Day.

During these four years the organization has functioned extremely well and is recognized by the regional recreation director as one of the most successful of such projects.

Over 100 callers on Saturday testified to the high esteem in which the club is held and the efficiency with which this social event was carried on speaks well for the interest and activity of club members.

A birthday cake was donated by A. D. Bennett, later the cake was cut and enjoyed.

Winner of a draw on a floral centrepiece was Miss Lillian Davidson the ticket drawn by Mr. J. H. Smith.

Pouring tea in the afternoon were Mrs. W. Reid, Mrs. William Skinner, Mrs. F. Scott and Mrs. H. Cassidy; in the evening, Mrs. W. Skinner did the honors.

Decorations were most attractive displaying the Valentine theme and were a contribution from the grade 8 pupils and teacher Mrs. B. Grills.

Social convener was Mrs. E. Cooper, assisted by Mrs. W. Sharpe and for registration and flower draw Mrs. E. Blake.

Cake and tea was also held with Mrs. C. Shaw, and Mrs. A. Blake as convenors.

Rotary Club Hears Talk On Recreation

CAMPBELLFORD — "Recreation and Physical and Health Education" was the topic of Mr. Bob Thompson, B.P. Ed., guest speaker at the Rotary Club, on Monday.

Mr. Thompson, a teacher of physical and health education and upper school science, gave a constructive address on aspects of the subject as it concerns the school and the community at large.

Dividing his subject into three general categories, he dealt with the general subject of health and physical education, then applied it to the local school situation and, in conclusion, carried his observations and criticisms into the area of the entire community.

MISCONCEPTION

"There is, generally," he said, "a misconception about the subject. Many are led to think physical and health education as physical training and that alone. The broader subject has for a purpose to develop and promote total physical and mental health in an individual, thus creating in him a sense of responsibility to society."

In the Campbellford High School the student is subject to the physical health and education program for a relatively short time. In this short time, skills in sport, hygiene and the general mental outlook of the student must be formed. Leadership qualities, team work and co-operation with others must be fostered. This is a big task for the teacher.

For the years immediately following 1960, the child entering Grade 9 had no previous teaching on the subject. Recently, however, improvement has been effected as an introduction to physical health and education in Grades 7 and 8.

PAYS TRIBUTE

He paid tribute to the North East Northumberland High School area board for their concern in the physical and health welfare of the pupils.

This subject is the only area in which the school system are prepared for family life and living.

Mr. Thompson emphasized the fact that the staff is available for counselling in health problems. Their program is expanding to give a grounding to public school pupils in respect to the high school program.

Mr. Thompson offered some considerations for the advancing Campbellford's recreation program, which is small, embracing various contributions by council, recreation grant from the government and donations from the various service clubs. The cost to the taxpayers is in the facilities exclusive of the band grant which is one third of a mill. Recreation consists of hockey, swimming and some softball for children. There is no provision for the one who has left school or for those drop-outs who leave before Grade 12 or 13.

COMMISSIONER NEEDED

A recreation commission is the answer. The speaker asked for help to the teenagers in recreational life, at the same time saying that "the lighted school house" meaning the use of the school by the public — is desirable. While the use of the school presents problems of supervision, caretaking, insurance, use of equipment, none of these is incapable of solution. Lack of leadership is the greatest barrier to overcome.

The financial burden of any club or group using school facilities should be a burden contributing to the effort, he felt.

Mr. Thompson said that in Campbellford, recreation has not received its fair share of the public treasury. It is vital to the community. He did, however, say that much improvement has been effected in the past four years. More people yet must be enlisted to help in the march of recreational progress.

The speaker was introduced by Rotarian Lorne Cargnill and thanked by vice-president Wallace Rutherford.

Order Postman To Get Rid Of Alligators

MILTON, Ont. (CP)—Oakville postman Peter Strickland, 38, fainted in a corridor outside the court Wednesday after an Ontario Supreme Court judge ordered him to pay $1,150 in costs to neighbors and dispose of his 37 alligators by April 30.

Mr. Justice S. N. Schatz awarded $500 each to neighbors A. P. Groote and Doug. ist Gerald MacLean for loss of the enjoyment of their homes which adjoin the Strickland house. Mr. Groote was also given $150 damages for the collapse of his fence because of a trench built by Strickland to keep the reptiles on his property.

The two neighbors filed petitions for a court order forbidding Strickland to keep the alligators in his home.

Oakville town council earlier refused to evict the reptiles, some of which are four feet long.

Mr. Strickland was standing in the corridor estimating the costs of the case and came up with the total of $4,500. He then fainted and was revived by bystanders.

Charge Cashier Embezzled $1,248,958

NEW YORK (AP) — An assistant cashier whose tastes ran to good cigars, nasty clothing and race horses was charged Wednesday with embezzling $1,248,958 from a British bank in Manhattan where he worked for 30 years.

Th 151-count state indictment against the cashier, William Scorey, 53, of Queens, spanned eight years of covering gambling losses, authorities said.

As Scorey placed each of the $30,000 bail, his alleged bookmaker, Michael Grazda, 34, went free after being held as a material witness and serving 30 days for handling betting.

Scorey went to work for the British-owned Chartered Bank in the Wall Street district at the age of 14. He was at his favorite beach resort, Atlantic City, N.J., last December when bank officials suddenly discovered a dummy account through which a fortune had been siphoned.

He had only enough cash in his pocket to place a $2 trackbet when he was taken from a shore motel to a hospital because of a number of barbiturates which police described as a suicide attempt.

Leafs, Wings Settle For 1-1 Tie ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Hawks' '30-Men' Lead Pack In 7-2 Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Chicago Black Hawks have one obvious shortcoming—and the six-team National Hockey League clubs should be no lucky.

The Hawks' attack suffers from lack of diversity. Take away their three 30-goal men and what have you got?

Their NHL rivals, none of whom has as much as a single 30-goal shooter to call its own, would be the first to volunteer anytime the Chicago management is looking for someone to take away the big three—Bobby Hull, Stan Mikita and Ken Wharram. And if 30-goaler Bill Hay is ever on the loose, he'd probably find a home too.

New York Rangers were the latest to ponder the Hawks' basic weakness Wednesday night as the Hawks trounced them 7-3 at Madison Square Garden with Mikita and Wharram scoring two goals apiece, Hay firing one and Hull settling for three assists.

Meanwhile at Toronto, where goal-scoring has gone out of style, the goaltenders held the spotlight at Detroit Red Wings held the Maple Leafs to a 1-1 tie.

The Hawks' victory moved them two points ahead of Montreal Canadiens, the first time they've been in first place all by themselves in almost a month. The Habs, running in virtual double harness with Chicago, get their chance to catch up tonight when they entertain the tail-end Boston Bruins.

While Hull stood pat as the league's top sharpshooter at 35, Mikita moved up to 33 and Wharram to 31 and Hay hit the 30-goal plateau Wednesday. Rookies Johnny McKenzie and Phil Esposito completed the Hawk total while New York's Phil Goyette also reached the 30-goal mark by firing both Ranger tallies.

It was the fourth win in five games for the Hawks and New York's sixth loss in seven outings.

At Toronto, Detroit's Alex Delvecchio and Toronto's Ron Stewart traded goals before a crowd of 14,390 and the Leafs' four - point margin over the fourth-place Wings remained intact.

Detroit goalie Terry Sawchuk made 27 saves and Toronto's Johnny Bower 28 as both performed more than their share of acrobatics.

Gordie Howe fed Delvecchio his scoring pass with Toronto's Jim Pappin in the penalty box at 14:20 of the first period and Stewart eashed Allan Stanley's breakaway pass at 9:07 of the second frame.

Howe is still looking for his first goal against Toronto this season although Bower barely got his toe in front of one of the big right winger's best drives.

Marciano Picks Liston-BUT

'If It Goes Past 6th-4-1 On Clay'

MONTREAL (CP) — Rocky Marciano, retired heavyweight champion, expressed concern Wednesday about what would happen to boxing if Sonny Liston should quickly dispose of Cassius Clay in their heavyweight title fight next Tuesday.

"I'm worried about what's going to happen after that fight if Sonny wins easily," he said. "There's nobody around to fight him. Boxing may be going around the bend."

Marciano spoke for 35 minutes as guest speaker at the annual awards dinner of the Montreal Sportsmen's Association.

He picked Liston to win by a knockout in the sixth round.

"If it goes past the sixth round, I'll take 4-1 on Clay."

Marciano, 40, who retired undefeated seven years ago, said Clay's biggest problem will be to stand up to the first few minutes of the fight.

"Will he have that real courage to fight the next? I think Liston will come out in the first round and be a real wild man."

He said Clay's weakness is that he can't fight in close but Marciano doubted that the inexperienced boxer could take advantage of this. Clay has had 19 professional bouts.

"How could he possibly know what to do when the going gets rough?" asked Marciano.

Marciano had another but praise for the 21-year-old Clay, describing him as the "fastest man in the ring, dedicated, hard-working and, believe it or not, a clean-living boy."

Start NHL Playoffs March 26

NEW YORK (AP)—The Stanley Cup playoffs will start Thursday, March 26, Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, said Wednesday following a meeting here of the league's board of governors.

The date represents a change from previous seasons because there will be a three-day lateral between the close of the regular season March 22 and the start of the post-season competition.

The last few years the playoffs started on the Tuesday following the close of the regular season.

Opening Stanley Cup games this year will be played on the home ice of the top two teams in the final regular season standings.

Globetrotters Shut Out Napanee 11-0

Trenton's red-hot RCAF Globetrotters swept to their fourth consecutive victory of the Lakeshore Intermediate "B" round-robin playoffs last night by blanking Napanee Falcons 11-0 in Napanee.

The Trentonites whipped Picton and Napanee twice each in the semi-final series. Napanee was knocked out of the playoffs, losing all four games, while Picton grabbed the other spot in the finals with a 3-2 mark.

Picton and RCAF will now meet in a best-of-seven series for the group championship and the right to advance into O.H.A. Int. "B" playdowns.

N.H.L. Stars

Chicago's Stan Mikita and Ken Wharram, who scored a pair of goals each in leading the Black Hawks to a 7-3 win over the Rangers in New York.

Goalie Terry Sawchuk of Detroit, who stopped 27 shots when the Red Wings tied the Maple Leafs 1-1 in Toronto.

Juniors Defeat Trenton 11-0

Rutherford's Six Sparks Win

Belleville Junior "B"'s came up with a classic team performance, sparked by Jim Rutherford's one-man scoring effort, to whip the Trenton Juniors 11-0 in Trenton last night.

Rutherford scored no less than six goals and also added one assist to lead the offensive unit.

A Trenton source called the Belleville effort "the best by a Belleville junior team in at least the last five years". It was a tight 1-0 game after one beat with the winners firing three more in the middle frame and a big seven in the final twenty minutes.

Bobby Donnan registered the shutout, his club's first of the year, and came up with several key saves throughout the game. Trenton had a good chance to snap the shutout at 12:55 of the middle frame when Jack Donnan took a penalty shot after being hauled down in the clear by Glen Hagerman. Donnan went in close, lost control of the puck and put it in the net.

There were 13 penalties called in a heated third period but only two in the first frame and five in the second. Each team drew ten sentences, including majors to Bob Pellow and Jim "Bud" Pringle and misconducts to Russell, Muirhead and Norm Richards.

Rutherford scored the only goal of the first period, aided by Muirhead, at 9:40.

Bob Boyle, who along with Rutherford and Rowland, starred for the Belleville crew, made it 2-0 early in the second and Rutherford added another unassisted goal at 10:41.

Rutherford's third goal, seconds later, made it 4-0. Muirhead again helping, as the winners kept complete command.

In the third, Belleville pumped the puck past Norm Panko almost at will, Rutherford, then Pringle scored solo goals, the latter's coming while his own side played two men short through penalties.

Gerry Jones sank one from Bill Lang's setup at 10.00. Rutherford kept his hot streak going. Boyle and Grant Hagerman helping and Ted Rowland made it 9-0, aided by Rutherford and Boyle. Rutherford from Boyle and Carl Boomhower from Pringle ended the scoring at 13:50.

The win snapped a losing streak for Belleville and set Trenton back after its record had been involved in three tight decisions.

Belleville winds up the league schedule in Peterborough on Monday.

Here in Belleville Friday night, the "B"s tackle the Trenton Legion Juvenile team in a long-awaited exhibition game. The tilt is slated for nine o'clock. Trenton Juveniles are classed as one of the district's top hockey attractions.

BELLEVILLE — Moon, Boyle, Rutherford, Rowland, Muirhead, Grant Hagerman, Lang, Muirhead, Smith, Rowland, Boomhower, Grant, Jones, Pringle.

TRENTON — Panko, MacDonald, Richards, Sharrard, Richards, Pellow, Howard, Panko, O'Donnell.

Parsons, RCAF Enter Kingston Soccer League

Parsons Cleaners and the Trenton RCAF clubs have been accepted into the Kingston Soccer League. Betawa rounds out the three district entries.

The league, a six seven-club organization with six teams from Kingston and entries from Brockville and Smiths Falls.

The dissolution of the Trenton club made the future of the Bay of Quinte Football League conjectural. Parsons and RCAF are also file entries with the Kingston league.

The clubs play a "home-and home" schedule with Parsons and playing away games with Brockville and Smiths Falls in Kingston.

A spokesman for the Parsons club says at the moment the team is operating on a twelve-player spread. Five more players are needed. Anyone wishing to try out are asked to get in touch with C. Brinkman.

Eastern Junior Playoffs

The playoff situation in the "B" division of the Eastern Ontario Hockey is still up in the air.

Belleville will definitely be classed as the third place club, behind Kingston and Peterborough and will meet the lower-placed of these two teams in the group semi-finals.

At the present time Kingston holds a one-point lead over the Peterborough Monsens in their battle for top spot.

This boils down to this: Belleville plays the final scheduled game in Peterborough this coming Monday night. If Belleville beats the Monsens, Kingston will finish first and Belleville will meet Peterborough in the semi-finals. If Peterborough defeats Belleville, Monsens will finish first and draw a bye into the group finals while Belleville will have to play Kingston. Length and dates of the semi-finals have not been announced.

Meanwhile in the Junior "C" grouping, Napanee meets Trenton in one half of the semi-finals, starting in Napanee on Monday. Gananoque and Picton clash in the other half, starting in Picton Saturday night.

The "C" semi-finals are best-of-five series.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Stand by, men! Hurry it up, you tackle-tinkerers! Prepare the sauces, you gourmets! Get out the long johns, you diehards! And breathe a sigh of relief you little women!

Now it is official.

The open seasons for angling in Ontario in 1964 have been announced by the, minister of Lands and Forests, the Honourable A. Kelso Roberts.

Here they are. And what follows are the open seasons in the Tweed Forest District only. This district comprises the counties of Hastings, Lennox and Addington, Frontenac, Prince Edward, South Renfrew and the three northernmost townships in Lanark county.

The hardy adventurers who tell their psychiatrists they want to get away from it all" and suggest a trout-hunting safari as a "sure cure" can take to the pinestotal wilderness on Friday February 28th as there'll be in time for the official opening Saturday February 29th.

This applies to all the counties and areas mentioned with the exception of Prince Edward.

The brookies, lakers, browns and rainbows, also spikers if any, that lurk in the haunts, if any, of Mayor McFarlands Spanish peninsula get a lease of life. They can fin their little snouts at their northern suburfolk because south of the Bay of Quinte border their capture is not legal until May 1st.

Any one wanting to go a-trouting or seeking any other breed of fish-fries on the fin, should consult their local district or conservation officers for data, information.

There isn't any change for the large-and-small bass bowls. It is from 15-November 13 in the Upper St. Lawrence and other waters July 1st. Limit six per day.

And a tip to those Aikem youngsters Frank and Fred, and other lunge lovers, you take off to the Ottawa river on May 15th but other waters are closed until July 1st. Two a day, not less than 22 inches overall.

The limit of catch for brookies (speckies) and brown trout is four a day, plus one fish or 15 fish whichever is the lesser. But rainbows, lakers and splake catches are limited to five per day.

Pike seekers have to wait until May 15th in all waters with the exception of Lake Ontario and the Ottawa River where there is no closed season. You can take home six a day.

I'm told that eagle eyes are already casting glances at the district spawning grounds of the pickerel, which went high-hat last year and is now known officially as the "walleye".

You can start hauling them in legally on May 1st in the Bay of Quinte; the inland lakes and rivers of Prince Edward county and those portions of the Trent, Moira, Salmon and Napanee rivers between Lake Ontario and the first dam upstream from the lake. All other waters May 9th. Not over six per day, please.

If you like caviar fresh from the producer you can start squeezing the sturgeon factories say-from mid. August in Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence when you can snare them any time if they don't see you first.

And if you are interested in the fish stocking lists for the Tweed district for 1963, complete your trout catch returns there and mail them to the Department of Lands and Forests, Tweed. You will get an up-to-date stocking list by return mail.

Last season the March 1st trout junkets met stiff opposition from Old Man Winter what with snow, ice packed roads and whatnot.

If the weather blake doesn't convert the northern haunts into a deep-freeze accompanied by heavy snow, indications point to the February 29th "openers" having a much better time conditions-wise than last year.

It could very well be one of the earliest "break-ups" in years.

Banff Rejection

Where Was Minister?

OTTAWA (CP) — The government came in for sharp criticism Wednesday in the Commons because Canada — specifically, Banff, Alta. — wasn't awarded the 1968 Winter Olympics. Grenoble, France, won them.

Eldon Woollams (PC — Bow River) asked why no senior official or cabinet minister attended the games in Austria this month to sell Banff as the site for the 1968 Winter Olympiad.

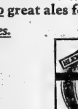
Prime Minister Pearson said Canada was represented by a high-ranking cabinet minister—Health Minister Judy LaMarsh—as well as by officials.

Michael Starr (PC — Ontario) asked: "In view that we lost the 1968 games, what were they doing there?"

There was no reply.

CITES 'FLABBINESS'

T. C. Douglas, New Democratic Party leader, said Miss LaMarsh had made reference to the flabbiness of the Canadian people. Did the government intend to revive the physical fitness program "scuttled" by previous Liberal administration?



Miss LaMarsh said she hadn't used the word flab. Anything which would improve the health of Canadians would be supported by all MPs.

Gilles Gregoire (Creditiste—LaPointe) asked whether there will be a subsidy for inter-provincial games.

Miss LaMarsh said this is being considered.

Unbeaten Strings Clipped By Upsets

Schoolboy Curling

By WALTER KREVENCHUK

REGINA (CP) — The last two undefeated strands at the Canadian school curling championship were snapped Wednesday by two determined rinks — one rooted to three members by illness, the other rebelling against eight years of obscurity.

Brushing aside the absence of vice - skip Ross McKenzie, forced out of the 11-rink round-robin competition three rounds earlier in an attack of mumps, the Manitoba rink from Stonewall handed Saskatchewan its first defeat, a 9-3 verdict in the fifth round.

Newfoundland rallied for a big five-ender in the eighth to tag British Columbia with an 11-9 loss in the sixth round. The victory was the second for the Corner Brook rink, the first time Newfoundland has compiled two wins in a single tournament since entering schoolboy competition in 1956.

The upsets created a three-way tie at the top of the standings as the Ontario rink from Owen Sound matched the 5-1 records of Saskatchewan and B.C. Brimming Newfoundland 13-3 in the fifth round and beating Northern Ontario 12-8 in the sixth, Ontario suffered its first loss in the fourth round Tuesday night, 10-8 to the B.C. quartet from Chemainus.

The defending champion Alberta rink from Stettler stayed in contention, boosting its record to four wins and two losses with a 10-6 victory over New Brunswick and a 9-4 decision over Prince Edward Island.

Manitoba followed its upset of Saskatchewan with an 8-6 win over Quebec to gain victory number three against two defeats.

Other matches Wednesday saw New Brunswick whip Nova Scotia 14-7, Northern Ontario trip Prince Edward Island 12-3 and Quebec nip Nova Scotia 8-7.

Following the top five rinks in the standing after six rounds were Northern Ontario and New Brunswick, with three wins and three losses apiece, Quebec and Newfoundland, each with two wins in six starts, Nova Scotia with a single victory in five matches and Prince Edward Island, winless in five contests.

The 11-round championship moves into high gear today with three rounds. The draw:

Today — Northern Ontario vs. British Columbia; Quebec vs. Saskatchewan; Ontario vs. Alberta; Manitoba vs. New Brunswick, Nova Scotia vs. Prince Edward Island. Bye: Newfoundland.

Eighth round — New Brunswick vs. Saskatchewan; Ontario vs. Nova Scotia; British Columbia vs. Alberta; Manitoba vs. Prince Edward Island; Northern Ontario vs. Newfoundland. Bye: Quebec.

Ninth round — Saskatchewan vs. Prince Edward Island; Manitoba vs. Ontario; British Columbia vs. Nova Scotia; Alberta vs. Newfoundland; New Brunswick vs. Quebec. Bye: Northern Ontario.

Seniors, Juniors Defeat Napanee

BCI Cage Teams Unbeaten

By ROBERT WILLIAMS

BCI Seniors and Juniors completed an unbeaten season by tromping their Napanee counterparts 59-44 and 66-52. Napanee Jays fell behind their 2nd loss edging them 29-26 in a tight exciting game.

BCI Seniors got off to a terrific start with a 22-4 first quarter lead which carried them through the rest of the game. Most of these points were scored on breakaways and close-in lay-up plays which Napanee weren't able to stop.

Napanee found the handle in the second quarter edging out BCI by 4 points. Most of these points were on long shots as they couldn't penetrate BCI's defence.

Play slowed down in the 3rd quarter with lots of rebounding and rough play. Man to man checking was used by both teams with BCI setting up a lot of picks. BCI took this half 25-24.

Bob Williams with 20 points played one of his best games. Lyle Adams scored most of his 14 points on jump shots as did Murray Swan with 9.

Coathup sank 18 points for Napanee and Doug Forbes who played Junior first followed with 13.

Ron Walsh playing his usually fine game hooped 18 points for BCI while Alan Mott collected 14 points. BCI had to make many long shots because Napanee's zone held them out quite effectively. Fred Bond with 18 and Doug Forbes with 15 were Napanee's scorers.

BCI Seniors made many mistakes and poor passes as did Napanee but Napanee used them more effectively when it counted. Roblin, Smith and Hyrke with 9, 7, and 6 respectively were best for Napanee. Gary Swan, J. McCreary and R. Loynes played well for BCI garnering 8, 6 and 6 points apiece.

BCI — Chick 4, Anderson 2, Schlain 5, Williams 20, Swan 9, Deacon 4, Adams 14, Purcell, Casselman 2, Mitchell.

Napanee — Coathup 18, McCutcheon, Fraser 1, Silnson 8, Martin 7, Forbes 13, Vanalstine, Sherman, Clancy, Rigby, Taylor.

Seniors Win 61-48

Moira Sweeps Trenton

By DOUG BELLWOOD

Moira bantams took a 36-21 decision over Trenton as they clinched second place in the Big Seven C.B.A. Basketball League. They earn the right to play Napanee in the playoffs. Juniors finished the season with a fine 65-55 win over Trenton. Moira seniors earned second place as they defeated Trenton 61-48 in a real thriller.

Trenton seniors took a close 17-10 lead in the first quarter. Both teams started to hit in the second quarter as Trenton increased the lead to 32-20. The first half was very rough as no fewer than 23 fouls were called out. This was the deciding factor for Trenton in keeping the lead. Both teams played very poor positional ball.

In the third quarter Moira Redmen clicked as they narrowed Trenton's margin to a slim 42-39 lead. It was in the final seven minutes that Moira started to show form. It took the superb playing and shooting of Barry Bishop of Moira to get the team going.

Bob Bailey was high man of the game with 20 points. Jack Jury and George Pugh followed with 13 and 12 points respectively. Chambers and Pete Bishop of Moira were high men in the bantam game getting 9 points. Hayman and Beresford followed with 8. Larry and Weaver of Trenton both had 8 points. Halverson followed with 7.

Bob Watson led the winners in the junior game with 18 points. Young and Beresford were close behind with 14 and 12 points respectively. Vik Williams was another high scorer getting 18 points for Trenton. Chambers and O'Neill followed with 18 and 9 points respectively.

Seniors: Moira — Bailey 15, Jury 12, Pugh 12, Graham 10, Dunsmore 2, Newell 2.

Trenton — Chambers 17, Burke 13, Theriault 8, Mac-Gregor 7, Hockley 5.

St. Louis, Omaha Grab Victories

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

St. Louis Braves regained sole possession of second place in the Central Professional Hockey League Wednesday by edging Minneapolis Binmes 3-4.

In the other scheduled game, Omaha Knights walloped St. Paul Rangers 4-1 to maintain their 15-point bulge atop the standings. The loss left Rangers in third, two points behind St. Louis.

Bob Senior, Claude Larose, Gary Peters and Tom Carty counted once each for Omaha as the Knights spotted Rangers an early 1-0 lead before coming to life.

Peters and St. Paul's Bill Taylor were ejected from the game after a high-sticking brawl.

Duke Harris fired Braves' winning goal at 18:18 of the final period. Al Carson, Murray Hall, Jack Stanfield and Bert Feruzel got the others for St. Louis.

Jerry Ouellette paced Bruins with a pair while Jean Parise and Wayne Schultz got the others.

Oak Leafs Blanked By Maroons

CHATHAM (CP)—Al Bennett posted his second shutout of the International Hockey League season as Chatham Maroons blanked Des Moines Oak Leafs 4-0. Wednesday to move out of the cellar and back into the running for a playoff berth.

Rookie Bob Regis beat goalie Ray Mikulan twice to spark the Maroons' fifth win in their second straight. Dave Luciuk and defenceman Elmer Skov were the other marksmen.

Regis, picked up from Nell McNeil Maroons of the now-defunct Sudbury Toronto Junior A league, tipped in Bill Degurse's shot from the point for what proved to be the winner late in the first period.

The Maroons tested Mikulan 22 times, while Bennett stopped aside 17 for the shutout.

Baseball In Japan

Big Salaries Attract US Stars

TOKYO (AP) — Given the choice of being major league hangers-on in the United States or becoming national heroes in Japan, more and more American baseball players are migrating across the Pacific.

The latest arrivals are veteran infielder Johnny Logan and journeyman outfielder Chuck Essegian, who flew in Monday. They'll be joined at the end of the month by four more newcomers, outfielders Gordon Windhorn and Stan Palys and infielders Daryl Spencer and Dino Bertoia, of Windsor, Ont.

They are the latest in a long line of players who have played out their string in the United States and then moved here.

The big attraction? Basically it's money. Average salaries for the seven-month Japanese season are $15,000 to $20,000 — Pittsfield life is much the same in Japan as it is in the United States for the imported players. Most live with their families close by their club's home parks. Some of the teams even buy house rents for the Americans.

RECEPTION DIFFERENT

The language is strange for the Yanks, of course, and so is the reception they get from the fans. Virtually anonymous in the U.S., they suddenly find themselves surrounded by autograph seekers before and after games here.

Japanese ball clubs are permitted three imports each and so far 22 Americans, including 15 former major leaguers, have made the jump.

Logan, who played with Pittsburgh Pirates last year after several years with Milwaukee Braves, signed a one-year contract with the Nankai Hawks of Osaka, Japan's answer to the Pacific League.

Essegian, who set a World Series record with two pinch-hit home runs for Los Angeles Dodgers in 1959, played with the Kintetsu Buffaloes of Osaka, also a member of the Pacific League.

Windhorn and Spencer have signed with the Hankyu Braves of Nishinomiya, another Pacific League member. Palys will play with the Tokyo Orions of the Pacific League and Bertoia is under contract to the Chunichi Dragons of the Central League.

What's This, Only One Penalty?

LOS ANGELES (CP)—Howie Young didn't exactly pulverize the opposition in his debut with Los Angeles Blades but 8,101 customers turned up Wednesday at their meeting with Portland Buckaroos just in case.

The terrible - tempered defenceman, who-arrived earlier in the day after his sale to Los Angeles by the National Hockey League's Chicago Black Hawks, couldn't prevent the visitors from skating off with a 5-4 verdict.

But he set up the Blades' last goal by veteran Leo LaBine. And it was teammate Connie Madigan whose late penalty kept the steam out of the Los Angeles attack after Young had tied the score. Howie had served his only two-minute sentence earlier in the game.

Minor Hockey

The mighty mites of the ice lanes, the "Tykes," got their playoffs under way in B.M.H.A. play at Memorial Arena last night.

All games are the first in two-game, goals-to-count series.

Brownie blanked Wee Wings 4-0 on single goals by R. Bond, D. Flesh, T. Bridge and D. Grds.

Rangers nipped Flyers 2-1. M. West and L. Hume scored for the winners and K. Dales for the losers.

Leafs shutout the Royals 1-0. W.' Genereaux triggered the lone marker.

Leafs downed the Hawks 5-1. M. Thistle potted two Mac markers with one each for D. Irvin, D. Sullivan and R. Gordon. W. Dalnard scored for Hawks.

Habitants defeated the Frontenacs 6-1. J. Sprackett was a four-goal man for Bruins, single-goaling goals to A. Forsyth and P. Moorman. K. Joudrey was the lone Frontenac scorer.

Canadiens blanked the Canucks 3-0. A. Wood potted two goals and P. Molnski got the other.

In an exhibition game played in Picton, Belleville Peewee Maple Leafs lost a 4-3 decision to a Picton team. Ron Bird scored two Belleville goals and Bill Andrews netted the other. Martin Fraser, Rusty Scott drew assists. Robert Ferguson and Ricky Baldwin scored two apiece for Picton.

GORDIE HOWE'S HOCKEY

By GORDIE HOWE

Somebody noticed the other day that I've been credited with scoring 30 unassisted goals during my career.

In the earlier days they were lumped in with the rest of my play has speeded up, and there's more passing that there was before. That accounts for more assists.

On several occasions I've had gifts of goals handed to me by opposing defensemen have been lucky enough to hit my leg or my stick when they were trying to clear the puck and have it bounce past their own goalie.

Since I was the last man on the opposing team to touch the puck I got the credit for the goal.

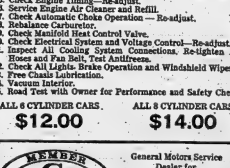
A lot of times, close forechecking will produce unassisted goals.

A fellow's in there hampering and bothering a defenseman or forward trying to get out. He tries to throw a clean pass up the middle, intending it for his centre.

If you figure this play out in advance -- anticipate it -- that's a fancy word for guessing, you guess like I play's going up to a certain person.

Many times, the player trying to bring the puck up will get himself into a position where there's only one play he can make.

That's when you have the advantage. You can move into the path of the pass before the man try to shoot it. If he shoots it you can intercept it and many times this will result in an unassisted goal.



That's how Pit Martin, one of our fine young rookies, scored in Toronto earlier this season on just such a play.

Frank Mahovlich was being run on the boards. There was a fellow up in front at the point.

Mahovlich tried to get the puck through the middle to Red Kelly, Pit anticipated his pass. He just stopped, pivoted, picked up the puck and shot it in the net, for an unassisted goal.

Heavy Agenda In Police Court For Magistrate

PICTON (Staff) — A rather heavy agenda faced Magistrate P. E. D. Baker of Kingston, as he filled in for vacationing Magistrate T. W. Wills in court here Wednesday.

Raymond Mattis, 36, 342 Dufferin St., Trenton, pleaded guilty to a charge of breaking, entering and theft, and was fined each with $3.50 costs and ordered to make restitution in the amount of $70.

The charge was laid by Provincial Constable Earl Graves after investigating a break-in at Kenny's Store in Consecon on January 15 at which time about $35 in merchandise and about $33 in silver and small bills were stolen. Mattis was with two other persons at the time.

Mattis told the court that he had left the army about a year ago, and that the freeze-up had cancelled his construction work, but that if he could pass a medical, he had a job to start on Monday at Kingston.

Magistrate Baker said, "I feel that society would be served better if this man were to be steadily employed and I am disposed to treat this man in a manner which will give him the opportunity to earn a living." Mattis lives with his wife and family.

Russell Andrew Weldon, also 36, 341½ Sidney St., Trenton, was also charged with Mattis, and in addition was charged that he broke into a summer residence of a Buffalo N.Y. couple, where he stole merchandise valued at $156, some of which has been recovered.

Weldon appeared in Trenton court on Tuesday along with two other men and pleaded innocent to these two charges, and as Magistrate Baker sat at the Trenton Court, he decided he would deal with Weldon, who... be re-appears for sentence there. He will be sentenced on a total of five charges, when he re-appears in the Trenton Court. He pleaded guilty to both charges here Wednesday.

Fast Driving Expensive for Belleville Man

PICTON (Staff) — John E. Murphy of Belleville, was fined a total of $40 when he pleaded guilty to a charge of driving 70 m.p.h. in a 30 m.p.h. zone in Picton on January 31.

Murphy told the court that he worked for a finance company in Belleville, and he was driving the car, a very high-powered one, for the first time and had no idea he was driving so fast.

"It is a pretty dangerous speed to be driving in a built up area," commented Magistrate P. E. D. Baker in assessing the fine.

Isaac G. Maracle, 38 Lake St., Picton, was fined a total of $111.50 when he pleaded guilty to failing to remain at the scene of an accident and with failing to provide proof of insurance on the car he was driving.

The charge was laid as the result of an accident on Lake Street on February 2 when Don G. Miller told police that he had been hit by a southbound car while he was northbound on Lake St. about 3.10 a.m.

Constable Ron Robin, who investigated had no difficulty tracing the wheel marks from the scene to the home of the accused.

Damage to both cars was estimated at $400. Oddly enough...the fact Maracle was driving had just been turned in by the Crown Attorney Lance Northerry.

"This was very foolish of you, and quite expensive," said the Magistrate.

Theodore Mindle of Consecon, decided he would go to Picton and not having a car, called a cab. When he arrived in Picton, he had but 60 cents with which to pay an $8 taxi bill and was promptly taken to the Picton Police Department by the taxi driver from Trenton.

Mindle who is drawing unemployment insurance, was given a six months suspended sentence and ordered to pay the $8. in restitution plus court costs of $9.50. "You will now have a criminal record," the Magistrate told the accused.

H. S. Board Will Obtain Administrator

PICTON—The Prince Edward District High School Board will hire a secretary treasurer-administrator to look after the business details of the district high school at Picton.

The new man, expected to be hired for a salary of approximately $6,000 per year will combine the duties of administrator with that of secretary treasurer, at the present time there is but a part time secretary-treasurer.

The decision to hire a full time sec. treas. administrator was made last night at a special meeting of the board addressed by Jack Huggins, business administrator of Central Peel High School, and J. C. Tummon, secretary Ontario Association of school business officials.

A committee of Sheriff H. Collyer, Gordon Walmsley, Mrs. S. W. Hart and Dr. J. W. Fyfe was named to prepare advertisements inviting applications for the new position.

WANTS GOLDEN HAWKS

TIMMINS (CP) — The Timmins - Porcupine Chamber of Commerce Tuesday urged all chambers in Canada to back its resolution seeking the reorganization of the RCAF aerial aerobatic team—the Golden Hawks. The chamber says the team, which the defence department broke up this month to save the government $1,000,000 a year, is Canada's only prestige symbol.

Varsity Whips McMaster

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The highflying line of Steve Monteith, Sonny Osborne and Hank Monteith accounted for five goals Wednesday night to power University of Toronto Blues to the senior intercollegiate hockey title with a 7-3 win over McMaster University at Dundas.

The second-place University of Montreal Carabins could manage only a 2-2 tie against McGill Redmen in the other scheduled encounter, leaving Toronto a clear road to the championship.

Montreal and Toronto each have one game left to play but the Blues have a three-point lead.

Brothers Steve and Hank Monteith fired two goals each in the Toronto victory while linemate Osborne contributed one. Bob Awrey and Don Fuller got the others.

Barons Whip Reds 7-1, Indians Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Anything can happen in the American Hockey League when the best in the west meets the least in the east.

If you'd been looking for a potential upset before Wednesday's games you'd be bound to pick the Providence Reds, a close-to fourth in the Eastern Division, to Cleveland where the Barons were clinging to a two-point lead in the western race with a record of three points gained from their last eight starts.

Pitts burgh Hornets, Cleveland's closest pursuers, looked like a good bet to clobber Springfield Indians, the eastern tail-enders, and possibly pull even with the Barons.

What actually happened was that Cleveland barely worked up a sweat in pounding the Reds 7-1 while the Indians walloped Pittsburgh 6-4, giving the Barons a working margin of four points in their race to the wire.

Buffalo Bisons, needing every point to catch Rochester Americans for the last western playoff spot, blew a two-goal lead as the teams played to a 3-3 overtime tie that preserved Rochester's 12-point edge.

FUNERAL SATURDAY

BOSTON (AP) — Bill Stewart, a former National League baseball umpire and National Hockey League coach and referee who died Tuesday, will be buried Saturday after a requiem mass at St. Thomas Aquinas Church in Boston's Jamaica Plain section.

On The Dotted Line!

CHICAGO (AP) — Durable Dave DeBusschere, the only pro athlete still doing double duty in basketball and baseball, is heading for spring training with a weak leg, a strong arm and a determined philosophy.

DeBusschere signed his baseball contract with the Chicago White Sox Wednesday, then received permission from the Detroit Pistons of the National Basketball Association to leave the club and head for spring training.

DeBusschere has been sidelined most of the NBA season with a broken leg received in a game against Philadelphia, Nov. 6. He returned to the line-up in January but aggravated the injury, and has been sidelined ever since.

The 23-year-old right-hander, DeBusschere was used as a spot starter and as a reliever for the White Sox last year—his second in the majors—and compiled a 3-4 record with a 3.11 earned run average in 24 games.

The opportunity to leave the Pistons will enable DeBusschere to round into baseball form, even though his leg is weak, and prepare for a full-scale assault on a starters' berth with the White Sox. He will join the advance camp at Sarasota, Fla., opens.

Two other pitchers with disappointing records in 1963, also signed contracts Wednesday.

Billy O'Dell signed with San Francisco Giants for an estimated $26,000, down about $4,000 from 1963.

The veteran southpaw was 14-10 last year compared to 19-14 the previous season.

The other was Chuck Estrada, one of the big question marks in the Baltimore Orioles' plans.

Estrada had won three games and lost two last season when he was sidelined June 1 with a sore arm. He underwent surgery Sept. 25 for the removal of bone spur and calcium deposits in his right elbow.

Other players signing Wednesday were infielder Harry Bright with New York Yankees, second baseman Tony Taylor with Philadelphia, pitcher Tony Cloninger with Milwaukee, first baseman Gordy Coleman with Cincinnati, and outfielder Gino Cimoli with Kansas City.

Nfld. Moose Eating Itself Out of House and Home

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—The Newfoundland moose population is eating itse't out of house and home.

The moose first destroyed the ground hemlock. Then the island's native birch became so scarce that the voracious animals turned to balsam, liking the small seedlings.

Between the moose, fire and insects, the balsam fir also is in danger of serious depletion.

Newfoundland's moose population follows a pattern of continued growth until recently when numbers were noticed to be dropping. They increased quite rapidly from their introduction to the province in 1904 until 1940 when a very rapid gain started. This ended in the 1950s, with peak population reached in 1956.

Government officials have expressed no alarm about the decline of the moose. They feel it may be just the downward curve of a cycle.

However, it has been established that the moose are not healthy, and it is believed that only a healthy moose will reproduce satisfactorily.

FEW CALVES

Supporting the belief that there will be fewer adult moose is the fact that observers say they saw only one-third as many calves in the 1960-63 period, compared with the 1921-56 period. Calves killed in 1963 represented only five per cent of the total kill, compared with 15 per cent in the earlier period.

"We are actually hunting only 15 per cent of the land area of Newfoundland," says Resources Minister W. J. Keough. If fir regeneration was destroyed, the moose population would "crash."

"We still have a great many moose in Newfoundland and we have the highest hunter-success ratio of any Canadian provinces providing a general open season. The department has been aware of the inevitable decline . . . for a long time and we have been adjusting seasons accordingly. The hunting seasons have been more restrictive in recent years."

Mr. Keough notes, however, that in spite of the general decline, his department has received many complaints from residents of Burin and the Bonavista peninsula that the present season is too restrictive and that there are many more moose than the department establishes."

Newfoundland's 1963 season ran from Sept. 16 to Dec. 31.

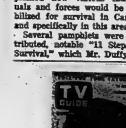
HI-Y CLUB

Lt.-Col. A. B. Duffy was the guest speaker at the meeting last evening of the boys' and girls' Hi-Y Clubs of BCIVS and the YMCA.



Mr. Duffy is the co-ordinator of the Emergency Measures Organization for the Quinte area. In his presentation he made use of a chalkboard and charts to explain and illustrate what would happen in the event of a nuclear disaster. He explained how various individuals and forces would be mobilized for survival in Canada and specifically in this area.

Several pamphlets were distributed, notable "11 Steps to Survival," which Mr. Duffy recommended should be on every home library shelf. He spoke to an attentive audience and answered a number of questions from them.

At the Belle

"UNDER THE YUM YUM TREE"

"Under the Yum Yum Tree," new Columbia comedy starring Jack Lemmon now playing at the Belle Theatre, is one of the raciest, wildest, happiest and healthiest films ever to hit the screen. It is fresh, in the sense of original, and it is fresh . . . in the sense of "fresh!"

Produced by Frederick Brisson and directed by David Swift, "Under the Yum Yum Tree" is chiefly set in an apartment house packed with pretty girls; but mainly it's the bachelor girl-chaser who owns the place, will rent to no others. Not even the arrival of Carol Lynley and her fiance, Dean Jones, is allowed to upset Lemmon's dreams of conquest; the young couple's pre-marital experiment in "Platonic togetherness" merely adds additional zest to Lemmon's pursuit of the shapely Carol. Also complicating Lemmon's hoped-for-love life are Edie Adams, as Carol's aunt and a former flame, a worldly-wise young woman fully aware of the landlord's persuasive ability to outmaneuver even the finest of feminine resistance.

Imogene Coca makes her feathre film debut in "Under the Yum Yum Tree" as Lemmon's beautiful disapproving housekeeper, who watches with glee as Lemmon goes down to one defeat after another in his determined chase after the new girl across the hall, and Paul Lynde is seen as her hen-pecked husband, Lemmon's man-of-all work.

"Under the Yum Yum Tree" opens an engagement at the Belle Theatre today.

AT THE PARK — A thoughtful Joan Caulfield fingers the engagement ring offered her by Robert Taylor in this scene from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Cattle King," opening tonight at the Park Theatre. Taylor plays a rancher who fights against the machinations of land grabbers in the exciting story of the Wyoming Territory in 1883. The rousing outdoor drama was filmed in color on locations in California's High Sierra country. It was directed by Tay Garnett. On the same program in color "The Slave" starring Steve Reeves. Both features are first showings. Complete shows 7.00 and 8.45 p.m.

Cuba Causing Confusion In U. S. Diplomatic Circles

By JIM PEACOCK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Washington's recent actions involving its Cuban difficulties leave the feeling that Cuba is causing more confusion than concern in the United States capital at present.

This feeling prompts some to wonder whether the confusion is accidental or political.

Certain circumstances appear in the U.S. suggest that the confusion is deliberate and that Cuban decisions may have been influenced more than a little by the fact that presidential elections come up in November.

As the U.S. has encountered difficulties in Panama, South Viet Nam, Cambodia and elsewhere, the suggestion has been made in public speeches inside and outside Congress and in newspapers that the U.S. should get tough in its foreign policy.

CRY APPEASEMENT

One influential editor said in a front-page report earlier this week that the U.S. cannot earn international respect "by placating our enemies, by feeding soothing syrup in the form of our taxpayers' money to Ingrates, or by placating our allies at the expense of U.S. interests or security."

There is some evidence that this feeling is growing generally in the U.S. and it is intensified when applied to Cuba, as was indicated by the outcry over Britain's sale of buses to Cuba.

It seems significant, therefore, that announcements that bring such headlines as U.S. Curtails Aid to Five Countries That Sell to Cuba are more likely to stir public support for the administration of President Johnson than bring down the regime of Fidel Castro in Cuba.

The headline quoted is from a New York newspaper and it topped the Washington report of the U.S. state department's announcement Tuesday that it was cutting foreign aid to five countries as a penalty for their trading with Cuba in spite of the U.S. economic blockade.

WITHHELD DETAILS

The state department, in announcing that aid to Britain, France and Yugoslavia had been cut off entirely and aid to Spain and Morocco had been frozen at present limits, gave no details.

The press officer refused to give the amounts of aid—which totalled no more than $50,000 to France and Yugoslavia, $200,000 to Spain and a mere $5,000 to Britain's case—and he refused to say why he couldn't give the details.

Some interpret the move as an indication that the Johnson administration has chosen to risk good relations with allies and two key non-aligned countries rather than permit them to continue defying U.S. policy.

As a political expression of anger, the move has the appearance of one designed less for its impact on those trading with Cuba than for its impact on the voters who will elect the U.S. president in November.

TO PREPARE STATUTES

OTTAWA (CP) — Legislation was introduced by the government in the Senate Wednesday leading to preparation of a new edition of the Consolidated Statutes of Canada. A bill introduced by Senator John Connolly, government leader, would establish a commission of legal experts to bring the 1952 statutes up to date with all amendments and new laws passed by Parliament since then.

Conscription Proposed by Liberal Member

OTTAWA (CP) — A backbench Liberal MP, apparently representing a number of his colleagues, proposed Wednesday that conscription of young men for a year's military service be employed to promote biculturalism, fight delinquency and reduce unemployment.

The proposal by Gerald Laniel (L — Beauharnois - Salaberry) is second on the list of resolutions scheduled for debate this session during the limited time available under Commons rules for private members' bills and motions.

The motion said the government should consider adopting "compulsory service in this country for all men 18 to 21 years of age, the service duration to be approximately 12 months."

Mr. Laniel, a member of last session's defence committee, spoke of the proposal in the Commons last October and embodied it in a formal resolution for the opening of the new parliamentary session.

He was a flying officer with the RCAF during the Second World War and has been a regular in the militia since the war.

SEVERAL BACK IDEA

Several MPs in the Liberal party, and perhaps in opposition groups, are known to support the idea. They see some form of national selective service as a means to unite young men of differing backgrounds and cultures.

Topping the list of private members' resolutions is a proposal by H. W. Herridge (NDP —Kootenay West) to create a water pollution control division in the federal government.

Other proposals ranged from promoting new waterways between the Ottawa River and Georgian Bay and from Winnipeg to Edmonton, to improving social security measures generally and lowering the 70 year qualifying age for old age pensions to 67 for 1967, Canada's centenary of Confederation.

Barry Mather (NDP — New Westminster) wants to restrain the use of tobacco by law, and Jack Roxburgh (L — Norfolk), who represents an Ontario tobacco - growing area, wants more money spent on research into tobacco production "to ensure the continuance of the vital part being played by the tobacco industry in the economy."

CAN'T WORK TOO FAST

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A labor union can fine its members for working too fast, but cannot expel them for exceeding union work quotas, the U.S. National Labor Relations Board has ruled. A board decision affirmed Wednesday the finding of Trial Examiner Martin Bennett in a dispute between home builders and the AFL-CIO carpenters union.

Movie Column

Bette Davis Not Helping To Stoke Fires in Feud

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Notes and comment on the Hollywood scene—

Those who aimed to start a feud between Bette Davis and Susan Hayward got no help from Miss Davis. The actresses were paired in Where Love has Gone—Bette as Susan's mother, though only a decade separates their real ages.

"The only actress I couldn't get along with was Miriam Hopkins," said Bette. "But I would never bring any differences we might have onto the set. A movie company doesn't have time for any such nonsense."

Mike Connors, who finds himself caught between Davis and Hayward in Where Love has Gone, found the way to lick the movies' reluctance to hire stars of television series: a two-year layoff. After Tightrope went off the network, he found film work scarce. So he did a night club act in Mexico and Argentina, where the series was popular.

He returned and landed Good Neighbor Sam with Jack Lemmon and Romy Schneider, directed by Where Love has Gone and movie with Doris Day. . . .

Oscar winner Anne Bancroft's ambition might surprise you. She'd like to play Romeo and Juliet. But, she explains: "I'd like to play Juliet my own way —very Italian. I think she was a girl who was very impulsive and emotional; she's the one who kept leading Romeo on and getting him into all that trouble."

She admitted her with probably will go unfulfilled. "To play Juliet that way would be to invite criticism," she explained, "And I don't want to risk that kind of rejection at this stage in my career." . . .

George Murphy figures his film image is an advantage in his candidacy for the Republican nomination for U.S. senator from California: "I never played a heavy, so the voters think of me as a nice guy. And I never was in any scandal-Matter of fact, newspapermen used to say they wished I would get into some fixes so they could write about me."

9TH BELLEVILLE CUB PACK HOLDS "GOING-UP" CEREMONY

9th Belleville Cub Pack (St. Margaret-in-the-Hill) recently held a "Going-Up" ceremony at which time five young Cub Scouts in a symbolic ceremony took that all important step of joining their big brothers in the Scout Troop. The ceremony, a symbolic one, as set down by the founder Lord Baden Powell many years ago is well known to all in the Scout movement. At this time the young Wolf Cub is led from the shelter of the Cub Pack by the Akela or Wolf Cub leader, and handed over to the Scoutmaster of the Scout Troop. It is a highlight in the life of many a young Canadian boy and in fact to many thousands of boys throughout the world.

The young Cubs who made this step in their scouting life were sixers Robert Gordon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Gordon, 213 Pine Street; Michael Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Murray Johnson, 297 Bridge Street East. These two boys were unique in that they had earned all fourteen proficiency badges available to Cub Scouts. This is a goal dreamed of by many but attained by few since it involves a great deal of work and effort on the part of the boy. Congratulations are due to these two boys for setting their goal and attaining it.

Going up with them were Bruce White, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed White, 33 Southwood Crescent; Doug. LaBrash, son of Lyle LaBrash, Herchimer Avenue South, and Jim Gillespie, son of G. Gillespie, 19 Alfred Drive. These boys too deserve much credit for the work they have done.

Leading the boys across to the Scout Troop was Cubmaster (Akela) Lee Twigg, assisted by assistant Cubmaster (Bagheera) Merrill Gordon. Receiving the young Cubs and welcoming them into the Troop in the traditional Scout manner was Assistant Scoutmaster Murray (Mo) Angus, acting in the absence of Scoutmaster Don Kirkman, absent due to commitments elsewhere with the RCAF. The boys will lead an active life in their new Troop as they are already embarking on a winter weekend camp and hike with their still older brothers-in-arms the Rover Scout crew under the guidance and leadership of the Rover leader Alf Murray. The boys will have much in adventure to look forward to if they will continue along the Scouting road of life.

9th Belleville group is also fortunate in that they have a very active participator in the rector of the parish to which this group is attached. Rev. Dunlop participates actively in the group committee work and is most interested in the work of the young boys. He is a keen advocate of the religion and life award to the older Scout which in turn develops the spiritual side of the boys life and the truer meaning of the Scouting movement in general.

Youth Stole Fine Painting To Get Ransom

BRUSSELS (AP) — Rubens' Negroes Heads, one of Belgium's great art treasures, has been recovered and a youth has admitted he stole it Monday hoping to get ransom, police said Wednesday.

The youth blamed a radio crime serial he listened to.

Andre Beugnies, 19, was arrested in a telephone booth as he was phoning the curator of the Brussels Ancient Arts Museum, from where the 17th-century painting was stolen.

The painting, 18 by 25 inches, was found intact at the home of Beugnies' grandmother, where he stayed, prosecutor Raymond Charles and chief detective Georges Van Cauchenbergh told a press conference. the authorities said he told them he worked alone.

For a painting valued by experts at $1,000,000, the youth asked a ransom of 50,000 francs ($17,000', they reported.

Charles said Beugnies had been inspired by a radio serial which describes the adventures of a reporter on the trail of a gang led by "the Jaguar." The Jaguar's latest exploits was stealing valuable paintings.

The unframed Rubens was in Charles' office as he held the press conference.

DESERONTO

$3,000 Held In Account Said Menace

DESERONTO — "The three thousand dollars now held in account for a roof for the arena is a menace," stated Stafford Claus in addressing town council Monday night.

The president of the Athletic Association was in council chambers to follow up his written request for funds to paint new fence boards at the arena and to replace the old building now standing.

Speaking at the invitation of the mayor, Mr. Claus pointed out great difficulty in obtaining funds from local manufacturers and business men.

"Whenever we ask for money," he said, "we are told we already have three thousand, and to use it."

Mr. Claus was referring to monies that had been gathered in the past and designated solely for building a roof over the present outdoor arena. He stated that attempts to divert that money into maintenance and upkeep had always failed.

"Because of this, no one wants to provide for what is a good cause," he said. He added that members of the association had paid for upkeep and reconstruction out of their own pockets.

"The three thousand dollars is a menace," he continued. "Until it is used no one wants to give to the work of the Association."

WANTS SPORTS DIRECTOR

In answering the representative from the Athletic Association the Mayor, Gerald Lott, indicated that it was "important to know where the money of the town is spent when such grants are made." He suggested that the town appoint a sports director who offered the job to Mr. Claus.

The D.A.A. president declined the position on the grounds that it would create an unwieldy link between council and the Association. He recommended that the council appoint one of its members to the Association instead. Since the building and property belonged to the town he felt this to be a reasonable way of reporting back to council.

Council decided that the request for money be turned over to the finance committee for consideration.

After the council passed their motion Councillor Marks moved that the council grant $200 to the Deseronto Athletic Association.

The motion was carried.

100,000 Refugees on March In Eastern Part of India

NEW DELHI (AP) — More than 100,000 refugees are on the march or huddling in makeshift camps in the crowded east end of the Indian subcontinent.

Official estimate 30,000 Moslems have been driven out of Indian Bengal by Hindu rioters and 60,000 Hindus have fled East Pakistan in the wake of Moslem rioting.

In the swelling migration northward, about 50,000 tribal people have fled from East Pakistan into the Garo Hills tract of Assam, the Indian government reports. These include large numbers of Christian converts, according to Indian officials.

The Indian and Pakistan governments are hard put to find rice for the refugees. There is widespread official anxiety that the stream of human beings could turn into uncontrollable torrents.

Officials also see a danger of new religious rioting as a result of the refugee movement. Jobless, grudge-bearing refugees of earlier years were among the chief arsonists and knife-wielders in last month's riots.

Preventing mutual solution of the problem is the bitter India Pakistan quarrel over Kashmir. There also is a dispute over the nationality of several hundred thousand Moslems in the Indian border districts around East Pakistan.

India has been evicting them as Pakistani while Pakistan insists they are rightfully Indians.

Cupid Finds Phone Talk Cheap But Only Until Bell Gets Wise

TORONTO (CP) — Doreen Guildford, 21, found out how to telephone her boyfriend long distance without paying for the calls, she admitted in court Thursday.

Magistrate Donald Graham reserved judgment until March 19 on the fraud charges against Miss Guildford, saying he wants a full restitution made by then.

Bell Telephone Company officials said the 161 calls amounted to $275 and were placed from here to Clinton air force base near London last October, November and December.

The calls were charged to persons whose names were picked out of the telephone directory by the girl.

"That's pretty sloppy of the company," said the magistrate.

Detective John McWatt said the direct dialing system the operator merely asks for the telephone number of the caller and there is no way to verify the number.

Army Court Investigates Shawinigan Armory Raid By 'Well-Organized Kids'

Tie up Three, Steal Rifles, Radios, Smash Windows, Rip Queen's Photos

SHAWINIGAN, Que. (CP) — An army court of inquiry may open an investigation today into the theft of military weapons and other equipment from an armory here.

The three-man court was appointed Thursday after five armed youths smashed their way into the armory of the 62nd Field Artillery Regiment in this city, 75 miles northeast of Montreal.

Col. S. M. Suttie, a member of the court, said the bandits are probably "a well-organized bunch of kids."

Acting with Col. Suttie in the investigation are Maj. Real Comtois and a third unidentified officer.

The raiders tied up a caretaker and two army members before escaping with 33 semi-automatic FN rifles, three 9-millimetre pistols, 12 portable field radio sets and a mimeograph machine.

They also defaced two pictures of the Queen, knocked out a number of windows and smashed the locks on all inside doors at the armory.

In Ottawa, Defence Minister Hellyer said he would make a report to Parliament today on the robbery.

LACK MECHANISMS

The stolen weapons were said to be useless to the thieves because their firing mechanisms, locked up separately, were not found by the intruders.

The theft set off a round of questions — some serious, some mocking—in the House of Commons and the Quebec legislative assembly.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker demanded to know from Mr. Hellyer what is being done "to protect the armed forces and also the public against the armories from dastardly conduct such as this."

When the defence minister promised a report for today, an unidentified member cried out: "The ministry should resign."

It was the third weapons theft from an armory in Quebec in recent weeks. The two earlier breaks occurred in Montreal Jan. 30 and in the northwestern mining town of Noranda last Saturday.

In Quebec City, Provincial Treasury-general Rene Hamel told an assembly questioner Thursday local police have the first responsibility in the search for bandits who have robbed weapons from armories.

THIEVES NOT MASKED

The unmasked, French-speaking thieves involved in the latest robbery were described by three first-hand witnesses as ranging in age from 18 to 23.

The witnesses were Octave Heppel, a janitor at the armory, and Capt. Jacques Jolinville and WO2 C. Barniere, both of the army.

As they arrived at the building shortly after 8 a.m. they were pounced upon and tied up in the cellar. None was hurt in the robbery.

Before the raiders left they wrote "ALQ" in foot-high letters on the armory floor and wall in black chalk.

The initials are the same as those of "L'Armee de Liberation du Quebec" a name mentioned during a 10 - week wave of terrorist bombings in Montreal which ended last May 20.

TELLS OF FRAUD

Mr. Heppel said that when he arrived at the armory Thursday "there didn't seem to be anything wrong and I went into the cloakroom.

"When I came out I was looking up the barrels of two revolvers."

An army spokesman said the raiders got into the building by smashing the window of a rear door.

It took the three captives about four hours to break free after the raiders left.

The weapons taken from the Noranda Armory have been recovered and Robert Dumas, 18, the eldest of three youths accused of stealing them, has re-

Thant Given Time to Win OK for His Cyprus Plan

Banks Will Know Fate Thursday

By STRUAN MATHESON

MONTREAL (CP) — Hal C. Banks learns Feb. 27 whether he will have to face trial on a conspiracy to assault charge in addition to his trial on a charge of conspiracy to assault with intent to wound, maim or disfigure.

Preliminary hearing on the charge of conspiracy to assault rival sailors in the case of Richard Greaves four years ago ended Thursday following two hours of testimony from a former Seafarer member the Crown had brought from Vancouver only to have him declared a hostile witness.

Banks faces trial March 2 on the conspiracy to commit assault on Capt. Nicholas Wash, a Canadian Merchant Service Guild (CLC) organizer, with intent to wound, maim or disfigure. Walsh was beaten up in Owen Sound, Ont., in August, 1957.

Greaves, an official of the National Association of Marine Engineers (CLC), was beaten up Jan. 30, 1960, in his Vancouver apartment. Witness at that preliminary hearing said he suffered two black eyes, a broken nose and cuts as well as body bruises and had trouble breathing because of the nose injury for the next nine months.

REJECTS MOTION

At the start of Thursday's hearing, Judge Emile Taschereau ruled against a defence motion to quash yet another charge against Banks in connection with the SIU seamen's march on Ottawa last October to protest establishment of a federal UNITED NATION (AP) — Secretary-General U Thant today obtained a delay in United Nations Security Council debate on Cyprus until Monday while he continued private talks on his plan to ease the crisis.

Council members agreed to Thant's request for the delay and the next meeting was scheduled tentatively for Monday afternoon.

General agreement on broad objectives was reported from private negotiations on Thant's proposals for an international peace force, an impartial mediator to seek a political accord between the feuding Greek- and Turkish-Cypriots, and a Security Council guarantee of Cypriot independence and territorial integrity.

A Cyprus government representative said there was general agreement that a mediator should be named and that the Security Council should be linked to the council through a committee headed by Thant.

However, discussions were continuing on the nations that should be asked to supply the troops.

NICOSIA (Reuters)—The airlift of 1,500 British troop reinforcements for troubled Cyprus continued today to beef up the 8,000-man British force keeping the peace here.

It began Thursday and is to be completed by Sunday.

The British troops are trying to prevent fighting between the traditionally hostile Greek- and Turkish-Cypriot communities.

A communique from the joint truce force of Britain, Greece and Turkey on Cyprus said a British patrol was fired on by Greek-Cypriot irregulars near the Nicosia suburb of Nicosia during the night. There were no casualties.

A Cyprus government spokesman said two small incidents occurred Thursday in the Vialia area of Paphia, Western Cyprus. In one, he said, six or seven Turks ambushed two motorcyclists, wounding one seriously and one slightly. In the other, Turks cut loose with about 30 machine-gun rounds at a Greek-Cypriot gendarme post.

Buyers Will Be Protected

TORONTO (CP) — Attorney-General Fred Cass said Thursday there is no question in his mind that the Ontario government must provide a means of dealing with consumers' complaints.

Mr. Cass said the government is inquiring into a consumer protection law in England that gives buyers four days to withdraw from purchase contracts.

He said he had not yet decided whether such a plan—suggested to the government by Fred Young (NDP — York-view) a few weeks ago—would be timely for Ontario.

"I am personally interested in this approach," said Mr. Cass. "We're waiting hopefully to see if it does work."

In outlining the English plan to the house, Mr. Young said many consumers are given high-pressure sales pitches and sign the dotted line only to regret it later.

With four days to think it over, many victims of shyster door-to-door salesmen could demand to be let out of their contracts, he said. The salesman would be forced to refund the deposit.

The Attorney-General said he expects to introduce legislation during the current session of the legislature to provide the increased consumer protection.

He said the legislation could be in the form of amendments to the Unconscionable Transactions Act, whose validity was upheld last year by the Supreme Court of Canada.

In other legislature business, NDP leader Donald MacDonald introduced a bill to reduce the voting age in the province to 18 from 21.

He said Ontario should take this action before falling behind other provinces. Saskatchewan

Lawyer Refused Right to Present Evidence Bantu Killed Self After Police Torture

JOHANNESBURG (AP)—"He hanged himself," Magistrate R. T. A. Muller said in a Pretoria, South Africa courtroom. "His death was not due to any offence by any other person."

The routine phrasing of the finding was typical of a verdict for a suicide inquest. But this was no routine suicide. This was the case of Looksmart Ngudle, a Negro political prisoner held under South Africa's 90-day law.

Victor Berrange, the lawyer acting for the Looksmart Ngudle's relatives, carried on a running legal battle with Muller for 10 days. Then he walked out before the verdict because Muller refused to allow him to introduce evidence attempting to establish that Looksmart hanged himself because police in prison had been torturing him.

Evidence Berrange had assembled on assault and torture was ruled inadmissable after evidence was given by another magistrate. This magistrate had visited the prison and reported Looksmart's body bore no marks although he had complained of coughing blood after being beaten. The magistrate said no other prisoners had any complaints. Police witnesses also denied they had beaten or maltreated any prisoner.

Ever since Balthasar Vorster, South Africa's minister of justice, introduced the "90-day" clause among his sweeping security laws, people have been worried about its effects.

The 90-day law allows Vorster's senior police officers to detain anyone without a warrant and keep him in isolation for up to 90 days at a time. The purpose officially is to obtain information on suspected subversion. No charge need be laid and the detainee need not be taken to court. He can be kept incommunicado.

At the end of 90 days a detainee can be released or, if Vorster and the police think it necessary, he can be detained for another 90 days. In effect the law can mean indefinite imprisonment without trial. There are at least two known cases of men serving three 90 - day stretches.

Many eventually came before courts and were charged under South Africa's web of security laws. Many were released after a co - operating with the police. Others still are in prison. Some sit in prison after being acquitted in court.

Greek King Has Operation For Ulcer Amid Fears for Life

ATHENS (AP)—King Paul of Greece underwent an emergency operation for a stomach ulcer today, and a medical bulletin said it had been successful.

The bulletin was issued at the royal palace after fears for the king's life had steadily mounted in Athens. It gave no indication of how long the operation lasted.

"This morning the king underwent in the Tatoi Palace an operation for treatment of stomach ulcers," the bulletin said. "The operation was carried out successfully by Dr. Alexander Manos."

"The operation went very well," Dr. N. Tsamboulas told reporters assembled outside the palace 28 miles north of Athens. He was one of five doctors who signed the medical bulletin.

In his last official act before the operation, the king signed a decree Thursday naming Constantine, the 23-year-old crown prince, as regent. As such, Constantine will perform all the royal duties, at least until the monarch has recovered.

Schlitz Seeks Permission to Complete Deal

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The Schlitz Brewing Company asked court permission Thursday to complete its purchase of 950,000 outstanding shares of John Labatt, Limited, of London, Ont., despite a U.S. antitrust challenge suit seeking to block the entire merger deal.

The Schlitz Company already has acquired 790,000 shares held by members of the Labatt family by mailing $1,250,000 in cheques a few hours before U.S. District Judge George B. Harris issued a restraining order Wednesday to halt the acquisition deal.

Harris said he would rule next Monday on the request by Schlitz to accept the 950,000 publicly - owned shares being held in escrow at Toronto by the Canada Trust Company.

Arthur H. Dunn, San Francisco lawyer for Schlitz, said he had delivered an irrevocable letter of credit to the Toronto Bank to pay out $21,850,000 for the 950,000 shares offered by about 8,000 Labatt stockholders. Schlitz offered to pay $23 (Canadian) a share, about $4 a share above market price.

OTTAWA (CP)—Justice Minister Favreau declined to say in the Commons Thursday whether his department will seek to block the proposed takeover of the John Labatt Brewing Company by the Schlitz Brewing Company of Milwaukee.

Ruby Trial Finds Juror, Respects Psychiatrists

DALLAS (AP)—Defence lawyers in Jack Ruby's murder trial, having accepted their first juror, set out today to find more like him—well-educated persons with a respect for modern psychiatric findings.

Juror Max E. Causey, an electronics analyst, is "just what we've been looking for," said Ruby's chief of defence, Melvin M. Belli.

Causey, 35, holds a master's degree in education. Under questioning, he said he was familiar with the names of some prominent psychiatrists, mentioned by Belli, and knew about books they have written. He did not indicate he had read the books.

Ruby's defence against a charge of murder with malice will be based on temporary insanity. Causey said he has an open mind about what Belli called "transient insanity."

Ruby killed Lee Harvey Oswald, accused assassin of president Kennedy, as Oswald was being transferred from a Dallas jail.

The moments before Causey became the first juror on the fourth day of the trial were electric with drama.

Belli's manner of questioning had indicated he might agree to seat Causey.

First, District Attorney Henry Wade accepted the juror.

When District Judge Joe B. Brown asked the decision of the defence, Ruby's lawyers went into a huddle around him. They asked his opinion of Causey and said he replied, "he looks all right to me."

"We accept this juror," Belli told the court.

Americans, British in Disfavor

Greek Cypriots Suddenly Love Russians

NICOSIA (AP) — Feelings against Americans as well as the British have been rising in Cyprus among the nearly 500,000 citizens of Greek Background.

This animosity seems to be shared by people from the extreme left politically to the extreme right.

Public opinion has undergone a change in the last few weeks.

Suppose that a Washington politician, known for his attacks on Soviet Premier Khrushchev, suddenly decided to call on the Soviet ambassador at Washington to congratulate him on the Soviet's brave stand in defence of freedom and democracy."

Something of that sort has taken place in Cyprus.

Many staunchly anti-Communist Greek-Cypriot leaders have visited the Soviet ambassador in Nicosia to thank him and congratulate him on the Soviet Union's stand on the Cyprus question.

The rush to the Soviet embassy came after Premier Khrushchev's message Feb. 7. This warned against any NATO involvement in Cyprus and supported President Makarios' demand for a UN guarantee of Cyprus' independence and territorial integrity.

At the time, Britain and the U.S. were exerting great pressure on the bearded Greek-Cypriot leader to accept the stationing of NATO forces on the island to help British forces already here to maintain peace between the 480,000 Greek- and 120,000 Turkish-Cypriots. Strong efforts also were made to dissuade Makarios from going to the United Nations.

Archbishop Makarios rejected NATO involvement in Cyprus because he has been committed to non-aligned policy, though he himself is anti-Communist.

He also reflected the general feelings of his followers in this move. A general impression among Greek-Cypriots is that Britain and the U.S. might sacrifice the interests of tiny non-aligned Cyprus in an effort to avoid displeasing Turkey, which is an indispensable link between the North Atlantic Alliance and the Western-sponsored Central Treaty Organization.

This widely held belief hardened into violent resentment against alleged British-American support for Turkish claims and demands for partition. This in turn erupted into anti-NATO and pro-Communist demonstrations against the bombing of the American embassy in Nicosia early this month.

Anti-West feeling increased even more when the British government went to the UN Security Council with the Cyprus issue ahead of President Makarios. Greek-Cypriots pictured the British as doing this only a few days after they announced the archbishop not to take the Cyprus problem before the United Nations.

"If the Americans or anybody else send troops to Cyprus to impose a solution favouring partition we will fight them just as we fought the British five years ago," says a prominent member of the Greek-Cypriot Trust Club, noted for its conservative attitude.

Greek-Cypriots do not see their problem in the wider context of the cold war and a possible rift in the NATO alliance if Greece and Turkey are forced to take opposite sides in a shooting war over Cyprus.

Greek-Cypriots see the problem in simple terms as the right of self-determination by the Greek-Cypriot majority so it can rule a fully independent island without interference from any outside power. They also assert the Turkish minority can have guarantees of their rights but not all the privileges they enjoy under the current constitution, which the Greek-Cypriots claim was "imposed" on the archbishop.

A moderate Greek - Cypriot politician contends Khrushchev should decorate the British and Americans for succeeding—as he puts it—in making Cyprus more pro-Soviet in two weeks than the Communists managed to in 20 years' effort.

2 Motions Against Govt.

OTTAWA (CP) — The Pearson minority government was challenged Thursday by two non-confidence motions as the party leaders opened an eight-day throne speech debate with some of the most forceful, incisive oratory the Commons has heard for some time.

A unusual element was the Conservative and New Democratic Party tactics in confining their motions to single subjects—sales taxes and medicare—instead of the usual, somewhat rambling condemnations that make it far easier for the parties to choose a voting position.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker's motion seeks to bring down the government for "failure" to repeal the sales tax it imposed on building materials and construction equipment in the budget last June 13. The roll-call vote will be taken on the motion next Tuesday.

NDP Leader Douglas, in turn based his non-confidence motion on government failure to initiate a federal - provincial medical care plan. Accepted with hesitancy by Speaker Alan Macnaughton, the motion reaches a vote at 5:45 p.m. EST today.

ARE FIRST TESTS

The two votes will be the first tests of the new session for the government. At the last session it weathered nine wants-of-confidence motions, despite the fact that the Liberals are outnumbered 136 to 129 by the combined opposition.

There was no immediate indication of how the opposition parties would line up on the two divisions.

Three Shots Fired at Him But Turkish Premier Unhurt

ANKARA (Reuters) — Prime Minister Ismet Inonu of Turkey, 80, narrowly escaped an attempt on his life here today when a man with a pistol fired three shots at him and missed.

A member of Inonu's bodyguard fired one shot at the prime minister's assailant, but he, too, missed.

Guards swarmed over the would - be assassin and disarmed him. He was later identified as Kemal Sam, about 30, an electrician in a textile factory.

Police said Sam told them: "I am against the May, 1960, revolution. Inonu has been pushing the country from bad to worst, and I hated him. I have been carrying a gun for a long time to kill him."

OTHERS ARRESTED

Police also arrested two other men — a Turkish driver employed by the Romanian embassy and a sports writer on the evening newspaper Vatan, Lutfi Aktas, 30.

The shooting occurred in full view of passers-by as Inonu, who had just left his office, got into an automobile to drive to the National Assembly.

Inonu later drove on to the Assembly, smiling and waving apparently calm. A heavy military guard escorted him into the building.

The elderly Turkish leader, once president of the nation, was a right-hand man to Kemal Ataturk, founder of the Turkish republic. He has been prime minister, except for brief periods, since 1961.

JAPANESE BUS BEST

Youth Centre Committee Is Organized

At the Legion Hall, Pinnacle Street, on Thursday, the Belleville Youth Centre committee was formed. Chairman is Ed Adamson. Other members are: vice-chairman, Lionel Bolley; finance committee, Fire Chief Vance and Bob Carter; committee members, R. Lapinette, Clare Parsons, R. Ellis, Bruce Diamond, P. Wall, T. Neill, P. Barrett, J. Mason, Barry Clegg. who will act as liaison between this committee and the Jaycees, Mrs. G. Carter, Mrs. C. Powell and Mrs. N. Carter.

It was felt the need for such a "Centre" was established and it was the general opinion of the meeting that, to be successful in this venture, this committee must work in co-operation with, and seek the co-operation of Planning Association, the Parkdale Ratepayers' Association and the Parks and Recreation Committee of the City of Belleville.

Many speakers were heard from and much of the spade work of the organization was accomplished. Sub-committees will be formed at the next meeting, consisting of publicity and public relations, ways and means, membership, planning, and women's auxiliary.

It was encouraging to see the public present to look after the interests of the youth in this project.

Reeve Chief Vance, in his remarks, pledged the support of the firemen in any way possible. The Fire Departments share of the proceeds from the Firemen's hockey game next Wednesday night at Memorial Memorial Arena will be turned over to this committee.

The Recreation Committee has been offered free of charge, to the committee, for meetings as a regular basis. The next meeting will be held on Thursday, March 5, at 8:00 p.m. at this centre.

House Briefs

OTTAWA (CP) — A private MP's bill promoting birth control was introduced in the Commons Thursday. In the bill, Robert Prittie (NDP — Burnaby-Richmond) seeks to have deleted that portion of the Criminal Code which makes it an offence to disseminate birth control information or devices.

He said in a statement outside the Commons that the parliament section of the code is an unwarranted intrusion into the private and personal affairs of individuals.

The question of a Commonwealth prime ministers' conference this year was discussed informally with Sir Alec Douglas-Home on his recent visit, Prime Minister Pearson said in the Commons Thursday. But the informal discussions came to no decision and this would be a matter for the 17-odd prime ministers of the Commonwealth, Mr. Pearson said.

A bill that would permit service clubs and religious organizations to raise funds for charitable purposes by raffles and bingos received its first test in the Commons Thursday by Herb Gray (PC — Essex West). Mr. Gray said in a statement that after introducing the measure last session that he had received support from other parts of Canada. Last session's bill did not get beyond the first reading stage because of other legislation on the order paper.

Recapitalization of the debt-burdened CNR is one measure that must be added to the parliamentary agenda if sufficient progress is made with priority legislation, Prime Minister Pearson said Thursday. President Donald Gordon of the publicly-owned railway has said he would like to achieve this before he steps down early in 1963.

Pleads Guilty To Charge of Armed Robbery

KITCHENER (CP)—A youth who testified in magistrate's court Thursday that he stole $3,705 from one bank and deposited most of it in a safety deposit box in another bank the following day, was remanded for two weeks when he pleaded guilty to armed robbery.

Kenneth Murray Mason, 20, of Kitchener told police most of the money left in the safety box in the Toronto-Dominion Bank Feb. 5 was deposited in a Bank of Montreal safety deposit box.

Police said the safety deposit box contained about $2,470.

The court was told Mason, armed with a shotgun, herded the bank employees into a vault. He dropped several hundred dollars during his getaway and accidentally shot a hole in the floor of his rented car, parked in the bank's parking lot.

Coroner's Jury Finds De Vuyst Died of Fractured Skull but Does Not Fix Responsibility

Belleville coroner Dr. John Stock last night impiled critical of the jail staff bumps at cobolics and criminal cases together in custody.

The coroner pondered aloud whether seriously-intoxicated persons should be treated separately at medical cases as he summed up his inquest into a fatal example.

The jury then probed circumstances surrounding the death of 59-year-old George DeVuyst, discovered suffering a skull fracture after he had been remanded to Hastings County jail on a liquor charge. All witnesses agreed the dead man displayed possible symptoms of extreme alcoholism at the time.

Dr. Stock told the inquest jury Mr. DeVuyst was "treated in the same manner as most alcoholics or people under the influence of liquor are treated in our society."

"Should these men be treated as criminal cases or as medical cases?" he asked.

"If a person is found intoxicated in the street they are booked—under the present law and they are remanded to jail no matter what their condition."

JAIL GOVERNOR HEARD

The coroner's comments were underscored later by testimony from county jail governor Thomas Cooke who questioned on immediate treatment available to the sufferer of alcoholism in the jail.

Jail staff can only administer aspirin, codene or sedatives, he said, which is considered by the jail physician must be submoned.

He give them what we have available—but we can't do anything more," said the governor.

"I don't think," confessed the coroner, "there is any easier answer for it. Perhaps you gentlemen can come up with something tonight."

"Inquests usually lose much of their purpose unless you as jurymen can recommend some way to avoid similar accidents can be prevented from happening."

ADDED TO RIDER

The jury, however, failed to take the doctor's hint, and added no rider to its open verdict.

It found that Mr. DeVuyst died from a skull fracture—"cause undetermined."

Prison guards were given credit by the paragraph: "We feel that the staff at the county jail took all reasonable action under the circumstances."

The verdict also gave the formal explanation how —or when—Mr. DeVuyst came by his fatal injury. The jury's evidence showed he suffered a fall the day after he was remanded to jail.

The head injury, Mr. DeVuyst's fall and a bruised eye suffered by a fellow prisoner, a clergyman, were the main focus of the inquest.

The fracture was revealed when acting jail physician Dr. Austin Walters was called in 20 hours after the fall.

Mr. DeVuyst was remanded November 7, was remanded to jail the following day where he was treated November 9 by Dr. Walters, the apparent alcoholic after-effects. The same day he took the fall in his cell. November 10 Dr. Walters was recalled and had Mr. DeVuyst taken to Belleville General Hospital where an X-ray revealed the fracture. He was transferred to Kingston General Hospital and died December 3.

HAD A "HANGOVER"

When he first treated the man, November 9, Dr. Walters said Mr. DeVuyst appeared "suffering from a monstrous hangover."

"Did he say anything about being hit on the head or anything like that?" asked acting crown attorney Tom Lally.

"No, he did not."

Belleville coroner Dr. John Stock last night impiled criticism of the jail staff bumps alcoholics and criminal cases together in custody.

Gordon Hay, arrested on a similar charge and jailed simultaneously with Mr. DeVuyst, had to be recalled to clarify his evidence.

His claimed to have seen the man stagger backward into his cell and trip across a cement floor ledge.

"Anybody push him?" questioned Mr. Lally.

"Nobody pushed him," answered the witness.

Salvation Army captain Ernie Humphrey said when he arrived to conduct Sunday service at the jail November 10, Mr. DeVuyst "seemed to be unaware of his surroundings."

He went to the cell and found the man lying on his cot and received no response to his questions.

"I put my hand on his head —it was damp and hot; and I noticed on this side of his face, this (right) eye was discolored."

"He had a bad black eye."

INFORMED OF FALL

Jail governor Cook, who described the dead man also as a friend, said he went into Mr. De vuyst's cell block at 11.30, the night Mr. DeVuyst was admitted. Following a brief conversation with him he left instructions that Dr. Walters be called next morning if he showed no prisoner for liquor complications.

It was the governor's weekend off duty, but-next day he was informed of Mr. DeVuyst's fall.

"I asked if he was alright, and the answer I got was 'Oh, he's fine, he's just around'."

Monday, after the man had been transferred to Kingston, the governor went down to the cell block and tried to question the inmates on the incident—Gordon Hay "in particular."

"And he admitted to me," emphasized the governor, "that he had never spoken to Mr. DeVuyst fall. He saw him step back in the doorway (of his cell)."

Governor Cook believed Mr. DeVuyst took a tumble when he lurched back from the cell door, snagging his heels on the cement ledge.

"Did anyone actually see Mr. DeVuyst fall?" questioned a coroner.

"If they did see, nobody admitted it," stated the governor flatly.

"Did George DeVuyst have a black eye at all?" asked Mr. Lally.

"No."

"When you saw him you didn't notice a black eye?"

"No."

EXAMINED BY DOCTOR

Jail guard William Hamilton who booked in the prisoner November 8, confirmed Mr. De Vuyst was examined by Dr. Walters, called in next day — Dr. Walters. The doctor gave him a sedative and left a second one with the guard to be administered that night.

Almost immediately afterward Mr. DeVuyst suffered the fall in the cell-block.

"His cell was left open for the night and nobody could—or could lie down any time — all the other cells were locked," a guard Hamilton said.

Suddenly he heard the inmates calling out.

"He was just out the door," answered the guard.

He rushed to the cell where he found Mr. DeVuyst. With the chief turnkey, Mr. Keary he coaxed him onto his cot and applied a wet towel to his forehead.

"Did you notice any bump on his head?"

"Not that I there was no mark on the wet towel either."

"Almost immediately afterward the man insisted on leaving the cell. He sat down at a table in the common room and was handed a deck of cards and read a newspaper.

Turnkey Keary, first on the scene, said he found Mr. De Vuyst lying alongside his bunk.

"Did George complain about his head hurting?"

"No. I noticed his arm was badly swollen."

He said he recalled Dr. Walters to the jail at 9.00 p.m. November 10.

DID NOT LIKE LOOKS

"Why did you call him?"

"Because I didn't like the looks of him (Mr. DeVuyst). I thought he was hollow and George didn't seem to know what was going on."

The turnkey agreed with a juror that roughly 20 hours had elapsed from the time of the fall to his calling the doctor Sunday.

"In your opinion did you think Saturday that he was in bad shape?" queried Mr. Lally.

Long Police Search Ends in Windsor Court

A police search that started last April in Belleville has ended in a Windsor court — and five years in jail for James Augustus Law.

Law was sentenced on a series of charges — among them five counts of forgery laid by Belleville police.

Law, company manager for Pitchfork Paint Ltd. company, disappeared without explanation last April.

Soon afterwards, cheques made out in the company's name — starting drifting back to Bridal-Paint from around the Quinte-Kingston districts. A total of $1,000 was known to the company when Law disappeared.

Law was arrested last month in Windsor.

Two Guardsmen Injured When Car Hits Tree

PICTON — Two members of the First Canadian Guards at Camp Picton are in the Canadian Army hospital at Kingston with head and face injuries suffered when their car left Highway 33, half a mile west of Picton this morning and crashed head-on into a tree.

Taken to Prince Edward Memorial Hospital and later transferred to Kingston, were, Carl Linklatter, 22, and David Slack, 21.

Slack suffered severe lacerations to the top of his head, while Linklater suffered head and facial lacerations when his head smashed through the windshield. Police have not yet determined the driver, but it appeared that Linklater may have been the driver.

Neither man is believed critically injured.

The accident occurred about nine o'clock this morning as the 1963 model car was eastbound out of Picton. For no apparent reason the vehicle left the highway and crashed headon into a tall elm tree. Property damage was estimated at $2,000.

"Well he seemed rather dazed."

Turnkey Keary was later recalled and queried about the black eye observed by Mr. Humphries.

"Have you any idea how he got that?"

"Unless he struck it on the bed (in the cell) I don't know."

"You didn't notice it particularly Saturday before the fall?"

"No."

Police constable Jack Ethier said he and constable James McLinton arrested Mr. DeVuyst after 6 p.m. November 7 on Market Lane "in a very intoxicated condition."

"Did you or constable McLinton strike him in any way?" asked acting crown attorney Tom Lally.

"No sir."

"Was there anything about him that suggested he might have suffered a blow to the head?"

"None to my knowledge."

Justice of the peace Fred Chamberlain said he remanded Mr. DeVuyst to jail next morning.

"He was in a highly nervous state but apparently was quite rational in his talk." Mr. De-Vuyst "had the shakes very badly."

Desk sergeant George Westlake said Mr. DeVuyst "made no complaint about a head injury or being ill."

KNOTT — In loving memory of a dear father, Arthur Knott of Ameliasburgh, who passed away February 21, 1962.

So many things have happened, Since you left us that day, So many things to share with you, If you could only stay.

Every day in some small way, Memories come to cross our way, Although absent you are very near, Still your memory is dear.

Sadly missed and remembered by daughters, son-in-law and grandchildren.

TWEEDY — In loving memory of my dear husband, Frederick Ernest Pipe, who died Dec. 17th, 1960, also my dear father, Frederick Tweedy who died February 21st, 1957.

At the pathways and is an open door.

Through which our loved ones go, To that fair home of peace and joy.

Then they could ever know, Our loving father was waiting there.

To give them strength and love, We then find our comfort, In the thought of God's best.

—Always remembered by wife Daisy and family.

BERLIN (AP)—A West Berlin court acquitted American jazz trumpeter Chet Baker today of narcotics charges, but ordered him to remain in a sanatorium indefinitely.

31 Are Killed In Plane Crash

MANILA (AP)—A Philippine Airlines plane smashed into a Mindanao mountain tonight and the Manila Times said 21 persons died.

The newspaper said two men were found alive after the wrecked DC-3 burned, but that one of them died in a short time of his injuries.

An airline spokesman said he was unable to say how many boarded the 36-passenger plane at Malabang, the last stop before the crash.

The plane was en route to Iligan City when it crashed near Lake Lanao.

Preliminary hearing for March 5 and 14 secured is set for March 3..

Ron Miljure, 23, a former night club doorman, sailor and fruit packer, was declared a hostile witness Wednesday after the prosecution contended his testimony contradicted a statement he signed after being questioned by an RCMP officer in Vancouver last August.

After Miljure had given detailed evidences to support his charges in court Wednesday that he had been threatened and bribed to testify, Judge Trottier said neither his evidence nor his statement "were of much value" in the case.

Miljure was to be returned today to Vancouver where he faces charges of breaking and entering.

ACCUSES RCMP

Before starting his testimony Thursday, Miljure told the court an RCMP officer had intimidated him following his previous testimony by asking him "when did you set this deal up?" and saying "it will be too bad for me."

The prosecution then asked him if certain statements to an RCMP document he signed were true.

Miljure "did not recall at any time" seeing a lot of 10 rival union members the statement and the Still wanted beaten up. He "didn't recall" telling the RCMP officer in Vancouver that "Cunningham had given him the list and told him $500 would be paid for each man assaulted and put in hospital."

Miljure said "the RCMP supplied me with liquor and I don't remember what went into the statement" he admitted signing.

Before saying he had told investigators what was contained in the statement was the truth, Miljure was asked by the Crown to say when and by whom he had been threatened and bribed to testify against Banks.

SAYS HE THREATENED

"I have been constantly harassed, threatened and offered bribes . . . I've been threatened if I won't be a witness," Miljure had told the court Wednesday.

Miljure said the RCMP had threatened to charge him in connection with Greaves' beating unless he testified against Banks. Every time the RCMP questioned him, he said he was given so much liquor he became drunk.

However he recalled dates and places where he had met the RCMP officers, saying he made up copies of what he could remember after each questioning "and distributed them to some friends."

Miljure said the RCMP told him they had evidence he was paid $600 to assault Greaves but did not want to prosecute "small fish like myself — they wanted to get Hal Banks."

The hearing ended after Miljure described a meeting with an RCMP officer whom he said agreed to let him bootleg alcohol in return for testifying against Banks.

Diefenbaker Wants Banks Out of Office

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Diefenbaker implied strongly Thursday that a Canadian Labor Congress union is using a Great Lakes seamen survey to raid the Seafarers' International Union (Ind.) of Canada.

"Know . . . that after some of these people were visited by the questioners they were immediately approached by representatives of one of the unions within the CLC, endeavoring to secure the membership of these people in their union," Mr. Diefenbaker said in launching the eight-day throne speech debate in the Commons.

He also suggested that the reason Hal C. Banks and his executive have not been ousted from the SIU is because of the "courtship between certain members of the NDP and the Liberal party."

Mr. Diefenbaker Wednesday made the Great Lakes seamen's issue the subject of his first question in the new session of Parliament.

Last session, Parliament placed a federal trusteeship over the controversial SIU, dominated at a stinging federal inquiry report, and four other marine unions.

LAUNCHES DRIVE

One of these, the Canadian Maritime Union of the CLC, has since launched a recruiting drive among the SIU membership.

Mr. Diefenbaker's point again Thursday was that a CLC union seems to be seeking to sign up the same people that are being questioned by a voluntary organization which intends to poll 1,000 Great Lakes seamen Diefenbaker asked whether the federal marine trustees are responsible.

He asked again for the nature of the questionnaire and said of the trustees:

"They have been abroad finding out what they could do. We in Canada know what they should do, and that is remove Banks."

Chou Proving His Power As Salesman

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (AP) Premier Chou En-lai has been called Communist China's best salesman. When he's trying to sell to potential customers in Asia, he doesn't court the crowd with back slapping, baby kissing or indiscriminate hand shaking.

Chou is touring Pakistan, where Peking would like to weaken U.S. influence.

Now 66, Chou appears frail. He often stumbles slightly as he walks along the ranks of a guard of honor, his right hand lifted in a half salute.

He looks immensely relieved when the guard of honor ordeal is behind him.

But when he reaches a microphone, he hammers away.

China, he says over and over, fully supports Pakistan's "independent path" and "independent development."

This is obviously aimed at Pakistanis who resent American influence in their country's affairs that has accompanied U.S. aid totalling more than $4,000,000,000.

STARTED IN LOW KEY

Pakistanis applauded politely in Karachi, the largest city in Pakistan, where President Mohammed Ayub Khan's government seemed to keep the welcome in a low key intentionally.

But when the government made it plain — with sound trucks—that an all-out welcome was in order, thousands of citizens in Rawalpindi, the capital, went wild over Chou.

Why the Pakistan government changed signals on the reception is a mystery. But the switch came after Chou met for hours with Z. A. Bhutto, Pakistan's 36-year-old foreign minister. Bhutto returned home from United Nations debate to meet the Chinese leader and his trailing delegation, Foreign Minister Chen-Yi.

The Chinese are known to be putting pressure on Pakistan to sign a non-aggression treaty.

Ayub, asked about a pact, replied: "If nothing sinister will happen, my friend. Why are you bothered?"

PUC Will Reduce Charge Of Collecting Water Bills

TRENTON — The members of the Trenton Public Utilities Commission voted yesterday to reduce the charge for collecting a surcharge on water bills from $11,000 to collect a$ estimated $66,000 to ten per cent of the monies collected. The PUC will make a minimum charge of $7,000 annually for the extra administrative work involved in collecting the extra charge, but after the $70,000 mark has been reached in monies taken in, the billing to the town will be on a straight 10 per cent basis. Councillors, who objected to the $11000 have yet to approve of the new set up but Mayor James MacDonald, a member of the commission, said at a commission meeting yesterday that he thought council would accept the proposed charge.

Commission chairman Charles Hilton, Commissioner C. A. Baker and Mayor MacDonald also voted to proceed with phase one of a search for water supply for the town by the Ranney method as proposed by the Groundwater Development Corporation Ltd. A seismic survey of land on the east and west sides of the river, will be taken to ascertain the quality of the soil. If conditions are such that the method of obtaining filtered water from the river would be possible, the company may be asked to proceed with installation of intake pipes. Total cost to the PUC for Phase One will be $7,000 with roughly that of that recoverable in a government grant, (if the work is started before April 1, winter works subsidy would apply.)

In other business, the commission agreed to sell two lots on the west side of Queen Street to Mrs. Dorothy Thoma Rogers for $5,000.

TENDER ACCEPTED

The Westinghouse tender was accepted from several others for the supply of distribution transformers, as being the lowest.

Two persons who rented hot water heaters from the utilities in 1960 and failed to receive a bill for the use of the heaters, have offered to pay half the bill.

Mr. Hilton said that he thought the two users should be charged nothing at all, as the failure to charge for the heaters from 1960 to 1963 was the fault of the utilities, but the other commission members were glad to get the users' offer of a 50 per cent payment.

The commission will write to Ontario Hydro urging action on a changeover of charging in the recently annexed areas of Trenton. Residents of the area have complained that while they are now in the town and paying town taxes, they are still paying the higher rural hydro rates. And it isn't the fault of the commission.

Faced with buying a new utilities truck this year or paying $1,500 for a complete overhaul of the vehicle, the commission decided to postpone buying until next year and to only put such repairs as are immediately necessary on the truck.

Sergeant R. Howell of Carrying Place, complete with German kopje, checks the fuel load of a Yukon during the turn-around at Dusseldorf airport. Sgt. Howell is on duty with the RCAF Detachment at Dusseldorf, Germany, during the aerial rotation of the 4th Canadian Infantry Brigade Group between Canada and Germany.

Trenton Groundcrew Finds Life in Germany Interesting

TRENTON — Within 20 hours of leaving Canadian soil, Gunner F. D. Ross of Belleisle, Nfld., was unpacked and thumbing through a German rules of the road booklet in his new barracks home at Fort Price of Wales in West Germany.

Gunner Rose, a driver with the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery, is one of 1,000 Canadian Army personnel being rotated between the Canadian Infantry Brigade Group headquarters in the Soest, West Germany and Canada.

A few years ago the same transfer would have meant that Rose, and his fellow soldiers, would have spent ten days to two weeks completing the trip. Following a trans-Atlantic ocean voyage, the soldiers would have been moved across western Europe by surface vehicle.

Today, with 437 "Husky" Squadron on the job, personnel of the Infantry Brigade Group spend only two days off duty, rather than two weeks.

Yukon transports leaving Trenton arrive at Dusseldorf, West Germany each day, six days a week. One round trip is completed each day.

The brigade rotation is an annual commitment of Air Transport Command, and the present rotation should be completed by the end of February. It started in August, 1963, and was planned to take place in three separate time-phases.

An RCAF detachment of groundcrew "personnel is stationed in Dusseldorf to provide servicing for the huge 130 passenger Yukons. Heading the detachment is Flt. Lt. G. H. "George" Nishimura and WO2 E. A. "Soup" Campbell. Seventeen RCAF Trenton personnel make up the detachment, with the assistance of five movements technicians.

The six round trips per week include three freight runs, which means hard work for the Canadian Army Movements Group and its German laborers.

While the Trenton airmen spend most of their time at Dusseldorf airport, it didn't take them long to find their way around the city, however. While a good number of the local citizenry speak English, the Canadians made a good attempt to pick up as much of the German language as they can during their stay — and learn their "please" and "thank you" (bitte and danke).

Dusseldorf is an industrial centre, and the modern buildings, automobiles and well dressed populace almost make one think he is in a large Canadian or American city. The Canadians also find it fairly expensive — there are few bargains left these days.

QUAINT OLD CITY

Real German atmosphere, however, can be found in the Altadt, or old section of the city. Here quaint buildings, narrow streets and imposing statues abound. Also in the old city may be found a few World War II bombed-out ruins.

But with one day off a week (if they're lucky) the Canadians don't roam the old Altadt. WO2 Campbell arranged a bus run to a nearby U.S. military establishment famed for its post exchange, only to have his plans almost thwarted when a Yukon transport arrived unexpectedly on the "day off."

Things worked out fine, though, when a few of the lads were selected to do the shopping for the rest of the servicing crew, who remained behind to look after the unexpected aircraft and its cargo.

Have Money, But What About Time ?

John G. Thompson of Kingston, speaking as a representative of the Investment Dealers Association, told the Sales and Ad Club here that Canadians ought to put up or shut up.

He did not make his point in precisely these words, but that was his contentions boiled down to. Canadians, he said, are quick to criticize U.S. interests which threaten to dominate large sectors of the Canadian economy, but are reluctant to themselves make the investments which alone could prevent such a development.

Canadians, he said, are very conservative when it comes to investment. He blamed this, at least in part, on the operations of Bay Street "bucketeers" which promote "moose pastures" resulting in stock market investment being regarded as a gamble.

All this may be true. There is, however, another fact which it seems to us Mr. Thompson overlooks.

The average Canadian is not as rich as the average U.S. resident. Moreover, because of our climate, living costs are higher in Canada than in many parts of the U.S. Though Canadians have a lot of money, invested in life insurance, or in real estate or kept in banks, we suspect that very little of this wealth is owned by young Canadians. Because of lower salaries and high living costs, it takes them longer to acquire a nest-egg than it does a resident of the U.S.

Now Mr. Thompson himself says that the essence of sound investment is patience. Patience requires more than money; it requires time. Young people, if they have the money, have the additional ingredient needed for successful investment, time. But older people may not have it. With retirement only a few years away, they may ponder whether they may not have to sell stocks while prices are depressed.

Canadians will invest more in stocks when they are wealthier earlier in life, and they will be wealthier when they invest. This is a vicious spiral, but one familiar in any undeveloped land. Here in Canada we are already breaking out of it. We might make faster progress if companies turned over more of their profits to shareholders as dividends. In a growing economy, the temptation is to return profits to expand business, particularly when it is difficult to get Canadians to invest in stocks the money they have saved. But it is just possible this may be a penny-wise pound-foolish policy. Nothing gives people a bigger incentive to invest than a large return on the money they have already invested.

A Cynical Performance

The Soviet Union thinks that the UN Security Council should guarantee the independence and territorial integrity of Cyprus—and then leave Greek and Turkish Cypriots alone to settle their feud.

Nothing could surpass this proposal for callous indifference to consequences.

Such a policy could easily result in Greek Cypriots massacring Turks on the island—behind a protective wall thrown up by the UN guarantee to prevent Turkey intervening.

The only excuse the Russians can advance for such a proposal—if it can be called an excuse—is that precisely the same policy has been advocated in the past by Western powers in a number of situations.

The Russian plan is essentially the same as that which France supported when French paratroopers and Algerian colons were torturing captured natives and forcing them to reveal rebel hiding places.

It is the same policy which Portugal has supported in connection with Angola, where "pacification" has been carried out with napalm.

South Africa views UN interference with its apartheid policies in exactly the same way.

The only difference is a technicality. The French efforts to suppress the Algerian revolt, the Portuguese handling of native unrest and South Africa's segregationist methods are indeed the "internal affairs" of these states.

Cyprus, on the other hand, happens to have been recently granted its independence under a treaty which reserved certain rights of intervention for Britain, Greece and Turkey.

Because of it, the UN could find some way around the "internal affairs" barrier which has kept it from intervening in the other disputes mentioned.

But the Russians either do not know a good chance to set a precedent when they see one or else, which is more likely, are cunningly trying to get the West on record as supporting intervention in the case of Cyprus. Then these words can be quoted against some Western power opposing UN intervention in some later revolt or rebellion.

Parole Board's Mistakes

Brantford Expositor

Though most of Canada's National Parole Board decisions work out well, two recent criminal cases spotlight the urgent need to re-examine the board's powers and freedom for convicts with a record of sex crimes.

The board has extensive powers. On a majority vote, it can amend the sentence of a magistrate, judge or justice of the supreme court has deemed necessary for the protection of society.

Using this power, the board paroled Leonard Dion in September 1962 though he had been three times convicted of sex crimes and a federal judge had told the authorities he should never be released. Now, having soon after release murdered four small Quebec boys, Dion has been sentenced to hang.

It was the same board that in 1962 let Frederick John McDonald three years before the end of the ten - year term to which he was sentenced in Brantford for rape of a 13-year-old Middleport girl, his second conviction for rape. Within a short time of being paroled, McDonald murdered a small girl, and for this has just been sent back to prison for life.

Obviously the board made two colossal errors in 1962, and as a result five sets of parents are left to mourn. In the face of clear evidence that the two men had a behavior pattern that was a menace to society, it freed them, apparently believing they were rehabilitated.

The decision to grant parole is based largely on how an applicant has conducted himself while in prison. Are the devious and unstable convict knows that it pays to behave well as the quickest way to the outside world, and most of them are capable of acting convincingly.

In releasing them, the board, guided by psychiatric opinion, is taking a gamble. Even when two cases with backgrounds known to the board which spelled an unusually high degree of risk if the men were freed. Five children have paid with their lives for the blunder.

Clearly, the board's procedures and powers need review, and in such cases as those of Dion and McDonald its decision should be subject to examination by another authority.

Mr. Fred Lee of Campbellford, will come to this city to reside shortly.

Mrs. Thomas Buckley, Mrs. Joseph Pitt and Mrs. James Power of Read, Tyendinaga township, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Cotter of Burnham St.

Mr. J. Wilfred Holmes, who has been the efficient city tax collector for some time, will be appointed to the office of city clerk to succeed Mr. Wm. J. Thompson who resigned recently. At a meeting of the civic committee it was recommended that a by-law be prepared appointing Mr. Holmes as city clerk. He is now discharging the duties of city clerk and will be succeeding for a tax collector to succeed him in that position.

But Is Plan Feasible ?

Hamilton Spectator

Dr. Pauline Jewett, Liberal member of Parliament for Northumberland, has a vacation plan idea for high school teachers.

She believes that secondary school teachers should be given a year off with a half-year's salary every seven years to get away from the pressure of teaching.

The three hundred and fifty teachers attending the Sudbury conference were cheered when she made the suggestion greeted the idea with a lusty round of applause.

The point at issue, surely, is not whether the idea is a good one—few, indeed, it has much to commend it—but whether it can feasibly be embraced in the economic scheme of things.

The late George Bernard Shaw once observed that every man should pause for a year at the "mid-way age" of thirty-five, to get a fresh outlook on life.

It was an ideal and it made sense. Perhaps, through automation, it will be made possible in certain vocations.

But in those jobs such as high school teaching, where the robot cannot replace the person, there is an ideal which still seems a long way from becoming a reality.

Stirs Reaction

Reports of Rene Levesque, Quebec resources minister, to a Montreal political club audience last week touched off agitated reaction in English-speaking Canada, particularly among newspaper commentators. It is interesting to find that some French-language newspapers in Quebec reacted in the same fashion.

Many Factors Are Involved Concerning Birth of Twins

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: According to my understanding, fraternal twins are the result of a double ovulation (two ova, or eggs, instead of the usual one, in that cycle). The mother is the sole factor in their creation, other than fertilization itself.

However, when one fertilized egg divides and forms identical twins, does the heredity of the mother cause this, or can the heredity of the father also be responsible? — D. M. K.

What's this, an invitation to join the battle of the sexes? If so, I ask to be excused. Anyway, whether twins are the influence of the mother, or the father, there isn't anything that either can do about it.

However, we know a few things, although not all, about the numerous factors which are involved in twinning. Some women have several sets of twins.

But don't shortchange papa, either. It is believed that the father carries a gene which is capable of making a single egg split early to produce identical twins. It is also believed that the father's sperm can have certain characteristics which cause double fertilization when two ova are present.

There is a recorded case of a man who, married twice, had twins or triplets in each of the marriages.

Dear Dr. Molner: Do candy and sweets cause children to have pinworms? If one child has them, can the others get them from the stool in the bathroom? I know a child who had them and was kept in the hospital for a week. Meantime the other children all got them, and a few months later they all got them again. — Mrs. E. P.

Candy doesn't cause pinworm. It is pinworm eggs!

A child (or an adult) swallows the eggs, which are too small to be seen. They hatch in the bowels and more pinworms appear. They in turn move down to the outlet of the bowel and lay more eggs.

That's the story of pinworms. Underclothes, bedclothes and bedding are the logical places for the eggs to be found, but they can then be shaken onto the floor or wherever. Busy childish fingers touch them. And sooner or later some of the eggs are swallowed, and the whole annoying cycle begins again.

If we could keep the children from wetting after going to the bathroom, and before eating anything, and never let a touch hands to the mouth or lips, the pin worm problem probably would become a minor one.

But you know how kids are!

I suggest that you pass along to this family a copy of my booklet, "Pinworm, the Commonest Pest." You can get a copy by sending 25 cents in coin and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me in care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill.

After years of struggle, we now have an excellent medication for pinworm. The weak link in the chain is how to get rid of a few eggs from starting another outbreak, once the problem has been solved.

Dear Dr. Molner: When my son was a baby, we lived in a house with a concrete floor. He was just learning to walk and took some falls that caused small swellings and blue marks on his head. These disappeared after two or three days.

How can I be sure that these falls have left him with no hurt? Should I have cause to worry? — Mrs. P. T.

I guess all children collect some black and blue spots and bumps. When they are just beginning to walk, I much favor

The news that the aspidistra is coming back into fashion needs to be received with some caution. This is not to suggest that it is either untrue or unwelcome, but there is a danger that it may arouse in some breasts hopes that can never be fulfilled. The plant belongs essentially to an age that is past and one that cannot be revived. It would be foolish to read more into the announcement than that the moderns are temporarily attracted by what, to them, is just a novelty. They cannot be expected to appreciate its standing in the homes of earlier generations, where it was to such a part of the furniture as the piano or the chiffonier, which in their turn have been supplanted by the television set and the cocktail cabinet.

Today the aspidistra finds favor because its leaves are useful in the art of flower arrangement; then it was an integral part of the parlor's contents. From its place in the window, emerging majestically from the jardiniere, it was in perfect accord with the venetian blinds, the antimacassars and the gleaming fireirons. The sponging of its leaves was one of the chores no housewife would delegate to the maid, however competent. Good milk went to its cleansing, one recalls.

The revival of interest in the plant seemed possible some years ago, when no less a person than Mae West was said to be extolled its virtues. But the praises of the biggest aspidistra in the world fell largely on deaf ears, which was probably just as well, for its dignity would not have been enhanced by international competition, to be won, inevitably, by America. Whatever its historical origins, the aspidistra is, or was, a part of the English way of life and of no other.

For a time, it would seem, it is to be rehonored. To hope that its re-emergence will be accompanied by a return to the graciousness and serenity that marked its best days is probably as futile as to expect that its new reign will be anything but ephemeral. Sic Transit gloria aspidistrae.

A Good Parent Must Know Himself Well

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

One of the corniest, but truest, of social-work sayings a generation ago was: "There are no illegitimate children — there are only illegitimate parents."

In the intervening time, much of the stigma that attached to persons from illegitimacy, which is all to the good. Now it may be time to propose another saying along the same lines: "There are no problem children — there are only problem parents."

This is a much more bitter pill for us to swallow. The very phrase "problem child" seems to place the roots of the disturbance within the child himself; and we know that in all cases (except for a small minority of extreme cases) the disturbance originates in the relationship between parents and child.

The world is full of problem parents, many of them well-intentioned and intelligent ones, whose problems have rubbed off on the children. They need more help for these children. But few are seeking help for themselves, or even think they need it.

It is especially hard when only one out of three of our children is disturbed. "It can't be us," say the parents. "Look at the other children — they're perfectly normal and happy."

But all children have different levels of sensitivity and different ways of coping with parental problems. Some show symptoms early, and some are late. Some attack, and some withdraw. Some appear to be "perfect" children in late adolescence, and then the troubles break through on a massive and unexpected scale.

Then there is the question of "blame." Once parents have been persuaded to sensitively find that their own neurotic difficulties have been transmitted to the child, they tend to blame themselves or each other. But "blaming" is a moral category, not a psychological one, and has no place in the chapel rather than in the clinic.

Why "blame" a parent for what he has done to a child, when that parent is acting under the influence of irrational forces that reflect his own childhood? Why not blame the parent's parent? And the parent's parent's parent? And all the way back to Adam and Eve for rearing a son who killed his brother.

The only way to break this chain of recrimination is to admit that we are not wholly free in what we do or not do, and that responsibility to our children begins by purging ourselves of our own infantile reactions. In a deep sense, there are no "good" parents or "bad" parents. There are only those who are tuned in and those who are tuned out — not merely to their children, but to themselves as well.

Bill of Rights Is Revised

Toledo Blade

Despite the homage paid to that part of the U.S. Constitution known as the Bill of Rights — the first 10 amendments protecting individual liberties — we all know that times have changed.

Isn't it about time for freedom-loving Americans to modernize old concepts, bring this U.S. creed up to date, fashion the form to mid-twentieth century conditions of peril within and without that threaten the person less American heritage of individual freedom?

It seems fitting to propose a new version of the first 10 amendments:

Article 1. Freedom of speech and press shall not be abridged so long as the views expressed are popular. The right of the people to peaceably assemble and petition for the redress of grievances shall not be denied except south of Latitude 39 degrees.

Article 2. An unregulated militia being necessary to the security of the United States, the right of juvenile delinquents, adult hoodlums, and cranks to bear machine guns, dirks and switch-blade knives shall not be infringed.

Article 3. No U.S. soldiers shall be quartered in or near any American community unless the right of local authorities to serve the customers of the area of their choice is maintained.

Article 4. The right of people to be secure in their homes and persons against unreasonable searches and seizures shall be violated only by police agents and vigilantes.

Article 5. No person shall be deprived of due process of law except those suspected by congressional investigators and duly chartered authorities.

Article 6. All citizens shall have the right to know the nature of charges against them and to confront their accusers so long as this meets with the approval of public officials elected or unelected politicians, and non-charitable private societies.

Article 7. The right of the petit jury shall be preserved wherever verdicts conform to local public opinion.

Article 8. There shall be no cruel or unusual punishments, and even those suspected of outright villainy shall not be subjected to starvation, torture, imprisonment, and barred from employment.

Article 9. The enumeration of these particular rights shall not way deprives the people of other rights, especially the inalienable right of the majority at any time to deny the rights of unattractive, peculiar, or nonconforming individuals.

Article 10. All powers not given to the United States Government belong in the states provided, however, that the U.S. Supreme Court under Chief Justice Earl Warren shall be prohibited from making any decision that deny states the right to withhold the full privileges of citizenship from inhabitants who dwell in cities or whose complexion is un-American.

Oh, yes, there might be some objection that this is unclarity in form between the old-fashioned Bill of Rights as enunciated by our forefathers and the proposed, modern revision of the first 10 amendments would result in confusion. This, however, is a mere matter of semantics, and a difficulty easily resolved.

The revised, popular version need not be known as the Bill of Rights at all. It could be hailed proudly as the American Bill of Wrongs.

Britain Not Second-Class Power - - P. M.

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Douglas - Home denied heatedly Thursday any suggestion that Britain is a second-class power. He said Britain's nuclear weapons are strong enough to deter Soviet aggression on their own.

Interviewed on television by a panel of newspaper men, he was reminded of his contention, often repeated in recent political speeches, that if Britain gives up its nuclear weapons it will be a second-class power.

"Aren't we that already?" the interviewer said.

"No," Douglas-Home replied. "I don't know how you can even suggest it when you see what our forces are doing all over the world."

In that case, he was asked, Britain must be a first - class power—"then how would you describe the Soviet Union and the United States?"

"The United States and the Soviet Union are two great powers but I don' divid t world into ers, the two greatest powers, but I don't divide the world into first- and second-class powers particularly, because I think that we exercise a different kind of influence and we have a great deal of power—and do not let us underestimate our own nuclear arm.

Ontario's Chief Criticism Of Canada Pension Plan Answered by Prime Minister

OTTAWA (CP) — Ontario's chief criticism of the Canada Pension Plan proposal centred on the 10-year transition period, but no apparent reason exists for making it any longer, Prime Minister Pearson told the Commons Thursday.

There would admittedly be fewer problems if the transition period were shorter the contributory plan takes full effect—were longer, Mr. Pearson said in launching his first major speech of the new session of Parliament.

But it was also important that only about 30 per cent of Canadian workers now are covered by pension benefits and "our concern is the other 70 per cent," he said.

It would not be reasonable to lengthen the transition period unless this was the only way to stop a "crippling" impact on existing private plans, Mr. Pearson said.

He added flatly, in answering criticism of Premier Robarts of Ontario, that a forever no such danger for the existing plans.

PLANS CAN ADJUST

The prime minister said he believed the existing plans could adjust readily to the revised Canada Pension Plan, which he proposed to bring before a special Commons committee for study as quickly as the House can.

Mr. Pearson was applauded loudly when he said he was probably at the most important item of those outlined in Tuesday's throne speech.

He said the Conservatives are opposed to "it—a reference to the fact that Opposition Leader Diefenbaker earlier had criticized the system of pension plan registration numbers for most Canadians.

Mr. Diefenbaker interjected to say that his party pioneered the plan. Mr. Pearson replied that no such plan would be possible—as no unemployment benefits were possible — without registration numbers.

Just as Mr. Pearson rejected Mr. Robarts' reservations about the pension plan, he rejected the attitude of premier Lesage of Quebec that a proposed student-loan system was another invasion by the federal government into provincial jurisdiction.

Such loans were of assistance and in some cases essential assistance to students, he said. They were no more an invasion of provincial rights than were Farm Credit Corporation loans, home improvement loans or others provided under federal direction.

There would have to be close consultation with the provinces before the detail was worked out. He was confident this could be done to avoid any suspicion of federal intervention.

Mr. Pearson said his government also was committed to provision of more scholarships and bursaries — this is the 10,000 of $1,000 each that has been mentioned frequently — and the Canadian Universities Foundation had been invited to examine this whole question.

The foundation would recommend what measures were necessary beyond the present ones and also those that would be acceptable constitutionally.

RCAF Veteran Sponsors Motion Favoring National Compulsory Military Service for Year

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — Gerard Laniel, the 39-year-old RCAF veteran from Quebec City who is sponsoring a motion favoring compulsory national service for young Canadians, said his proposal is winning surprising support in the province of Quebec.

Mr. Laniel, Liberal MP for Beauharnois - Salaberry, expects his motion to be debated in the Commons within a few weeks.

In an interview Thursday, he said several of his Quebec backbench colleagues may support it. But he doesn't expect immediate adoption of the plan by the government.

"Many of the people I have talked to approve a form of national service. I should there would be more opposition to it, especially in Quebec. But whether or not they'll get up and say so, remains to be seen."

Mr. Laniel said the purpose of conscripting young men into the armed forces for a year's training is to give young Canadians a greater sense of responsibility and discipline.

TRAIN IN SUMMER

"The plan wouldn't prevent people from continuing their school studies. University students could take summer training, and even earn some money."

Mr. Laniel first proposed national service in a speech in the Commons on defence policy last October. The idea was discussed in a public opinion radio program in Montreal at that time and 80 per cent of the participants favored it, he says.

He sees the change of attitude resulting from the rise of a new generation.

"When I refused to enlist in the last war at the age of 17, my family refused consent, and I had to wait until I was 18. That was one generation. My father was called up in the First World War and had to spend all kinds of money trying to keep him at home. That was another generation. I'm convinced the old attitudes have changed."

ONE-YEAR TERM

His resolution on the Commons order paper calls on the government to consider the advisability of adopting compulsory service for all men 18 to 21 years of age, the service duration to be approximately 12 months.

Mr. Laniel said that when young men are conscripted "they'll be unhappy for a month or two—but then they will realize it isn't so bad and they'll learn a lot about the country and about other young Canadians."

A Liberal caucus committee on bicultural ism discussed ways of promoting exchanges of young Canadians between one part of Canada and another, Mr. Laniel said. National service would fill the bill.

"But we have to be realistic about this. I don't think the government or the defence department will jump at this and adopt it right off the bat. . . . But this debate may build up public opinion in favor of it."

Parliamentary Secretaries Are Named

OTTAWA (CP) — Appointment of one new parliamentary secretary and a shuffle in the position of seven others were announced in the Commons Thursday by Prime Minister Pearson.

Eight other parliamentary secretaries to cabinet ministers were continued in their present posts. The Commons aides receive annual salaries of $4,000 a year atop their $18,000 pay as MPs.

Guy Rouleau, member for Montreal Dollard and chairman of the Liberal caucus, is appointed parliamentary secretary to the prime minister—a move forecast by Mr. Pearson some time ago.

He replaces Alexis Caron, Hull, who becomes assistant to Postmaster-General Nicholson.

Bruce Beer, Peel, already parliamentary secretary to Agriculture Minister Hays, takes on the additional role as secretary to Forestry Minister Cafre.

The other switches: Hubert Badanai, Fort William, to immigration from public works; Stanley Haidasz, Toronto Parkdale, to external affairs from health; G. Roy McWilliam, Northumberland - Miramichi, to public works from Postmaster - General; John C. Munro, Hamilton East, to health from immigration, and John R. Stewart, Antigonish-Guysborough, to state secretary from external affairs.

Parliamentary secretaries who are unchanged include Edgar Benson, Kingston, finance.

Mr. Hellyer told his Commons questioners that in some cases armories are not given round-the-clock protection "because it would not be advisable to do so."

He added: "But in this (Thursday's) case there were people on duty."

Replying to Douglas Harkness, former Progressive Conservative defence minister, Mr. Hellyer said 1,922 rounds of ammunition for the FN automatic rifle were stolen in the Montreal armory theft.

Robert Muir (PC—Cape Breton North and Victoria) suggested that precautions be taken to prevent Mr. Hellyer from being stolen.

Mr. and Mrs. John Paul Lajoie of Garson, Ontario are pictured following their recent marriage in Holy Rosary Church, Belleville. The bride is the former Lorraine Margaret Golden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Golden of Camnifton. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Emile Lajoie of Garson.

LAJOIE—GOLDEN

A pretty double-ring ceremony was solemnized in Holy Rosary Church, Belleville, recently when Lorraine Margaret Golden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Golden, Camnifton, became the bride of John Paul Lajoie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emile Lajoie, of Garson, Ontario. Father Rufus Delano performed the ceremony before a background of white gladioli, pink carnations and white baby 'mums. James and Vernon brothers of the bride, were acolytes.

Traditional wedding music was played by Rev. Sister Mary Rosario, who accompanied the soloist, Mr. Ernest Reed of Belleville, as he rendered appropriate selections.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length bridal gown of Chantilly lace, featuring a Sweetheart neckline and long lily-point sleeves, highlighted with a princess style waistline and full bouffant skirt. A nylon tulle veil flowed from a headdress of sequins and seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of deep red roses mingled with lily-of-the-valley.

Miss Shirley Fobert, of Belleville, attended her cousin, as maid of honour, wearing a gown of pink chiffon over taffeta fashioned with fitted bodice, scooped neckline and cap sleeves. She wore a cotillion white flowered hat with veil, and matching gloves and shoes, and carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations centred with red roses.

Mr. Guy Gravelle of Detroit, Michigan, uncle of the bride groom, was best man, while Mr. Leonard Toepah of Oshawa cousin of the bride and Mr. Vincent Golden, brother of the bride, were the ushers.

Following the ceremony dinner was served to approximately 60 guests at the Read Parish Hall which was appropriately decorated with pink and white bells and streamers. The bride's table was centred with a three-tier wedding cake topped with miniature bride and bridegroom and flanked with tapering candles. An artistic driftwood centrepiece with white roses and the bridal bouquets completed the attractive setting.

The bride's mother received her guests wearing a beige rayon shear gown with mint green accessories and a corsage of pink carnations. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who wore a sheath gown of champagne beige, matching accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

The reception was held at Read Parish Hall in the evening at which time the couple received many beautiful gifts. Amid showers on confetti and good wishes the happy couple left on a honeymoon trip to points east. The bride chose for travelling a fawn colored ensemble with silver grey accessories.

Guests attended from Ottawa, Kingston, Sudbury, Oshawa, Garson and Detroit, Michigan.

Mr. and Mrs. Lajoie will reside in Garson, Ontario.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

WHAT'S OUR E. Q.?

When you give a party, do you manage to enjoy your guests without really trying? You can if you make the proper kind of party arrangements. For instance:

1. Do you choose foods that can stand a long warming - up period in the oven in case dinner has to be delayed for late guests?

2. Are hot foods the type that do not get soupy or dried out over chafing dish burners before guests get around to "seconds?"

3. Can you get dinner preparations out of the way early in the day, so there's no hectic last-minute cooking to do?

4. Is large party, do you delegate someone to help you receive guests, so you don't have to rush back-and-forth greeting and introducing new arrivals?

5. Are you ready, dressed, coiffed and made-up a half-hour before guests are expected, so you can make a last, unhurried check on final details?

6. Do you have stacks of coasters, cocktail napkins and a tray ready in the kitchen, so you don't have to hunt for them as they're needed?

7. Is the sink or dishwasher free and clear, so dishes may be plopped in just as soon as the table is cleared?

8. Do you have a large tray ready for whisking glasses and dirty ash trays out of the living room as guests are seating themselves in the dining room?

9. Have you alerted a close friend to help in clearing if you find you need an extra pair of willing hands?

10. Are the coffee things set up on a tray in advance, for quick and easy service after dinner, either from a sideboard in the dining room or from a table in the living room?

Woman Grows Up to Be Weight-Lifter

TORONTO (CP) — Here's a switch on the story about the puny weakling who grew up to be a weight-lifter.

The central figure is a woman who, Wally Zvarich, amateur painter, housewife and mother of two children.

Mrs. Zvarich — her name was Tania Warchuk—she lived with her family in Poland and was sickly looking.

It was just before the family boarded a ship to come to Canada that a doctor discovered why. Her tonsils were infected. But they didn't come out until the doctor in Toronto saw her.

She took physical culture courses to build herself up and today is a fine figure weighed 135 pounds and could lift twice her own weight with ease.

Billed as the world's strongest woman, Tania appeared at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto, in army camp shows during the Second World War and at weight - lifting competitions across the United States and Canada.

In 1941, when she was 17, she showed exhibition visitors how to bend over backwards, lift a 75-pound barbell from the floor and press it to arm's length overhead as she stood erect. Once she held up seven men perched on a table. She pressed 1,100 pounds.

In 1947 she strained her back at a show in New York and quit. She was going to be a blouse designer but got married instead. She took up painting three years ago and recently held her first exhibition of 23 oils in a suburban Toronto shopping centre. Now she's planning to attend the Ontario College of Art next year.

Mr. H. G. Harris, Sunday School superintendent, spoke appreciatively of the faithful and efficient work performed by the Sunday School officers and teaching faculty. He also thanked the bus driver and all those who used their cars to transport children to church. The annual picnic and Christmas concert had been successful and throughout 1963 a high level of attendance had been sustained.

The Reverend E. D. Bergman, who acted as chairman, thanked the various departmental officers for their co-operation. "We are all laborers together with God," stated the pastor, "and the faithfulness of all members and the staff is greatly appreciated."

In a challenging address the co-pastor, Reverend J. Mac-Knight, urged the people to seek more freedom in the Spirit and enjoy a greater realization of the presence of God. "Much can be accomplished for God when we work together, united in purpose, in love and vision," said Mr. MacKnight. QUESTION:

Can you provide a "non-curdling" recipe for Scalloped Potatoes? — Constance M. J.

ANSWER:

The standard recipe for making Scalloped Potatoes follows. It is not possible to guarantee the milk will not curdle, for some potatoes, grown in different soils, contain nutrients which will cause curdling. But the common cause is too high a temperature.

QUESTION:

Will you please give a recipe for Hashed Brown Potatoes?—Mrs. A. F.

ANSWER:

Last week we gave here a recipe for Oven Hash Brown Potatoes. Here is the standard top-of-stove method.

HASHED BROWN POTATOES:

Add 4 cups diced cooked potatoes to 4 tablespoons fat in a hot large frying pan. Sprinkle with 1-3 cup milk, 1½ teaspoons salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper. Press potatoes down in the pan, packing them firmly. Cook over, very low heat, without stirring, until browned on underside, about 30 minutes. Fold in half like an omelet and serve on hot platter.

Dinner Menus

FRIDAY

Potato Cheese Souffle (see Wednesday); Fresh Frozen Zucchini; Glazed Whole Carrots; Spinach, Lettuce and Green Onion Salad with Cheese French Dressing; Baked Spy Apples; Tea Milk; Coffee.

SUNDAY

(Guests)

Homemade Mushroom Soup; Spanish Picadillo (see Thursday); Fluffy Rice (see Thursday); Quick n Cooker New Cabbage Wedges; Fruited Orange Cream (see Tuesday); Coffee.

SCALLOPED POTATOES:

Wash, pare potatoes and cut in thin slices. Place a layer of potatoes in greased baking dish. Sprinkle with salt, pepper and flour. Dot with butter. Repeat this until dish is ¾ full. Add milk until it shows through top layer of potatoes. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. until potatoes are soft, about 1½ hours.

QUESTION:

Thanks for the recipes I received in the mail this morning. Sorry I didn't make my request plainer — it's a long, slow-cooking recipe for rice pudding I noted in the oven that I really want. Perhaps you will be kind enough to find that one for me — Mrs. H.C.B.

ANSWER:

BAKED RICE PUDDING (no eggs; repeated from Nov. 8/60):

1-3 cup long-grain (not quick-cooking) rice, ½ teaspoon salt, 1-3 cup sugar, shake of nutmeg, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla, 3 cups milk, ½ to 1 cup raisins (optional).

Wash rice and boil in water for 10 minutes. Drain and add remaining ingredients. Pour into greased baking dish; place in pan of hot water, and bake 2 to 3 hours at 300 deg. Fahr. Stir frequently until pudding is nearly cooked then brown slightly.

The theme for the service was "Let Us Pray" and the Scripture was read by Mrs. R. Edmondson. Mrs. A. Christopher was the key lady and was assisted by Mrs. B. Harder, Mrs. E. Ray, Mrs. D. Douglas, Mrs. L. Pearson and Mrs. J. Beal.

Mrs. R. McGrath introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. J. Cooper of Sidney charge. Her address was based on prayer. Mrs. L. Pearson and Mrs. R. Johnson sang a duet with Mrs. H. Hancock at the organ. Mrs. F. Aikens expressed thanks to Mrs. Cooper for her fine message; also to Mrs. Pearson and Mrs. Johnston for the lovely duet.

The offering amounted to $25.50 which goes to help Christian work throughout the world.

MARMORA — The World Day of Prayer service was held in St. Paul's Anglican Church with the several Protestant churches of the district participating.

Mrs. Roy Frost presided at the console of the organ. Others assisting in the service were Mesdames Armstrong, Sandercock, Stewart, Bateman, Bauder, Hull, Cuddy, Martin and McCoy.

There was a large number present.

RAWDON — On Friday afternoon, February 14th, about 30 ladies from Mount Pleasant, Bethel and Wellman's gathered at Mount Pleasant United Church for the annual World Day of Prayer.

The service was prepared by Dr. Madeleine Barot, one of the executive secretaries of the World Council of Churches, Geneva, Switzerland.

Mrs. Garth Joslin officiated at the organ and Mrs. Donald Knight arranged the meeting. The theme of the service was "Prayer and giving." Mrs. Harry McAdam read the Scripture and gave the invocation. Also taking part in the service were Mrs. Burton Sharpe, Mrs. Will Heath of Bethel, Mrs. Omar Dracup of Wellman's, Mrs. John Malheron of Bethel, Mrs. Donald Heath of Bethel, Mrs. Kenneth Tompkins of Wellman's, Mrs. John Carlisle of Wellman's, Mrs. Ralph Jeffs and Mrs. Stanley Williams. Mrs. Marguerite McMullen contributed a vocal selection.

The offering amounted to $8 and will be added to the total received across Canada to support the Bible societies of Canada, Japan, Korea, Indonesia, Egypt, Burma, West Indies and Brazil. A complete list of the gifts given from this offerings was printed on the back of the program, which had been prepared by the Women's Inter-Church Council of Canada.

SALEM—The World Day of Prayer services held in Salem church was fairly well attended. Mrs. Everett Sine presided and welcomed all.

Mrs. I. Munroe gave an inspiring address on "Prayer."

Those taking part in the services were Mesdames John McInroy, John Wallace, F. Lehow, Tom Clements, Lindsay Tanner and Miss Edna Tanner.

Mrs. K. Bray and Mrs. Geo. Wood of Ivanhoe, sang, accompanied by Miss B. Fleming. Mrs. Lindsay Sills extended an invitation to join with them in the Day of Prayer service in West Huntingdon Presbyterian Church next year when Mrs. Sills as key-woman.

Housewife's Keen M... Pleading for Stimu...

DEAR DORIS — I am 21 and married ... At 16 I graduated with my junior matric ... and then took a one-year-business course ... six months. I've always liked school and ... used to read a great deal.

Now I feel as if my mind has become ... blank. After a nine-hour office day I have ... a house to keep with no domestic help (... husband says I am much too miserable to ... have someone in); and right now I'm not ... spending a penny that's not necessary.

Would it be possible to increase my ... education through correspondence courses? ... If not, please suggest literature for me to read. — CINDERELLA.

DEAR CINDERELLA — Who wouldn't? You have talents which are crying out to be drowned in a sea of self-pity.

Your provincial department of education can help to correspondence courses; I can (and will) send you sources of learning, and books, including inspirational which can help you exchange those dark glasses for rosy ones.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — I've got two gruesome problems for advice! First off I'm 14 and all my 14-year-old girl friend allowed to go out! And — you guessed it — I can't! Do you ... it's fair?

Second, on Christmas Eve this guy came back to our place. We had quite a bit of fun and we began to like each other quite a bit. Then the next week another guy gave me his ring. How do I tell my Christmas Eve Fun Guy?

I like Mark but Link and I are going steady now so it's different. How will I tell Mark? — I'M A SLOB.

DEAR SLOB — Apparently you are not allowed to go out, but "this guy" is allowed to come in. Your best bet is to have no steady. Be nice to all the guys.

(Putting your dilemma on paper helps. And a five-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope will get you professional counsel from Doris in a private reply.)

I even re... placed the broken flagstone path ... with a new concrete walk. There were other things that I did ... all at my own expense. Even the neighbors com... plimented me on the results.

In fact, they seemed happy about it but my landlord. He is suing me for $3,000. He claims I have destroyed the value of his house. He says the brown paint was an important part of the house and that the ... shutters were valuable antiques, that the trees I cut down represented an irreparable loss, and even that flagstone paths were much more character than concrete.

I am convinced that my improvements have increased the value of the house — at least to me. Everyone agrees with me that if he were fair he would pay me money for what I did, not take me. — Mr. W. L. O.

Answer: I don't want to minimize the hazard that one risks in any lawsuit, nor do I recommend or condone alterations of property without the owner's consent or permission. Frankly, I am inclined to sympathize with your landlord, for it is his property and he has the right to his preferences and choice.

From the real estate aspect, however, and based upon the information you have presented, I believe it will be difficult for the courts to sustain his extreme claim. It probably would be necessary for a qualified expert to prove that there was a market value loss of $3,000. It has been my experience that in cases like this, damages are usually nominal.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I am a hard worker and a good mechanic, but, as I discovered, a lousy businessman. My garage and repair service business failed and my wife and I were finally forced into bankruptcy. I have always believed in paying all of my obligations, but I had no choice. I had no trouble in getting a good job and am already an assistant manager.

I want to buy a house and went to the bank I have always dealt with. They refused to give me a mortgage and said that because of my bankruptcy I was no longer considered a good credit risk. I explained that that was only for the business and that I have always paid all of my personal debts. They still say no and that I must, somehow, reestablish my credit. I wish I knew how.

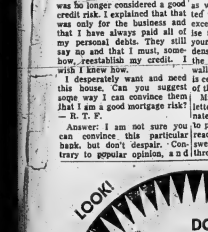
I desperately want and need this house. Can you suggest some way I can convince them that I am a good mortgage risk? — R. T. P.

Answer: I am not sure you can convince this particular bank, but don't despair. Contrary to popular opinion, and despite all the new automation devices they use, banks are not machines. They are run by men with feelings, personal convictions, and varying opinions. Your bank's rules and regulations regarding a case like yours do not necessarily those of other lending institutions.

There are many banks and other types of lending institutions. Make the rounds and present your case — being careful to give all of the pertinent facts. Since you have a good job and are financially able to repay the loan, I cannot think that you will find a lender who is willing to take a chance and grant you a mortgage.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: My father was the Director of a small Building and Loan Association. He didn't have the opportunity to go to college, and I wasn't interested in going, so he was very anxious that his grandson (my child) be the first college graduate in our family. When my father died, earlier this year, he left me a small trust property and instructions that the income was to be set aside for my son's education. After taxes and expenses the income is roughly $500 per year.

We are planning on putting this money in the bank and just let the interest accumulate for the 17 years until our son is ready for college. The bank where my father worked pays only three percent interest while there are banks in our town that pay four percent. If it doesn't make a great deal of difference in money, however, for sentimental reasons I would like to use my father's bank. If I had gone to college maybe I could have used the money myself, but since I didn't, could you tell me how important the difference in the interests can be? — Mrs. S. W. W.



Answer: I have always been an ardent believer in higher education and am happy to answer your question if it will assist in your son's. If you deposit $500 per year for 17 years, the principal and interest accumulated will be $12,322 if the bank pays three percent, or $11,207 in the bank that pays three percent. The difference in the financial question, but only you can decide if the sentimental gesture is worth the difference of $1,112.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: My problem isn't very serious, but it is very annoying. Each winter, as soon as the temperature outside drops, my windows steam up. When it really gets cold I often have to wipe up puddles of water from the window sill several times a day. Is there anything I can do to correct this condition? — E. B. D.

Answer: Your windows "steam up" because the warm air inside your house contains a relatively large amount of moisture which condenses when the air hits the cold glass in the windows. To help reduce this problem by controlling the amount of moisture in the air. Excess moisture is harmful to life, you apparently have, in your home, several sources that introduce excess moisture into the air. You can control condensation by eliminating these sources. If this is not practical, further moisture reduction can be obtained by using a dehumidifier. They are available and relatively inexpensive.

This condition can be serious as well as annoying. If permitted to continue indefinitely this excess moisture can compromise the structural soundness of your house. In all likelihood, condensation also is taking place on the interior of your outside walls. Over a period of time this is certain to result in the rotting of the structural wood members.

Mr. Meltzer welcomes your letters and comments. Unfortunately he is unable to write to personal correspondence with readers, but will attempt to answer as many letters as possible through his column.

major announcements:

1. His measures to protect Canadian periodicals against tough foreign competition will include an increase amendment under which advertisers will not be able to count as tax-deductible expenses the cost of buying space in a foreign periodical aimed specifically at the Canadian market. Exempt will be Time and Reader's Digest, which for some time have published Canadian editions in Canada.

2. In effect, he turned aside Ontario Premier John Robarts' strong criticisms of the Canada Pension Plan and said the legislation for the contributory, wage-related pension measure will be introduced soon—without waiting for the federal-provincial conference in Quebec city starting next March 31.

REJECTS LEAGUE VIEW

3. He also rejected the attitude of Quebec Premier Jean Lesage that the proposed federal student-loan fund is an invasion of provincial education rights. There would be close consultation with the provinces in working out detail. Quebec has been informed of the federal plan before it was announced in the throne speech.

4. He made no three new farm measures — broader and extended powers for the farm credit corporation, major improvements in crop insurance, and measures to ease the high cost of modern farm machinery.

The prime minister predicted that the Canadian economy will continue to expand this year at the "substantial" rate established in 1963. With economic stability prevalent, prospects were better for alleviating major economic problems.

Mr. Pearson's speech also included a major pronouncement on national unity. It obviously was a carefully - considered statement and he followed his prepared text closely.

He stressed that the bicultural program on which the government had embarked would in no way prejudice English-speaking majority, ethnic minorities or unilingual civil servants.

There had been considerable "loose talk" about biculturalism and bilingualism which was aggravating the problem of national unity.

Mr. Pearson appealed to all parties to help argue the case against prejudice, dissension and extremism.

Mr. Diefenbaker, speaking for 90 minutes, appeared to strike hardest with a cutting critique of Mr. Pearson's handling of federal - provincial affairs. He said in part:

"... the course of action of this government in the short time it has been in power has been one of protestations of goodwill, uneasy concessions, and a creeping centralization disguised as co-operative federalism.

"... The fabric and structure of Confederation has been weakened by its being dragged into the arena of partisan politics by the Liberal government in its desire to derive political advantage from division between the races."

He said government action "given rise to sectionalism."

Mr. Diefenbaker also blasted the plan to issue all employed Canadians with nine-digit identification cards. He said it is the first step towards more centralization in Ottawa, and said the plan smacks of "regimentation within the nation."

He contended that between 7,000,000 and 8,000,000 people in Canada are living either on the border or below the border of poverty."

He called for tax cuts aimed at low-income and middle-income groups; higher wages—not in the form rather than productivity, but in most cases have lagged behind productivity gains; higher old-farm income; massive public spending on schools, housing, health facilities; improved social security.

Mr. Douglas also belaboured the government for "giving away" its pension plan. He said modifications made by Mr. Pearson in January amounted to a sell-out to the insurance companies and their spokesman, Mr. Manning.

The NDP leader called flatly for recognition of Red China, warned against selling uranium to France without making sure it is only for peaceful purposes, and told the government bluntly to "start negotiating" to get rid of nuclear weapons.

Social Credit Leader Thompson saw little evidence that the Liberal government is determined to "inspire fiery enthusiasm and dynamic courage."

"Where are the new paths?" he asked. "What are the new paths? Are there any new paths?"

He asked the government to act without haste on the pension plan, so as to ensure the portability of pensions across Canada by nailing down provincial agreement.

Divorcee Takes Shot at Wrong Person

DALLAS (AP)—A distraught divorcee took a wild shot in the busy Dallas air terminal Wednesday at a man she mistook, by her later account, for radio executive Gordon McLendon.

The bullet, fired from 15 feet at W. W. Overton, 46, of Dallas, lodged in a small handbag carried by D. A. Peterson of Park Ridge, Ill. Both men were waiting to board a 4:45 p.m. flight to Chicago.

Dyer's wife shoved the woman, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Stone, 47, to the floor, police said, as she tried to shoot again as the weapon jammed. An airline employee wrested the .32-caliber automatic pistol from Mrs. Stone.

McLendon, also a candidate for U.S. senator in Texas' Democratic primary May 5, described the incident as an obvious attempt to assassinate him. He said he would ask Attorney-General Robert F. Kennedy to order an FBI investigation.

City detective Frank Mole said Mrs. Stone told him she had been upset since a hidden microphone killed President Kennedy here Nov. 22.

Questionnaires Are Not Recommended Date Bait

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I have a good friend who makes out a questionnaire and hands it to every male who asks her for a date. If he refuses to fill it out, she refuses to go with him.

The test consists of 30 questions ranging from religious beliefs (Number One), to "Do you feel a husband and wife should help with the dishes if she holds a full-time job?" (Number 11).

At first when I heard she did this, I didn't believe it so I asked her. She replied, "I am 23 years old and every man I go out with is a potential husband. I'm not going to waste my time on someone I couldn't possibly marry."

Can you imagine turning thumbs down on a man because he likes to read in bed or because he'd rather play cards or go bowling with the boys than go somewhere with his wife?

The questionnaire seems nuts to me but this girl has plenty of dates. Please comment. — OMAHA.

DEAR OMAHA — The questionnaire idea is not only appalling but self-defeating. I don't know what this girl's got that makes her so dateable but if she's seriously hunting for a husband, she's doing it all wrong.

Her research technique would make most males as nervous as a long-tailed cat in a room full of rocking chairs.

Write to me in three years and let me know if she's still single — and handing out questionnaires. I'll bet she is.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — This year I became acquainted with an exchange student from another country. When I asked her to give me her impressions of America I was shook by what she said. She thoughtfully told me, "You Americans have the highest standard of living in the world. You lead the way in a good many areas, but your young people show their parents less respect than in any country I have ever visited."

I resented her remarks, but later that week I saw a classic demonstration of what she was talking about.

At a family dinner my 16-year-old cousin told her mother to shut up because she didn't know what she was talking about. This girl's brother (age 19) informed his father that he "had holes in his head" then turned to his grandfather and said he was "cuckoo, too."

Do you have any comments to make on this sort of thing? What is wrong with American teen-agers that they are the most poorly behaved in the world? — ASHAMED.

DEAR ASHAMED — It is unfair to lump all American teen-agers together and describe them as mannerless and disrespectful. Most teen-agers do not trump on their parents and kick them around verbally — simply because most parents would not permit it.

The 16-year-old girl who told her mother to shut up had been talking that way for quite some time. Ditto the boy who spoke insultingly to his father and grandfather.

Show me an ill-mannered, disrespectful child and I will show you a set of parents who have failed to do their job.

You will bite your tongue, careful or not,

Try Cutting Your Teeth On Few Brain Twisters

. . . By JACK HUTTON . . .

So you're looking forward to examinations in a few weeks and you figure you're a dope to set the world on fire?

Try cutting your mental teeth on our annual list of brain twisters that appear below. You may recognize one or two old friends — which means you should solve them easily.

I'll admit right now that if you solve half of them, you can impress anyone around the kitchen table. Solve every one of them and you're a whiz.

EASY ONE

First, an easy one. I'm holding two coins in my hand which add up to 51 cents. What are they if one of them isn't a 50-cent piece.

Hah. Ready to give up yet? The answer, of course, is that I've got a 50-cent piece and a penny. One of the coins isn't a 50-cent piece, but that doesn't mean the other isn't.

Remember the old chestnut about the fellow who is carrying three billiard balls home but has to cross a rickety bridge that will only support 160 pounds? Trouble is, he weighs 120 pounds and each billiard ball weighs 10 pounds.

How does he get across in one trip with the entire load?

The answer? It's easy. Our friend simply juggles the billiard balls so that one ball is constantly in the air. (Just try this some time).

The next is one which you shouldn't answer immediately. Imagine a man looking at the portrait of someone else and saying, "Sisters and brothers I have none, but that man's father is my father's son."

What relation is the speaker to the person in the portrait?

Uh-uh, don't be so hasty. The last time I mentioned this in the column, readers insisted for months that an incorrect answer was the correct one. One reader in St. John's Nfld., still swears that she's right.

The answer is that the man is looking at a picture of his own son. Many still insist he is looking at a picture of himself, but a few moments of study will prove that they're wrong.

Or what about the rabbit chasing the tortoise and cutting the distance between them in half every minute?

If he starts out two miles behind the tortoise, how long will it take him to catch up?

The answer: Never. Our poor rabbit theoretically cuts the distance in half each minute, but never catches up. It means he winds up only a hair behind the tortoise (no pun intended), but he's still behind.

Here's a final one which your mother and father were tackling years before we were born. And I'm going to leave the solution to your family conference.

Three men check into a hotel and pay $10 each or a total of $30 to the manager. The manager decides later that he's overcharged them by $5 and sends this sum upstairs with the bellboy.

But, alas, the bellboy is a dishonest fellow and pockets $2 for himself, repaying $1 to each of the three men. This means each of the three men has paid $9, which totals $27. Add the bellboy's $2 and we get $29.

What happened to the last dollar?

BEATLES BUZZING

When I mentioned the British group, the Beatles, in a recent column, I didn't realize how devoted their support is in Canada. Here's what two Winnipeg readers had to say about my mention of the — ah — "hair-cuts."

Jackie Lusty wrote: "Your actions seem to me as if you are acting like a jealous 2-year-old. If they are as lousy as you make them sound, tell me why they have made $17,000,000."

It was comforting to find somebody else who felt I was older than 2 years old. This reader, signed A Beatle Fan, declared, "I have no idea how old you are, but by the article you wrote, I would imagine that you are a frustrated middle-aged man."

"The Beatles aren't mop heads," she (or he) continued. "They just have typical English haircuts longified."

If it's any comfort to these two readers, whose comments welcome, I didn't mind watching the Beatles on TV half as much as I thought I would. But I still think the secret of their success is that they look like morons having a whale of a time.

AWAIT APPEALS

Premier Robarts announced that the government will take no action on a union request for a Royal Commission into a strike in which three bushworkers were shot dead near Kapuskasing, Ont., last year, until criminal court appeals in the case have ended.

Local 2995 of the Lumber and Sawmill Workers Union (CLC), of which the three workers were members, asked for the investigation Wednesday.

Mr. Robarts said he understand appeals by the attorney-general's department of fines of $100 each imposed on three bush workers for possessing offensive weapons will be disposed of next month. The government will decide then what action to take.

Health Minister Dymond told the Legislature Thursday no deaths from polio have been reported in Ontario for three years. No cases of paralytic polio have been reported in the province for the same period, he said.

"This record justifies the greatest commendation to the health department for their efforts in maintaining immunization," said Mr. Dymond.

However, Stephen Lewis (NDP — Scarborough West) told the health minister that the area of human health in Ontario is "an administrative shambles."

Mr. Lewis criticized the government for failing to act on the "staggering deficit" in hospital beds, the shortage of nurses, and the fuzzy relationship between the Ontario Hospital Services Commission and individual hospital boards.

James Trotter (L—Parkdale) also zapped the government for doing nothing to keep nurses from leaving Ontario for the United States. One of the main reasons for this is that they are underpaid, he said.

A serious crisis within the nursing profession was predicted by Mr. Lewis. Their requests were being ignored by the Hospital Services Commission and the Registered Nurses Association of Ontario, the latter having refused to consider night differential payments.

The NDP member said the health minister has responsibility for the salvation of the nursing profession.

The argument ensured during Mr. Dymond's presentation of his estimates to the legislature's committee of supply. Dr. Dymond said the desperate need for nurses in the U.S. compared to Ontario is the reason such high salaries are luring away Canadian girls.

Despite all that was said about the nursing shortage, the minister remarked, Ontario is in a "favorable position" compared to the US and the rest of Canada.

A nurse could get $335 a month to start now, compared with $235 six years ago.

NDP Leader Donald C. MacDonald introduced a bill Thursday to reduce the voting age in the province to 18 from 21.

Mr. MacDonald said Ontario should take this action now before it falls behind other provinces.

Many Welcome Arrival From Portugal Each Spring Of Last of Square Riggers

By ED WALTERS

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Sailing ship buffs, armchair sailors and ancient mariners with memories of soft and magic trade winds welcome the arrival from Portugal each spring of the last commercial square-rigger out of Western Europe.

Gazela Primero, a three-masted barquentine — square-rigged on foremast, fore-and-aft-rigged on main and mizzen masts—usually arrives here in late May or early June to take on bait for her prosaic Grand Banks fishing operations.

The 220-ton windjammer is part of a fleet of 31 three-and four - masted auxiliary sailing vessels and about 40 motorships that Portugal sends to the rich fishing grounds off Newfoundland each spring.

The vessels, all schooner - rigged except Gazela, and the motorships fish for cod off Newfoundland and Greenland with one - man dories and baited hand-trawls.

The 63-year-old barquentine is the last of the rest of the fleet and the modern Portuguese hospital ship Dr. Eannes, leaves the Tagus River at Lisbon in early April.

WHITE FLEET

The ships, gleaming in their fresh coats of white paint—they are known here as the "white fleet" — and blessed by the Archbishop of Lisbon call usually at the Portuguese - owned Azores in mid-Atlantic to pick up extra men.

Life aboard Gazela Primero isn't far from what it was aboard Portuguese ships Sir Humphrey Gilbert found here when he took possession of Newfoundland for Elizabeth I of England in 1583.

The Portuguese then gave Gilbert and his crew wine, biscuits, marmalade, salmon, trout, lobster and cod when they learned the three English ships were desperately short of supplies.

And Portuguese sailors on present-day ships still insist that visitors who come aboard in St. John's share their plain soup, fish cooked in olive oil, fresh-baked bread and vinho (wine).

Gazela's crew, some of whom wear old - fashioned wooden - soled seaboots, perform many of the same duties as their forebears who came here to fish more than 400 years ago.

SIX HOURS' SLEEP

Their sailing ship is more efficiently rigged than those of the 16th century but the sea is still treacherous and the footropes hanging underneath, the yards on which they must stand to take in sail are as slippery.

Life is not so grim, however. There is a radio in the forecastle, better clothing, a 180-horsepower diesel engine to help in calms or headwinds, and a modern Portuguese law that says the crew must be allowed six hours' sleep in 24.

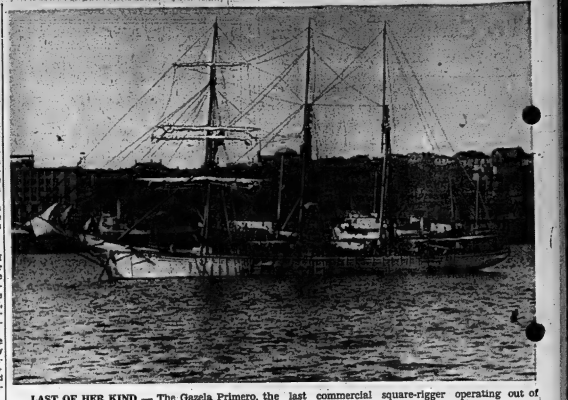
Given a new lease on life in 1958 when a new bottom was built into her and some side planking replaced, Gazela is the oldest of the banking fleet. Her master, Capt. Antonio Marques da Silva takes care to keep her out of the worst weather.

"She's a good ship," said one of the mates, "but in real heavy weather it's better not to expect too much of her."

Capt. da Silva explained why Portugal keeps the elderly square - rigger as a working ship.

"The ship is excellent training for sailors, better than a modern vessel. Handling a windjammer teaches self - reliance and the ability to cope with emergencies.

"Not only that but with a cargo of fish brought home from the banks the ship shows a profit."



PROUD OF SHIP

Some of Gazela's crew of about 35 have been with her for years. One who gave his name as Zica and who spoke only Portuguese said he wouldn't leave her for anything. Asked why, he merely pointed to the majestically soaring masts and rigging.

The barquentine's forecastle doesn't provide much privacy for the 30 fishermen and deckboys who live there, but a homey atmosphere prevails and the cheerful Portuguese complain little.

On deck are nested the dories, each with the name of the ship's patron saint painted on the bow.

When she is in this oldest of North American seaports, Gazela attracts many ship-lovers. Modellers are inspired by study detail; old sailors gaze at her sails and rigging remembering days of their youth, and young Newfoundland boys clamber about the shrouds vowing to go to sea some day.

LAST OF HER KIND — The basel commercial square-rigger operating out of western Europe, is seen in St. John's harbor in one of her annual spring visits. Moves to Liberalize Voting Regulations Are Made in Two Provincial Legislatures

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Moves to liberalise voting regulations were made in two provincial legislatures Thursday.

A bill to reduce the Ontario voting age to 18 from 21 was introduced by Donald C. MacDonald, New Democratic party leader.

In the Saskatchewan legislature, Attorney-General R. A. Walker said he would support a Liberal opposition move to give armed forces personnel the same voting rights as private citizens if his law officers say the bill will give servicemen more freedom of choice in voting.

A. H. McDonald (L—Moosomin), who introduced the private bill, said it would remove sections of the Election Act which took away the right of many servicemen to vote in provincial elections by requiring them to make a declaration of place or residence.

The seven other legislatures in session dealt with a variety business:

Prince Edwrs dieland — The Prince Edward Island government will seek to have Kings County declared a rural development area under the Agricultural Rehabilitation and Development Act, industry Minister Rossiter said. He said the government earlier sought to have the entire province declared a development area but this had been turned down by the federal government.

Nova Scotia — The legislature approved formation of a select committee to study the possibility of appointing an ombudsman—an official to safeguard the right of individuals against arbitrary or unjust decisions by public administrative authorities.

New Brunswick — Opposition leader C. B. Sherwood and D. D. Patterson (PC — Saint John City) were ruled out of order when they tried to press questions regarding the protracted strike against Irving Refinery Limited at Saint John.

Quebec — Approval in principle to a measure creating Quebec's first education ministry was given by the legislative council, Quebec's upper house, in a 13-3 vote.

MAYBE CHANGES

The bill is still subject to further study, during which the Union Nationale majority in the upper house may make some changes in it.

Ontario — Attorney - General Fred Cass said the Ontario government is inquiring into a consumer protection law in England which gives buyers four days to withdraw from purchase contracts. He said he had not yet decided if such a plan would be timely for Ontario.

Manitoba — Further federal-provincial efforts to amend the British North American Act were approved by the legislature. The house adopted a motion approving the draft of an act known as the Constitution of Canada Amendment Act.

Alberta — The first telephone rate revision in Alberta since 1938 is expected to give telephones Minister Raymond Reierson said. He said outside the house the rates, lowest in the country, will probably still be lowest after the raise.

British Columbia — Alan Macfarlane, Liberal member for Oak Bay, said Social Credit Premier Bennett will be given "unlimited access to public funds" through a proposed Bank of British Columbia. He protested provisions of a bill that would permit the government to purchase up to 25 per cent of the capital stock of the bank.

Union and Five Members Fined For Strike

COOKSVILLE, Ont. (CP)—A union was fined $500 and five of its members $25 each Thursday for taking part in an illegal strike at Ontario Hydro's thermal-electric plant at nearby Lakeview.

Involved were the United Association of Plumbers and Pipefitters (CLC) and five members of its Local 46.

Magistrate H. T. G. Andrews ruled that Stanley Newmarsh, business agent for Local 46, instructed the five men to stop work last July until a jurisdictional dispute was settled. They withdrew from the job for 16 days.

The magistrate said that while unions have a recognized place in the economy, "there is so much petty politics across the bargaining table . . . the court shudders to think what is behind the cases that are never heard in court.

REFUSED TO WORK

The case arose from the refusal of pipefitters to work on fittings that had been installed earlier by members of the rodmen's union. The plumbers' union maintained the fittings should have been installed by their members.

During the court case, the union offered to plead guilty to a charge of calling an unlawful strike but Hydro withdrew the charges against the men. Hydro refused.

"It it reasonable that a third party should be put just because two unions have a dispute over jurisdiction?" Magistrate Andrews asked.

"There are so many petty disputes, cheap rationalizations, power struggles in management, in labor and between the two that, on occasion, the public must despair."

Kampus Kapers Presentation Enjoyed by Large Audience

By BILL SEYMOUR

A large audience was seen at B.C.I. and V.S. auditorium on Thursday night when the staff and students presented their 18th annual production of "Kampus Kapers" under the direction of Mr. H. Townsend with each number, being capably introduced by master of ceremonies, John Anderson.

While scenes were being set back-stage, musical director, Mr. C. Templer rendered an organ prelude until that moment when — the curtain rose on the splendid looking cast of "Kampus Kapers" and their opening number as an entire body singing "Step-to, Heigho" accompanied by Mr. R. Robertson at the piano and Mr. Templer on the organ.

Country-style music came next by the ever-lovin "Beverley Hill-Billies," featuring Ronald Cummings on a five-string banjo, Bill Robertson on bass fiddle and Greg Browning picking the guitar.

"A splendid display on the "parallel-bars" was given by David Sturm, John Miller, Jim Muir, Bob Ridley and Donald Tom followed by a lovely vocal trio starring Brenda Wayne, Donna Lee Griffith and Lillian Vincent with their renditions of "Sisters," and "The Big Brown Bear".

FINE PRECISION DRILL

Accompanied at the piano by Mr. C. Templer, Garry Chaplin rendered two solos on the trumpet, "Yours Is My Heart Alone" and "The Apartment" while the smiling "Shamrocks" took their places on the stage for the next number, a colorful precision drill of dance and twirling batons, which drew a hearty applause from the audience, after being informed it was the first time this team of girls had ever worked with the baton. The group, choreographed by Heather Durno, seem back with an encore, their version of the "Irish Jig".

The next scene was set by the B.C.I. and V.S. 45-member band with its presentation of "Consider, Yourself," "Green Leaves of Summer," "The Whistling Shoemaker" and "Dixieland Concerto," followed by vocal solos by Murdock McFarlane singing "It is On The Street Where You Live" and "Come to Me, Bend to Me" accompanied at the piano by Mr. Templer.

A very interesting and expert trampoline display under the direction of Mr. S. Barbour was given by Carl Boomhower, Sandra Heim, Jo Anne McNevin, Eire Mastin, Terry Miskelly, Ronald Olsen, Douglas Welbanks and Beverley Wills.

FINE SCOTTISH NUMBER

In the distance Scottish music could be heard as Pipe Major Howie of the RCAF Station, Trenton, piped in pretty Miss Judy Lyon, in full dress with a presentation of the Scottish ceremonial "Sword Dance".

And of course no show is complete without those frolicking clowns and giving the trampoline group a few pointers was "Piff" and "Memee". Ralph Boomhower, physical director of the Kingston YMCA and John Sager of the YMCA in Belleville.

To conclude an enjoyable evening the audience was kept on the edge of their seats as members of the Pyramid Club under the direction of Mr. Townsend displayed the art of making human pyramids, calling for precision and split second timing.

So ended the well-received 1964 production of "Kampus Kapers" as the curtain closed on the Grand Finale of the evening, "Thanks for the Memories" sung by the entire cast. Music throughout the gymnastic performances was arranged and rendered by Mr. Templer at the organ. Kampus Kapers will be presented again this evening and Saturday night at B.C.I. Auditorium.

May Exclude Sitting Senators From New Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — If the Liberal government's proposal to retire senators at age 75 applies to present senators it would remove 36 members from the senate this year—30 of them Liberals.

The forecast of a Senate retirement bill was included in the speech from the throne read at the opening of the new parliamentary session Tuesday.

It did not specify an age or say whether present senators would be affected. But since one of the Liberal election pledges was to set a retirement age for future senators, it is expected to exclude the 99 currently serving in the upper chamber.

Of the 99—there are three vacancies among the 102 Senate seats—more than half are 70 or over.

There are 15 senators between 70 and 74, another six have their 75th birthdays this year, 15 are between 76 and 79 and there are 15 aged 80 or over.

The 51 senators who are 70 or over this year break down to 40 Liberals and 11 Conservatives.

Oldest is Senator Aristide Blais of Edmonton who will be 89 in October. Four others mark their 88th birthdays this year.

63 Years in Home-Made Candy Business Will End In March for Ralph Weese

A career of 63 years in the "home made" candy business has just about ended for a Belleville man whose Front Street business still turns out sweets with the same equipment used at the turn of the century.

At the end of March the Weese Candy Store, 392 Front Street where up to 20 different kinds of home made sweets are sold, will be closed.

And when it does many Belleville residents who over the years have enjoyed Weese's humbugs and cream taffy pull, will be sorry.

Ralph C. Weese got into the home-made candy business more or less by accident. The "accident" was the offer of 50 cents more per week.

Sixty-three years ago the going rate was a "chore boy" at Front Street stores was $1.50 pe, week.

GOT BIGGER OFFER

But Mr. Weese, then a lad of 16, got the offer of $2.00 per week from the Marsh sports store.

That was one part of the accident which eventually was to turn Mr. Weese into a candy maker.

The other was the attempt on the part of his boss to win back some of the teen-aged trade which was being attracted to a competitor's store by an imported type of taffy.

So Mr. Marsh set out to duplicate the imported taffy and the result was the cream taffy pull which was so successful that it still has the biggest volume turnover of any single item of candy at Weese's.

Following the success of the cream taffy, the Marsh sport store soon turned to full time confection making and was the forerunner of Weese's Candy Store.

BOUGHT IN 1930

The store, at that time situated on Front St., near Victoria Ave., was later purchased by the McCausland Bros., who in turn sold out to William Dickens.

In 1929 the store was moved to its present location and the next year Mr. Weese purchased the business.

Now 79, Mr. Weese has all but retired and the operation of the store has been turned over to Ruth Andrews, who has been the store's No. 1 assistant for the past 38 years.

"I've made my last batch of candy," Mr. Weese said yesterday, but he feels the store could still offer a bright future for some young person interested in candy making. Miss Andrews says the store will be continued until the last of March.

OLD EQUIPMENT USED

One of the interesting pieces of equipment at the store is the kiss making machine which is still used to turn out hand-made kisses.

The taffy strip is fed through the hand-cranked cutter with the kisses later being hand wrapped.

It's slow going, but Weese's kisses, humbugs, fudge, chocolates, Christmas candy canes and cream taffy pull are all still in heavy demand.

At least high school students from nearby Nicholson College think so.

Groups of students drop in daily at noon hour and after school for milkshakes and enjoy store goodies. It's been the custom for years and is still continued.

Two years ago for Christmas, 1961, a group of eleven students combined their monetary resources and purchased a plaque, complete with name plates, and presented with their appreciation to "Ruth Andrews and Ralph C. Weese."

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker moved a non-confidence motion assailing the government for last year's sales tax extensions.

Mr. Diefenbaker also accused the Pearson government of making political capital out of the division between French and English Canada.

Prime Minister Pearson outlined government plans to protect Canadian periodicals from American competition.

He rejected point by point Premier Robarts' criticisms of the Canada Pension Plan and said the pension legislation must go ahead.

NDP Leader Douglas moved a non-confidence motion criticizing the government for failing to initiate a medical insurance plan.

Social Credit Leader Thompson said the Liberal administration seems to have lost its early enthusiasm and dynamism.

The Commons meets at noon AST to continue the throne speech debate. The Senate stands adjourned to Tuesday.

Measures to Strengthen Position of Canadian Mags Outlined by Prime Minister

OTTAWA (CP) — Measures to strengthen the position of Canadian periodicals — based largely on proposals of the previous government — were outlined Thursday in the Commons by Prime Minister Pearson.

The Income Tax Act would be amended so that no tax-free write-off for the year could claim a deduction from taxable income for advertising placed in foreign periodicals. But Time and Reader's Digest would be exempt from this provision.

The Customs Act also would be revised to ban foreign periodicals if more than five per cent of their advertising space was specially aimed at the Canadian domestic market.

Mr. Pearson said there was no wish to interfere with the Canadian public's reading tastes and the five-per-cent provision was inserted to strike a balance while guarding the future.

Periodicals would be defined as those appearing from once a week to four times a year.

ACTION NEEDED

Government action was needed to prevent the disappearance of the periodical press in Canada. Mr. Pearson said he didn't know of any other place in the world where the competition for advertising from the U.S. raised such problems.

The matter of community antennas in television had already been referred to the Board of Broadcast Governors.

U.S. TV stations near the Canadian border solicited Canadian advertising.

There were now also "some signs" that metropolitan newspapers in the U.S. and newspaper chains might in future "be in some danger of coming under foreign control."

The government was giving this matter very careful consideration.

The action proposed by Mr. Pearson, forecast in the throne speech and in a statement the last session, is another in a series of federal attempts in the last eight years to deal with the magazine problem.

Liberal legislation of 1956 was repealed last year by the Conservatives who named a royal commission that recommended a ban on foreign magazines containing Canadian advertising. The commission also recommended disallowance of tax deduction rights on advertising in foreign periodicals aimed at the Canadian market.

No Animosity Says Publisher Of Sudbury Star

SUDBURY (CP) — An editorial and a cartoon published by the Sudbury Star on Dec. 16, 1961, reflected a difference of opinion on financial judgment but there was no animosity behind it, an Ontario Supreme Court jury was told Thursday.

The statement was made by J. R. Meakes, publisher of the newspaper, on the fourth day of a libel action before Mr. Justice Campbell Grant. The newspaper is being sued for unspecified damages by Mr. Allegri, the former city controller Peter Guimond, 39, who claims the editorial and editorial were defamatory.

They were published during a public civic election campaign, when Mr. Guimond was running for mayor. He was elected.

Questioned by Charles Dubin, counsel for The Star, Mr. Meakes said he had seen both the editorial and the cartoon before they appeared in the paper. He had considered them an honest reflection of the newspaper's opinion.

AGREED ABOUT MOTIVE

Mr. Dubin asked: "In publishing this article and cartoon were you moved in any way by personal animosity?"

Mr. Meakes: "We had great regard for Mr. Guimond as a man on council. There was no animosity."

Mr. Dubin: "No personal animosity?"

Mr. Meakes: "No, we differed with him on his financial judgment, but we had no animosity at all."

Mr. Meakes said the newspaper had published 80 editorials on the subject of city finances in the period 1960-1961. He said the newspaper was concerned over mounting debenture debt and the purpose of "luxury projects" over necessities.

The case is expected to go to the six-man jury today.

Canadians Are Showing Little Interest in Fall-Out Shelters

OTTAWA (CP)—Canadians are showing virtually no interest in basement fall-out shelters, and civil defence officials have for the time being at least eliminated them from survival plans.

The latest circular from the government's Emergency Measures Organization says that relatively few shelters have been built and "planning must now be based upon the population having . . . no significant protection against blast."

Interest in shelters reached a peak in 1962, the year of the Cuban crisis.

That year there were 46 applications for the $500 provided under the National Housing Act for shelters in new houses, and there were 35 applications for home improvement loans and for the act to build shelters in existing homes.

In the first nine months of 1963, by comparison, there have been four applications for new-home shelters and two applications for home improvement loans for shelters.

While these figures provide an indicator of interest, they do not cover the total number of shelters built in Canada. It is not necessary for homeowners to report the construction of shelters, and unless they are financed under the two provisions of the NHA, there is no way of knowing how many have been built. Civil defence officials in Ottawa won't try to estimate the total, although they acknowledge that it is probably low.

McCLUNG DISPLEASED

LITTLETON, Colo. (AP) — Lewis McClung walked along a shopping centre mall Thursday, throwing a soft drink bottle through each of the 10 plate-glass windows. McClung, 46, was still there when sheriff's officers arrested him on a charge of malicious mischief. "He said he doesn't like shopping centres," one officer said.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Years ago when Pittsburgh's KDKA was the Hollywood of radio broadcasting and you picked it up through lead phones by rubbing a piece of wire on a chunk of crystal, there was a comedian by the name of Joe Penner whose opening crack was "Dya wanna buy a duck?"

A duck at that time was a flying symbol of Long Island, something you roasted on Sundays, or something you did when you saw a creditor approaching. Also it was something the Puritans did to womenfolk whose cackling tongues refused to be silenced by verbal persuasion or counter argument.

But the lowly duck of those days has risen above its status of a butt of comedian's jokes and a mere something that could be bought at a corner delicatessen.

It is a highly respected member of the migratory wildfowl population. Close studies by Canadian authorities and the U.S. Bureau of Biological Survey reveal the world knows few mysteries more baffling than that involved in the northward and southward flights of migratory birds.

Bill Little, Lands and Forests Department, Tweed, gave a brief but interesting insight into the flights of these feathered conundrums the other night.

When the ice begins to break in the Arctic wastes these birds come rushing northward as if advised by radio, and hurtle with frenetic eagerness to their mating places of the springtime.

As summer fades the ducks and their relatives of one kind or another take wing for the southland. There isn't a universal signal; there cannot be. Yet the migration starts almost simultaneously.

Ducks and their kin fly at different speeds. Mallards can do 50 miles an hour; canvasbacks 72. The snow goose does an easy 50 as does the teal. A flock of ducks cruising along, moves in spurts from 10 miles an hour to 30 or more, but such flights are not sustained.

Going north they may travel 50 or more miles a day, spurting, resting, lighting, loafing and resuming speed. On the southern trek they are more leisurely and a 1,000 mile trip may consume 30 days.

Ducks, splitting themselves into groups travel the same flyways from birth until death. Who charted the flyways never will be known. Yet, since the world has come to know ducks and their migrations, there are certain airlanes which they travel year after year and nothing can detour them for any definite period from that particular pathway in the sky.

Storms may come and drive them off their course. But storms die away, ducks fly back and seem instinct beyond the comprehension of man, puts them once again on that exact course. They fly as true as the direction of a compass.

The ducks of different species choose different breeding grounds even though they make their northern flight in a succession of large flocks. Those which breed in the United States detour from the main flock as they near their destinations and remain by themselves throughout the summer only to join the birds from Canada and the Arctic on the southern flight is under way.

The above is not taken from Mr. Bittle's talk. He did say that young birds travel from the northern areas on a different course to that of the adults. However both join forces in the deep south and journey together sometimes as far "down" as South America.

Finley Gets Ultimatum

BOSTON (AP) — Fellow club owners confronted Kansas City Athletics' boss Charles Finley today in an American League summit meeting designed to settle his stalemate with Kansas City officials over a Municipal Stadium lease—or else.

League president Joe Cronin already has made it plain the alternative may be the expulsion of Finley.

The principals, armed with legal advisers, weren't talking much prior to the closed door session.

But a source close to Louis Niser, Finley's lawyer, revealed Niser has advised Finley to:

1- Go ahead and sign a three-year lease under league pressure, then.

2- Enter a law suit against the league for forcing him into a lease he did not wish.

Cronin ordered the meeting after two deadlines set for Finley came and went without the lease impasse being resolved.

The Finley camp is firmly convinced the league has no grounds to disenfranchise him. Cronin admits "Finley has threatened litigation from the start" if such a move is made.

Earlier this week, however, Cronin also told a Senate subcommittee the league has power to do so.

Tremendous Rally Just Misses ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Bruins Give Habs Last-Minute Scare

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Canadiens had just beaten Boston and moved back into a tie for the National Hockey League lead, but the Montreal dressing room looked like a scene of tragedy.

They'd almost blown a sure thing.

Canadiens escaped with a narrow 3-2 win over Bruins in the only NHL game played Thursday night after surrendering a comfortable 3-0 lead in the dying minutes.

Boston stunned the sloppy Canadiens and a Forum crowd of 14,076 fans that was beginning to head for the exits with a tremendous rally that fell just one goal short.

Doug Mohns banged in his seventh goal of the season during a scramble in front of the Canadiens' net at 18:10 of the third period and Jerry Toppazzini sent the fans bustling back to their seats at 19:16 with his sixth of the campaign.

Bruins then removed Ed Johnston from the nets for an extra forward, but the jittery Canadiens pulled themselves together to spike Boston's dreams of a tie.

NEXT SATURDAY

The win moved Montreal back into a tie with Chicago for first place at 71 points. Canadiens, who have played two games less than the Hawks, meet Chicago in a showdown clash in Montreal Saturday.

"At least we realized we played badly," Ralph Backstrom admitted in the gloomy Canadiens room, "and we'll be better prepared to play the Hawks."

Coach Toe Blake called the team "very discouraged" and conceded Canadiens could easily have lost "because Boston could have scored a few goals a lot earlier."

Claude Provost scored twice for Canadiens and Bobby Rousseau tallied on a spanking slapshot from outside the bluoline that made Johnston cringe and hit the deck. The Bruins goalie thought it was going over the net and was concerned his hand might go with it.

Jean Beliveau helped set up both Provost's goals, one in the first and the other in the third, to earn his 44th and 45th assists of the season and stay within six points of the scoring leader, Chicago's Stan Mikita.

LOOKED WEAK

Johnson also looked weak on Provost's first goal, fanning on his bluoline drive early in the first period. Rousseau then fooled him with the long distance drive and Johnston proved that misfortune comes in threes when he handed Provost his second marker.

Beliveau, who missed half the first period when shaken up, tested Johnston with a drive in the third period and the Bruin goalie came out of his net to bat away the rebound. But he knocked it onto the stick of Provost, who tapped it home.

While Chicago visits Montreal, the slumping Maple Leafs meet New York in Toronto Saturday night and Boston plays at Detroit in an afternoon game.

On Sunday, Montreal is at Detroit, Toronto plays New York and Chicago visits Boston—the same Sunday night schedule as last week.

Liston Surly, Contemptuous

Sparmate Nearly 'Licks' Cassius

By MURRAY ROSE

MIAMI BEACH (CP) — Cassius Clay took a second pasting from a sparring partner Thursday in a training session for his Tuesday title fight with heavyweight champion Sonny Liston.

Cody Jones, a 6-foot-1, 210-pounder from Detroit repeatedly nailed Clay with left hooks to the head when Cassius dropped his hands. Jones then whacked him in the mouth when the contender raised his gloves.

Although they were wearing 16-ounce gloves, compared with the eight-ounces which will be used in Convention Hall Tuesday, Cody drew "oohs" from the crowd of about 150 in the gym when he connected with a thumping left hook to the jaw.

When Cody and Clay finished their two rounds, someone in the crowd asked: "Which one is fighting Liston?"

Asked about the hooks Cody landed, Angelo Dundee, Clay's trainer, said: "If you want to swim, you gotta get wet. This is the place to make the mistakes, not in the fight."

GETS TIRED

Clay, 7-1 underdog against Liston, said: "I'm tired when I get in the ring after doing miles of road work, wearing five-pound shoes and carrying two-pound weights in my hands.

"I'm gonna be fast as a jet plane when I get there with that bear. Those gloves and shoes are going to feel so light and itty-bitty that I'll be able to pop, pop, pop at him like a machine gun."

Clay said he will box again Friday and possibly Saturday. He has boxed 167 rounds since he started working on Jan. 6.

Liston already has finished his boxing sessions. He went through some exercises Thursday.

After his exercises, Liston said he would like to fight Ingemar Johansson, the former titleholder from Sweden.

"I'd like to meet Johansson for two reasons," Liston told a press conference after his work out.

"He is a former champion and he knocked out both Eddie Machen and Floyd Patterson.

If he comes back, as he says, I think he deserves a shot at the title."

SURLY DISPOSITION

If a surly disposition is any criterion, Liston is in the proper fighting frame of mind for his title defense.

He is snapping at newsmen and refusing to pose for photographers. Deriaton has been replaced by downright contempt in his treatment of his opponent.

He rebuked sports writers with the biting criticism.

"You don't know what you're writing."

He also resented references of newsmen to Clay's speed.

"Who says Clay is fast?" Liston said. "He only talks fast."

After his brief workout he answered questions.

Do you think it will be a long fight?

"Naw."

How long?

"Until I can catch him."

Does Clay have a chance?

"Yeah, if he can run faster backwards than I can move forward."

'Hot' Juveniles From Trenton Meet Juniors

Trenton Legion Juveniles, reputed to be one of the district's hottest clubs, will make an appearance here tonight.

The occasion will be an exhibition game against Bob Taylor's Belleville Junior "B"s at Memorial Arena at 9.00 p.m. The game was postponed from an earlier date.

Trenton Legion has played about 30 games this season, many against upper-class clubs. The team has lost only five or six games. The club is currently on a hot streak, ousting Lindsay in playdowns in consecutive games, by scores of 15-0 and 21-0. Gananoque and Picton of the OHA Eastern Junior League, also lost to the Legion a few weeks back.

Belleville will be facing a high-scoring line that has Dave Johnson playing between Bert Garrett, and Jim Bonn. Other forwards include Don Morrison, Al Ferguson, Terry Hutchinson, Andy Teeple, Jim Johnson and Ken Reynolds.

Dennis Orr is the mainstay goalie, boasting a fine record and he is backed by Bonter.

Coach Gene Poirier's defence consists of Jim Lange, Jon Gibbons, Bob Fraser and Bob Brazier.

Belleville will attempt to ice its strongest lineup in preparation of the Junior "B" playoffs coming up next week. Stu Muirhead has returned to the lineup, following his leg operation, and is rounding back into top form. The game should be a good one.

The draw will also be made by the Belleville club for the two tickets to next Saturday's Toronto - Chicago NHL tilt in Toronto. Tickets will be on sale at the Arena tonight.

Reason for No Good Drama On Television Explained

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—With the demise of NBC's Richard Boone Show and Show of the Week next season, it appears that serious dramatic anthology has been completely replaced on television by the Formula show.

The difference is that in an anthology series each program is a separate entity, while the formula show has continuing characters, like Ben Casey, or a special area of interest such as suspence stories for Alfred Hitchcock.

But the thing that worries some people is that television seems now to have no place for original, quality, drama.

"The problem, of course, is the amount of material required for television," said the writer Horton Foote. "There are—what?—100 plays aiming for Broadway each season. No one expects them all to be good. But there's an idea around that every television drama has got to be good. There's no pod—Broadway for network television, no place to experiment, no place to make mistakes."

Foote, an Oscar winner for To Kill a Mockingbird, also noted that writers present a major television problem.

"It is simple economics," he said. "In other mediums you have not under the necessity of turning out more than one work a year. A writer can't sustain himself on one television work a year."

That is why The Gambling Heart, to be seen Sunday night on NBC's Show of the Week, is Foote's first television work in several years. The piece was among the medium's most dependable producers of good scripts.

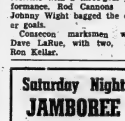
The league-leading Wellington team crushed their closest rivals, Stinson Construction, 10-2 as the Prince Edward North Shore Hockey League wound up its regular schedule last night.

In the other game at Wellington, Melville Shoreliners tripped Consecon by a 5-3 score.

Playoff arrangements have not been announced but, will likely get under way next week.

Wellington led 4-1 and 6-2 by periods, adding four without a reply in the third. Al Pettingill and Eldon Carson fired three goals apiece for Wellington. Gary Pyke scored two, Joe Scott and Al Rawlie one each.

Stinson goals were scored by Everett Dextator and Bill Genereaux.



Stinson's drew six of the game's nine penalties, including a misconduct.

Melville overcame a first-period 2-0 deficit to clip Consecon. The winners were ahead 3-2 after two periods. This game produced 13 penalties, nine to Consecon, including a misconduct.

Harry Wright starred for Melville with a three-goal performance. Rod Cannons and Johnny Wright bagged the other goals.

Hornets Nip Athletics

WOODSTOCK (CP) — Galt Hornets gained a giant step in the direction of a first-place finish atop the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A league standings by shading Woodstock Athletics 5-4 Thursday.

Prior to the game the Hornets and Athletics were deadlocked for first place. The win marked the first time in two weeks that the position has not been tied. It was also Galt's first reign as sole leaders.

Woodstock carried a 4-2 lead into the final period but the Hornets came on strong with three unanswered goals to wrap up the victory.

Bob McKnight scored twice for the winners with Larry Pfaff, Ron Brain and Jim Randle rounding out the scoring.

Woodstock marksmen were Ron Mason, Art Sullivan, Toby Black and Bobby Robinson.

Both teams have three games remaining in the schedule.

The Big Seven

It's safe to assume Jean Beliveau has recovered from his wrist injury.

The towering Montreal Canadiens centre, bothered in recent weeks by the ailment, fired three goals against Detroit last Sunday and earned two assists Thursday night as Montreal downed Boston 3-2.

The two points enabled Beliveau to step pace with Chicago's Stan Mikita in the National Hockey League scoring race. Mikita picked up two goals Wednesday to move to 73 points. Beliveau now is back in contention with 67, six behind Mikita and three back of Bobby Hull.

Injuries Affect Track Meet

NEW YORK (AP)—With injuries and ailments continuing to run down the mile field for the 76th annual Amateur Athletic Union indoor track and field championships, the three mile run and the 600-yard affair may get the spotlight Saturday in Madison Square Garden.

John Camien, Emporia, Kan., State, is the latest casualty in the mile. He withdrew Thursday night on doctor's orders with bronchitis.

Camien, who has gone 4:00.3, was rated the class of the field after Jim Beatty pulled out because of recurring foot injuries. Chicago Loyola's Tom O'Hara, who ran an indoor record 3:56.8 last week, is taking the week off.

Camien's loss leaves the mile to the also-rans and focuses attention on the 600 and the efforts of teen-ager Gerry Lindgren against an international field in the three-mile run.

Lindgren, a 17-year-old, 115-pound high school student from Spokane, Wash., burst on the scene with brilliant two-mile efforts in Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Opposing him in the AAU three-mile will be Clarke, who won the Golden Gate in San Francisco in 8:36.8; Tom O'Riordan of Ireland, Pat Dohenzy, veteran Pete McArdle, Simo Solaremia of Finland and Dave Ellis and Dan Shaughnessy of Toronto.

30th Wedding Anniversary For Bob and Dolores Hope

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "The secret of our marriage," cracked Bob Hope, "is that I'm out of town so much. I write such wonderful postcards."

It was a typical Hope-type reaction to questions about the 30th wedding anniversary that he and Dolores Celebrate this week. But he waxed more serious as he contemplated the years.

"They have been 30 marvelous, exciting years," he said. "When I think of the things that have happened to me in those 30 years, it floors me. I have no regrets. I've loved every minute.

"And Dolores has been great through it all. This is quite a woman, you know. She has done a fantastic job with the children, bringing them up with the right amount of discipline and love. Me, too."

Bob, at work on a comedy with Eva Marie Saint for his television series, seemed to enjoy looking back on his courtship and marriage.

WIFE FORMER SINGER

"It was in Roberta," he recalled, "and George Murphy said he wanted me to come over to the Vogue Club and hear a singer named Dolores Reade. So I went there with him and saw this girl, who was a fine singer and good-looker, too. I asked her to drop in and see Roberta.

"She did, and she told me later she was almost too embarrassed to come backstage afterwards. She didn't know I was one of the featured players. She thought I was a chorus boy."

Bob was much impressed with her, and he hired her for his act after he left Roberta.

"What got me in the marrying mood was when she left me to go to Florida," he said. "Until then I was a confirmed bachelor.

"I really missed her. I was on the phone to her all the time. When she returned, I proposed to her."

Dolores said yes, and they were married on a quick week-end in Erie, Pa.

Dolores continued singing until Bob went to Hollywood to start his movie career. Then she retired to keep the home fires burning for Bob and to rear their four adopted children.

Govt. to Study Situation In Haiti

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian government is restraining full expression of its displeasure with Haiti over the expulsion of 16 Canadian missionaries because of concern for the welfare of some 800 Canadians still in that country, informed sources said Tuesday.

The external affairs department was handling mounting immediate comment on a Haitian embassy statement here Wednesday rejecting an earlier protest by External Affairs Minister Martin.

Sources said there still was a possibility of further action on the diplomatic front but for the present at least the government would study the situation. A main factor was that most of the Canadians still in Haiti are missionaries.

Mr. Martin had expressed Canada's "very dissatisfaction" Feb. 13 when he called the Haitian charge d'affaires to his office.

WON'T ACCEPT

The Haitian statement said it was "unfortunately" unable to accept the protest "in view of the cause of the "flagrancy and serious nature" of what it called the "plot contrived by the reverend Jesuit fathers."

The rejection of the official protest was based on allegations against one of the 18 Jesuit missionaries, Rev. Paul Laramee, 51, of Montreal.

Father Laramee, who managed a religious radio station run by the order, was arrested on his arrival at Port-au-Prince International Airport Jan. 31 and kept in jail along with another member of the order for 13 days paior to deportation.

The embassy said documents containing offensive material had been found "in a purely accidental manner" in the priest's luggage.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Be a stickler for details. When you have all facts — make decision. Don't procrastinate. Your personal magnetism flashes. Kind word from friend will make day sparkle.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Stress on abilities, aspirations. Fill in gap between what you wish and what exists. Means take practical steps. But be a good listener. Learn" valuable lesson. Tonight relax.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Strive to understand. Don't be impatient with one who appears "slow." Time to reveal reason for recent apprehension. Your judgment is accurate. No need to fear embarrassment.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Be willing to work for best results. Avoid rushing, scattering forces. Take your time where business, legal affairs are concerned. Don't become bogged down with details.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Aspects favorable — if you apply yourself. Finish what you start. Be charming, diplomatic. You can make good impression on outsiders. Cooperate with one who confides problem.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Don't try to shirk responsibilities. Fulfill obligations. Make start toward new project. Leo individual can help. Throw away false pride. If you require aid — ask for it!

Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Dig deep for information. Disregard friend whose knowledge is superficial. Your own intuition is best guide today. Good lunar aspect here points up romance, sparkling evening out.

If today is your birthday . . . you have your own ideas about you, job and the world. Very independent — and creative!

General Tendencies: Cycle up for Cancer, Leo, Virgo. Special word to Capricorn: Be mature enough to speak candidly.

Scharie

SCOHARIE — Mrs. Louis Peterson and Mr. Ross Buchanan spent the weekend at Bancroft with Mr. Buchanan's sister, Mrs. Joe Mountenay.

Mrs. Birdie Foster and Mrs. Harry Foster attended the Auxiliary to the County Home on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Keith Foster, Ann and Randy were recent Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Dingman and family, Morganston.

BABY SHOWER

On Wednesday evening ladies from Picton and Scoharie gathered at the home of Mrs. James Hanna to honor Mrs. Keith Hanna with a shower. Mrs. Gerald Courtney, convener of the evening started the entertainment with a couple of contests. Mrs. Keith Hanna was seated in a decorated chair and many gaily wrapped gifts for the newcomer were presented.

She thanked everyone for their kindness and lovely gifts.

Several of the ladies served a bountiful lunch to bring a pleasant evening to a close.

The A.C.W.W. Club held their supper meeting in Bloomfield United Church Sunday school room on Tuesday evening. Unit 3 of Bloomfield U.C.W. catered for the supper.

WAS "MINISTER"

Elizabeth the promoter of prison reform in the early 19th century,—in 1811 was acknowledged a "minister" by the Society of Friends.

Sunday School Lesson
'Make Good People Nice'

The little girl who prayed, "Dear Lord, make all bad people good, and all good people nice," had a real point. Bad people do need to become good, and good people need to reflect a quality of goodness that is attractive and contagious. Unfortunately, some of those whose ideals are blameless and whose moral lives are above reproach are so self-righteous about it that they actually repel others by their self-righteous attitude.

Take Simon, for example, of whom we have a brief glimpse in Luke 7:36-50. Simon was a "religious" man, with religious ideals. That is, he went to church. Presumably, he paid his tithe, and kept the command-ments. He even invited the preacher to dinner, the preacher in this case being Jesus Himself. But Simon evidently had a heart of stone, for his kind of goodness never corrected a sin-ner. It never overflowed in genuine acts of love. What he did, he did as if he were conferring a favor on someone. He invited Jesus to dinner, but he did not bother to welcome himself about Jesus' dusty feet.

SIMON SITS IN JUDGMENT

Moreover, he sat in judgment on all those who were not as righteous as himself. He was utterly shocked that a woman of the community with an unsavory reputation came through his door, and threw herself in shame and gratitude at Jesus' feet. Simon's thoughts all pointed accusing fingers at Jesus. Did He not know the kind of woman she was? Why did He not rebuke her for her impertinence in coming into a good man's house? Why didn't He put her out? It never occurred to Simon to ask why she had been the kind of person she was — what a social or family conditions pushed her down. He failed to see the misery that had been behind the penitence that welled up in her heart and brought the penitential tears to her eyes. Her absorption at expressing her gratitude to Jesus by kissing His feet, anointing them with the precious ointment she had stored up for anointing her own loved ones at their death, this disgusted Simon. He completely missed the chance to see how knowing Jesus had brought about in the woman's life.

JESUS REBUKES SIMON

But Jesus reflected the attitude of a loving, forgiving God. Here was no condemnation. The woman was confessing her sins. Here was no spoken judgment. The woman's own life had judged her. Here was simply a loving standing, and the desire to make the woman whole again. Here was overflowing love — love that cleansed the woman as it flowed through her life.

What rebuke Jesus' spoke was reserved for Simon. Why was there no wrapped up in himself that he failed to notice Jesus' feet needed to be washed? Why was Simon so concerned about what others would think that he failed to rejoice that this woman had sought out Jesus? Why had Simon not tried to do something to help those who needed his help instead of sitting in self-righteous judgment upon them?

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for February 23: "Simon and the Repentant Woman," Luke 7:36-50.

This story does not mean that God loves bad people more than He loves good people. Of course, God wants people to be good. Of course, He abhors sin and evil. But He is a loving God. God wants to forgive and transform. He wants all people, good and bad alike, to realize that they need His forgiving mercy. God wants good people to reflect His love so that bad people will be attracted by the good life and seek to make restitution for their sins.

The story does not mean we should sin in order to be forgiven. When such a suggestion was made to the apostle Paul, he exploded. "God forbid," he cried and went on to tell why. "The wages of sin is death," Sin is an infection. Any infection physical or moral, that is not cleared up inevitably leads to physical or spiritual death. The story does mean that we should love because we have been forgiven. If Simon had not seen himself in such a good light, if he had recognized his own need for God's forgiveness and had rejoiced in the assurance of forgiveness, he might have been more self-righteous, but he might have been more loving in his heart toward others who stand in need of divine love and human help.

Churches today must not forget the "publicans" from those in sin and need. They must declare God's forgiving love, and reflect that love in such a way that others will be attracted to seek God's help. Self-righteousness must go, so that the religion of the churches will be attractive to all who need and seek it's healing ministry.

Collegiate Students Give Fine Performance of Play

PICTON (Staff) — "Arsenic and Old Lace" has been featured in movies, on stages, on TV and on radio, many thousands of times, since its inception in 1942, but it is doubtful if it ever was played with more feeling anywhere than it was last night at the Prince Edward Collegiate, by the students.

Coached and directed by Mrs. Donald Ross, head of the English Department at the high school, the 16 students did an exceptionally fine job on their first night. Tonight, when they do it for the second time, some of the small wrinkles will have been ironed out, and it will be just that much better, if that is possible.

The age-old play concerning two elderly ladies, who make a hobby of poisoning and burying men in their basement, brought peals of laughter from the 300-odd attending, and resounding applause at the conclusion of each of the three acts.

There were no "stars" in this play, each and every performer did a very creditable job. True, some were on stage for most of the play, while others had a small "walk-on" part. But large or small, they all remembered their lines and did a fine job.

Singling out any particular person would be difficult, but great credit must go to Marilyn Walt, who played the romantic lead, her timing was fine and her voice came out loud and clear.

The elderly ladies, played superbly by Charlotte Allen and Mary Walker were typical maiden ladies, who thought there was nothing wrong with their "hobby."

Bill Nethery as "Boris Karloff" was terrific, the make-up department did a wonderful job with him, in fact he even looked like the villain of yesteryear from the floor of the auditorium.

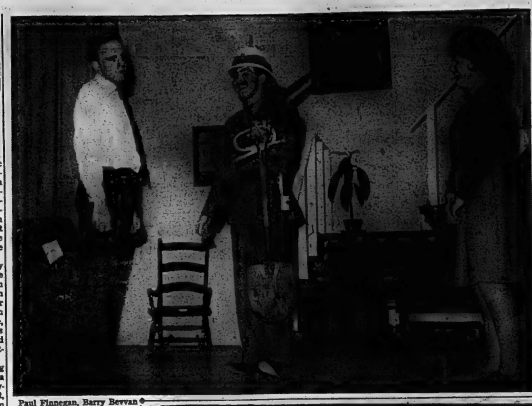
Paul Finnegan who actually played the lead, showed great promise as an actor if he should decide to make acting a career, there is no doubt he will make star status.

SPOKE REAL GERMAN

Bernard Luebcke, who played the part of Dr. Einstein admirably did not find his role so difficult. In the play Dr. Einstein is a German, so is Bernard. His cussing in German, when he tripped over a chair, was in real German.

Barry Bevran who played the part of the soldier who thought in demented mind that he was the President of the United States, and was busy most of the play digging the Panama Canal in the basement (where the ladies buried their "hobbies") ran in and around the play and was a one-man riot every time he came on stage, especially when he blew that bugle.

Stephen Grindrod, Craig Barber, David Riddell and Roger Wight played policemen, and apart from the fact that their hats were too large in most cases, they all performed like seasoned troupers. So also did Peter Thompson, who portrayed Mr. Witherspoon, the last victim of the ladies. He died just as the final curtain was brought down.



Harry Hudson played Rev. Dr. Harper; Arnie Welbanks that of Mr. Gibbs; while the two corpses, that were carried around during the play, were played by Gary Brown. He had an easy part, he was hidden in a window seat for most of the play, and was carried around, he didn't even have to walk on stage.

SETTINGS EXCELLENT

The setting, which was also excellent, was made right in the work shop of the school, and showed definite professionalism, as did the set decorations.

While there were 16 students in the actual play, these people had also very important jobs to perform. Prompter, Susan Nourse; lighting, Terry Whatam and Dennis Williams; sound, Pete McLean; make-up, Mary-Helen Black, Susan Arnold, Janet Parks, Veronica Ross, Janice Giroux and Diane Vandeusen; publicity, Stephen Grindrod, Peter Thompson and Ralph Perkin. Set designer was Larry Taylor; properties, Ralph Perkin. Stage furniture supplied by Walmsley's Antique Shop.

The S.R.O. sign should be out early tonight, so if you want a lot of laughs, and like to see young people doing a fine acting job, take the family to the Picton Collegiate tonight. The cost is only 60c for adults and 30c for the kiddies, and it is a cinch you will enjoy it.

Paul Finnegan, Barry Bevran and Marilyn Walt, appear in a hilarious comedy - farce now playing at the Picton High School.

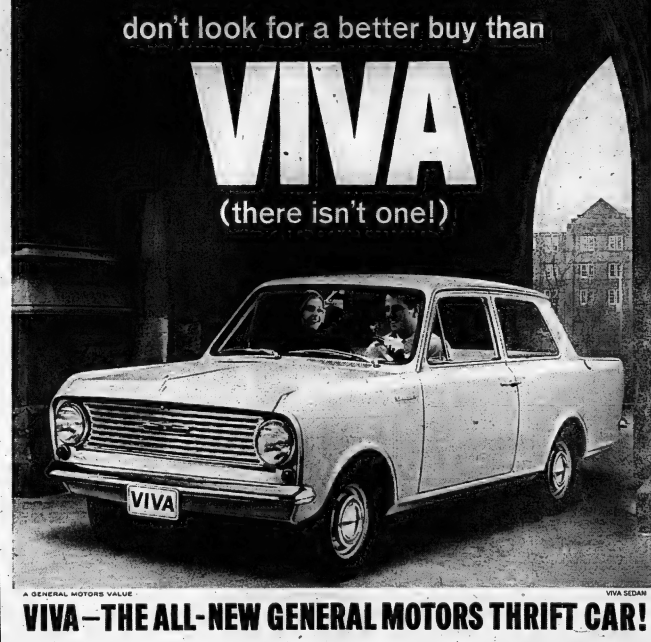
Hoffa Charges 'Slush Fund' Is Operating



CHATTANOOGA, Tenn (AP) Teamsters Union President James Hoffa charged in a courtroom press conference Thursday that Attorney - General Robert F. Kennedy is "operating a $600,000 slush fund for stool pigeons".

Hoffa, minutes after his trial on jury-tempering charges adjourned for the day, said he referred to a justice department, "confidential fund" from which the government's chief witness against him was paid.

Frank Grimsley, justice department lawyer from Atlanta, underwent gruelling questioning from Hoffa's lawyers, concerning $1,200 he paid to Mrs. Edward Grady Partin over a four-month period last year.

Her estranged husband, a Baton Rouge, La., Teamsters official, was the government's chief witness against Hoffa and five others being tried on charges of trying to fix Hoffa's 1962 conspiracy trial jury at Nashville.

Grimsley said the money partially reimbursed Partin's expenses.

Makarios Throws Hitch Into Plans For Cyprus Peace

Does Not Want Increase In the Military Forces

NICOSIA (Reuters) — President Makarios today had added a new element to the debate about a peace-keeping force for this troubled island.

Makarios said he believed there was "no room" left for a further increase in military forces here.

In a statement Friday the Greek Cypriot leader declared that if the United Nations Security Council — currently debating the Cyprus crisis — approved the despatch of troops here from other countries as well as from Britain, British troops should be proportionately reduced and replaced.

He added: "I have no objection to the establishment, under certain terms and conditions, of an international force in Cyprus to help in the restoration of law and order and the return of normality in the island."

Makarios made his statement after a delegation from the pro-Communist Askel Party called on him to express "serious anxiety" at the continued increase of British military forces on the island.

Cyprus was torn by fighting between its traditionally hostile Greek and Turkish communities until a Yuletide cease-fire enforced by the British stopped most of the shooting.

The Askel delegation said it suspected the increase was aimed at military occupation of the independent Commonwealth island with a view to its partition.

A Cypriot government spokesman readied local Greek press reports that Makarios expressed concern to Britain over the present reinforcement of 1,500 British troops, bringing the peace-keeping total to about 6,000.

The arrival of the 1,500 began Thursday and was expected to end Sunday. As well as the 6,000 men in its peace-keeping force here, Britain has nearly 4,000 at permanent military bases maintained under treaty rights.

Makarios has resisted Western attempts to send in a peace force of units from NATO nations, insisting on a force being linked with the UN.

SIR JOSIAH DIES

BRISBANE (Reuters) — Sir Josiah Francis, 73, distinguished parliamentarian, soldier and ambassador, died Saturday. Francis was Australian consul-general in New York for five years until early 1961.

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Secretary - General U Thant sought today to resolve differences over the makeup and financing of his proposed UN peace force for troubled Cyprus.

Thant continued his private conversations over the weekend in an effort to win acceptance of a formula for presentation to the Security Council next week.

Diplomatic sources said Thant had won general agreement on the need for an international police force to keep apart the island's warring Greek-Cypriot and Turkish-Cypriot communities and the appointment of a UN mediator to seek a permanent solution. But obstacles remain.

Some nations willing to contribute troops are reluctant to bear the cost. Thant would like them to accept the expense with the United States and Britain providing transportation and other services.

Thant also must win acceptance of a mediator and commander of the peace force and agreement on the wording of a Security Council resolution on the Cyprus problem.

REVISED PROPOSAL

The secretary - general revised his original proposals after conferring Friday with Cypriot, British, Greek and Turkish representatives. Details were not disclosed.

Thant also asked for a delay of council debate on Cyprus until Tuesday. It was his second request for a postponement to give him time to complete behind-the-scenes negotiations.

At Thant's request, the council postponed until Monday a session scheduled for Friday afternoon.

Thant held a long meeting Friday night with Cypriot Foreign Minister Spyros Kyprianou. Informants said the conference was "fairly encouraging." Kyprianou told reporters: We have had a detailed exchange of views on the whole issue."

Thant was said to have proposed a force of 10,000 men drawn mainly from Commonwealth and non - aligned nations. It would remain for three years after the UN mediation effort begins.

President Makarios indicated Thursday he would not accept no more than 7,000 foreign troops on the Mediterranean island.

Swam for 28 Gruelling Hours Through Shark-Infested Waters

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — A husky ex-marine described Friday his gruelling 28-hour swim through shark-infested waters after his light aircraft went down off the Cuban coast last Sunday.

"My leaking life jacket wouldn't have kept me up for another half-hour when I finally reached that tiny coral reef," Trevor B. Burns, 42-year-old Syracuse businessman, told the Syracuse Herald - Journal.

"I had run into bad weather and low visibility after taking off from Montego Bay, Jamaica," he explained. His destination was Grand Cayman Island, another British Caribbean possession.

About 200 miles out, he said the plane ran out of fuel and glided into the sea.

The flyer said he struggled to keep thoughts of sharks out of his mind because he realized panic might prove fatal.

His 23-year-old wife, Annette, and their one - year - old son, Todd, are awaiting him in their Syracuse home. Mrs. Burns has said her husband has been operating his own kitchenware firm in Ponce, Puerto Rico, for the last six months.

Monoxide Kills Three Children When Car Left Running In Garage

Dead are 18-year-old Mary Suzan Downing, her 14-year-old sister Agnes Lee and her eight-year-old brother John Charles.

Mary Suzan, a Grade 13 student, was found in the family car in the garage. The other two children were found in their bedrooms above the garage.

Carbon monoxide fumes were said to be the cause of all three deaths.

Mr. and Mrs. John Downing returned from a church social at 12:30 a.m. to find their eldest daughter slumped in the front seat of the family station wagon in the two-car garage. The motor was running.

Mr. Downing took the girl to hospital. Mrs. Downing entered the house and found it full of fumes. She ran to the children's bedroom and found Andrea Lee dead and John near death. The boy was taken to hospital but he died. Suzan failed to respond to treatment.

British Ship Sinks

NEW YORK (AP)—The British freighter Ambassador, battered and beaten for four days by winds and waves in the stormy North Atlantic, has lost her fight to stay afloat. Fifteen men died.

The unmanned 443-foot vessel sank Friday night in three-mile-deep waters 785 miles southeast of Halifax. She had been towed 160 miles by the Dutch tug Elbe, which sought to claim the cargo if she made a safe port.

The United States Coast Guard warned ships to give the Ambassador a wide berth because she "might contain objects dangerous to navigation."

Of the 35 men aboard the freighter carrying grain from Philadelphia to England, 20 were rescued by the coast guard cutter Coos Bay and the Norwegian motor vessel Fruen. Fourteen others were drowned.

The ship's master, Captain Harry Strickland, was pulled aboard the cutter dead.

The men were plucked dramatically from the sea Wednesday, despite 65 - mile - an - hour winds and 35-foot waves, by use of lines.

The first ship to reach the side of the listing Ambassador, whose engines were flooded, was the Italian liner Leonardo da Vinci.

Passengers arriving in New York aboard the da Vinci Friday told of futile attempts to rescue crew members from the Ambassador.

"We saw one who tried to climb, but he fell into the water," said Anthony Maimone, a jeweller from Milan. "We never saw him again."

Oswald Hipatric, outgoing assistant defence secretary, was among those aboard the da Vinci who watched the rescue attempts.

"I have been a seaman myself and this was one of the biggest dramas of the sea I have ever seen," Gilpatric said. "This ship did the utmost she could do."

Decision of Government Praised by Time Magazine

MONTREAL (CP) — New legislation outlined by Prime Minister Pearson to protect Canadian magazines has drawn a mixed reaction from the president and publisher of the Montreal Star and outright praise from an executive of Time magazine.

John G. McConnell, head of the Star, said Friday that while he approves of the principle of the legislation "I don't see why Philip or any other government should grant permanent exemption to Time magazine and the Reader's Digest."

Mr. Pearson's legislative proposals, announced Thursday, would prevent Canadians from claiming a tax deduction for expenditures on advertising directed specifically at the Canadian market in non-Canadian periodicals.

However, the legislation would not affect Canadian advertisers in Canadian editions that already exist, such as Time and Reader's Digest.

Saskatchewan Predicts Budget Surplus of $444,000

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Provincial Treasurer J. H. Brockelbank of Saskatchewan forecast record expenditures of $214,452,150, more than half by the public health and education departments, in the 1964-65 provincial budget presented Friday.

A surplus of $444,000 was predicted and no tax changes were announced. But a budget the treasurer said supplied programs designed to help achieve "a dignified, a better and more varied life for the individual."

The Quebec House did not sit Friday as Premier Lesage and a number of his cabinet ministers were guests of the Ontario legislature.

In other legislatures:

New Brunswick — Premier Robichaud said the attorney-general's department is studying the ombudsman system of providing an official to whom the public can appeal government decisions they feel are unjust.

Nova Scotia—Liberal House Leader Peter M. Nicholson accused the government of mismanagement of public funds in the recent sale of a $20,000,000 bond issue.

He said the province could have got a better deal if it had sold the bond issue by tender instead of through a syndicate.

Manitoba — Industry Minister Gurney Evans demanded a federal investigation into Trans-Canada Air Lines' planned withdrawal of its overhaul base near Winnipeg and "the conduct of the management" of TCA.

PCs Vote Medicare Program

By RON LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP) — The Progressive Conservative party is on record in favor of a "government - operated medicare program for all Canadians."

The move came Friday in the Commons when 71 Conservative MPs sided with 16 New Democrats in support of an NDP non-confidence motion scoring the government for not initiating a federal-provincial medical care insurance plan.

The minority Liberal government easily defeated the motion 134 to 87 with the support of 12 Creditistes, five Social Credit MPs and Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) who is pledged to back the government on confidence tests for the first two years of its life.

The Liberals promised a national medical care plan in the 1962 and 1963 election campaigns but there was no reference to it in the throne speech at the opening of the new session Tuesday.

Health Minister LaMarsh said in the Commons last session that the government was studying for the recommendations of the royal commission on health services before deciding its policy. The commission's report is expected in a few weeks.

Until Friday, the Conservatives had been careful not to take a position for or against national medical care. They too were awaiting the royal commission report.

The Diefenbaker government appointed the seven - member commission Jan. 20, 1961, under Chief Justice Emmett Hall of Saskatchewan, now a member of the Supreme Court of Canada.

The Conservative whip, Eric Winkler (Grey - Bruce), spoke briefly just before Friday's vote to indicate that the NDP motion was acceptable to his party.

The government is expected

Joker Goes for Double Grand Slam

Ambulances, Hearses, Taxis Rush to Deseronto

Things are humming — and some joker is hee-hawing — in Deseronto these days.

But not for long, if Police Chief Ken Gloster has any luck tracing a phone call.

In the past week phoney calls have brought everything from hearses to taxis into the town.

Yesterday, was the climax. The joker went for the grand slam.

Called to the town were two ambulances from Belleville and a cartage company truck from Trenton; and before the day was out, three Belleville funeral homes despatched hearses.

This morning a new day dawned — and some new angles in the prankster's fevered brain.

By 8.30 a.m. Chief Gloster said a Napanee ambulance was dashing into town. At 8.40 an OPP corporal was rushed down from Belleville when a foul murder was reported.

"And there goes a Belleville taxi by the window now," he added.

Huge Cache of Heroin Seized in Montreal

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Authorities in Canada and the United States have announced the smashing of a big-scale international narcotics smuggling ring which used diplomatic luggage to slip heroin into the two countries.

A huge cache of the pure heroin was seized in Montreal and the Mexican ambassador to Bolivia and two other men have been arrested, the U.S. justice department announced Friday night.

Most of the cache, weighing 134 pounds, was grabbed by RCMP in Montreal a few days ago.

A small portion was picked up Friday in luggage checked at a New York railway station. Officials said a total of 1 pedlers could sell the cache for about $25,000,000 in the U.S. and about $52,000,000 in Canada. Canadian drug peddlers get much higher prices.

Federal agents said they arrested the three men in New York Friday just as they were preparing to flee the country. Disclosure of the arrests was delayed until Mexican Ambassador Salvador Pardo-Bollard's credentials could be verified.

EMBARRASS TALKS

Arrested along with the 55-year-old ambassador were Joan Arizti, about 60, an employee of the Uruguayan foreign ministry and Rene Bruchon, 50, a native of France who, the U.S. justice department said, was in the U.S. illegally. He had been deported in connection with a narcotics case in 1949.

Bail for all three was set at $100,000 at a preliminary arraignment in New York, although the U.S. government asked that it be set at $250,000.

If convicted, each man could face a maximum penalty of 40 years in prison and a fine of $20,000.

In announcing the smashing of the ring, Attorney-General Robert Kennedy said the Mexican government had cooperated closely in suppression of illegal narcotics traffic which has been trying to use Montreal as a point of entry into the North American continent.

TAKES THREE YEARS

The RCMP, U.S. Narcotics Bureau and the French Surete Nationale—all members of the Interpol—joined forces in an intensive three - year drive to smash the ring. While the top men were picked up in New York, French police seized two others in France.

The heroin seized in Montreal was picked up in U. S. RCMP said it was brought into Canada from France by plane.

RCMP Inspector Ralph Carriere said the heroin was taken

Few Clues In Search For Thieves

SHAWINIGAN, Que. (CP) Police and army officers apparently have little to go on in their search for the five youths said to have been involved in the latest theft from an armory in Quebec.

As authorities continued their search seven days after Tuesday's Shawinigan robbery, the order was out that small arms be removed from armories that can't be provided with armed military guards around the clock.

Defence Minister Hellyer announced the order in Ottawa Friday, saying it was a move to prevent further thefts from the armories.

He said the order meant the small arms — rifles, pistols, submachineguns and the like—will be removed from most of the armories in Quebec and other "sensitive areas."

Police Director Alfred Harbour of Shawinigan said he had two or three leads concerning a truck which may have been used by the robbers.

HOLD INQUIRY

A three-man army court of inquiry is conducting an investigation that was expected to be concerned mainly with an examination of the armory of the 62nd Field Artillery Regiment here and interviews with armory personnel.

The loot from the robbery in this city 75 miles northeast of Montreal, included 33 FN semi-automatic rifles, 12 Browning pistols, 12 portable wireless sets, a few army uniforms and other equipment.

Before leaving, the youths wrote the letters ALQ on the building's front and rear walls. The initials are the same as those of Armee de Liberation du Quebec.

Mr. Hellyer also said at least 24 persons will be on duty around the clock at all military units, whether or not those units have weapons.

Ruby Trial Picks Second Juror, False Bomb Warning Is Received

DALLAS (AP) Jack Ruby's trial on charges of murder with malice" goes into an unusual Saturday session today, after the selection of a second juror, and a false bomb threat in the courtroom.

The second juror, sworn in late Friday, is Allen E. McCoy, 39, big, slow-spoken industrial engineer.

District Judge Joe B. Brown called the special session to speed up the meticulous, unusually hard-fought process of finding 12 jurors. In the trial's first week 39 prospects were examined for jury duty, only two chosen.

After a "mumbled" telephone call about a bomb, the courthouse where Ruby is being tried was quietly searched during the noon recess Friday. The call came, not to Brown's court, but to one in Oak Cliff, a suburb, where Brown, Joe B. Brown Jr. is a justice of the peace.

Nothing was found in either the courtroom when they were searched.

Ruby faces a possible death sentence for killing Lee Harvey Oswald, Nov. 24. Oswald had been charged with murdering president Kennedy in Dallas.

Melvin Belli, chief defence counsel, said McCoy is much the same type of man as Max E. Causey, the first juror chosen. Causey, 35, is an electronics analyst. Important to the defence is the fact that both jurors said they have some knowledge of modern psychiatry.

Fred Barton Of Ont. Intell Is Director

TORONTO (CP) — Expansion programs of a number of non-metropolitan Ontario daily newspapers are proceeding with a total value of more than $5,000,000, the Ontario Provincial Dailies Association was told Friday at the closing session of its two day convention.

W. J. Garner, general manager of the Peterborough Examiner and retiring president, said in his concluding address that across Canada the newspaper industry is spending more money on plant and equipment than radio and television combined.

Meetings attended by some 50 newspaper executives were devoted to discussions of business and operating problems and descriptions of new technical niques in the news publishing field.

Reports indicated that 1963 had been a generally good year for Ontario provincial newspapers, with prospects continuing bright for 1964.

BAN UPHELD

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP)—A three-judge federal court ruled Friday that the U.S. state department's ban on travel to Cuba was not unconstitutional. The court ruled specifically, in a majority opinion, that Louis Zemel of Middlefield, Conn., had not been unlawfully prevented from travelling to Cuba in March, 1962.

Two Visiting Jail Ended Up in Cells

The girl friend of a youth recently sentenced to Hastings County jail for drunkenness decided to visit him Friday — visitors' day at the jail.

She enlisted the enthusiasm of another man — also a friend of the incarcerated.

Prison guards did a double take when the pair turned up in the lobby. They hastily called police. The guards claimed the pair were under the influence.

Police, when they arrived agreed.

So much so both girl friend and escort themselves wound up in police cells — charged with being drunk.

PCs Vote

to face a more serious test Tuesday night when a Conservative non - confidence motion comes to a vote. It attacks the government for failing to repeal its 11-per-cent sales tax on building materials and production machinery.

Guy Marcoux, Quebec lieutenant to Social Credit Leader Real Caouette, said Friday the 11-man group will vote against the government but has not digested rumors of a secret Liberal-Social Credit alliance.

Spokesmen for the New Democrats and the Creditistes also have criticized the sales tax and most of them are expected to vote against the government.

Opposition abstentionism could easily save the government from defeat, however, as happened several times last year. Its majority was the second round of the eight-day debate on the throne speech and topics ranged widely.

LOANS ATTACKED

Mr. Marcoux, Creditiste Leader Caouette and Louis-Joseph Pigeon (PC — Joliette-L'Assomption-Montcalm) all accused the government of impinging on provincial education affairs by proposing loans to university students.

Walter P. Foy (L — Lambton West) urged the government to draw up measures to assist the international and interprovincial trucking industries. The government should not help railways at the expense of truckers.

John Addison (L — York North) proposed the merger of the Canadian Air Lines and Canadian Pacific Airlines in a partner a 1-1 between governments and private enterprise. Canada would thus be in a better competitive position on international air routes.

County Council Discusses Several Centennial Projects

PICTON — Prince Edward County Council will check with the Ontario Municipal Board to see if proposed renovations to their county Shire Hall administration building will qualify as a centennial project.

County councillors met in special session Friday evening to discuss possible centennial projects within the county.

After hearing J. A. C. Rogers, centennial committee chairman, it was suggested that Shire Hall be restored and renovated with an addition built to the registry office. This would provide more office space of which a part might be used as a museum and for storing of archives.

Mr. Rogers told councillors that in order for the county to qualify for centennial grants, they as a council must represent two or more municipalities other than separated towns or cities.

ONE RULES ON PROJECTS

The Ontario Municipal Board rules on whether projects will be eligible for the one dollar per capita grant from each senior government.

Projects normally approved include park development, restoration of historical buildings and acquiring of historical materials. There must be reasonable assurance that the project will be completed by centennial year, 1967, and applications must be in by August 1st of this year.

South Marysburg Reeve John Rose suggested the best way his municipality would participate in a centennial project would be if restoration of the county buildings was approved.

Reeve John Fox of Hallowell said the present county jail was already a museum piece.

If the Ontario Provincial Police built their own quarters and a central jail was built as discussed in recent talks at Kingston we could have the jail as a museum," he said.

AWAY OF LIVE

He said the cost per prisoner per day at the Prince Edward jail was away out of line with other centres, $13 as compared with $6 for other centres.

This was due to the small jail population in Prince Edward county. "But don't let us send out invitations," he said.

County Warden Kenneth Hicks asked that the county bond itself a lot of money on a centennial project. He said, however, that he would approve spending money on any county buildings for future needs.

Licensing of dogs also came up for discussion, it being decided to strike an equal rate throughout the county with county assessors or township clerks being authorized to make collections for the county.

Rate will be $2.00 for the first male dog or spayed female, $4.00 for each additional animal and $10 for each female.

Council also decided that the county would bear all the cost of all searches for property transfers required by the county assessing department.

RCMP had Aristi under surveillance and seized the heroin, substituting flour in the suitcases but leaving about a pound of heroin in the case driven by diplomat later picked up the luggage and left by train for New York where it was confiscated.

"We left some heroin in so as to make a case in the U.S.," said the inspector.

SECOND LARGEST CACHE

Kennedy said it was the second largest heroin shipment ever smuggled into Canada and the U.S. that is larger was 270 pounds seized in New York in 1960. That case involved another diplomat, Guatemalan consul, the Guatemalan ambassador to Belgium and The Netherlands.

Aristi checked four pieces of luggage at the Grand Trunk Railway station at Valley Station, said U.S. Narcotics Commissioner Henry Gordon.

"Baggage checks for the four pieces were found on Bruchon at the time of his arrest," Giordano added.

Aristi and Pardo - Bolland were picked up in Montreal in a mid - Manhattan hotel room. Burchon was found on a street near Madison Square Garden.

Kennedy said the three police organizations involved—those in Canada, U.S. and France—deserve high credit for their close co-operation and intensive efforts in this case.

DESCRIBES THE CASE

Authorities said all three were preparing to flee the United States.

Aristi was described as married and with a 15 - year - old daughter and family in Montevideo. A representative of the Uruguayan and Honduran governments said they assigned an attache to the embassy in Mexico City to assist Canadian police.

Pardo-Bolland, married, was the only one of the three defendants who spoke English.

William Tendy, assistant U.S. attorney, said Bruchen, a bachelor and a resident of Marseilles, France, was convicted in 1948 of smuggling 12 kilos of heroin into Canada. He escaped in the attorney who spoke English.

Vandals Do $500 Damage To House

That federal $500 grant for winter house construction won't benefit the first home now being built in a new Belleville subdivision.

Vandals took care of that last night — but good.

The house is the first being built on the new King George Square — immediately south of King George Public School.

Last night workers left it in tip top shape — with its hardboard sides up, its roof on and basement windows intact.

This morning the roof was still on — one of the few things still intact.

The wallboard had been torn from the walls, the windows smashed, cement blocks broken.

Cost in replacements and labor may be up to $500, one worker said.

City police are investigating.

Placed Bet On Yankees, Shot Bookmaker

NEW YORK (AP) — A 23-year-old Park Avenue businessman is under arrest, charged with murdering a bookmaker with whom he had placed a big bet on New York Yankees in baseball's 1963 World Series. Los Angeles Dodgers won the series in four games.

Mark Feis, identified by police as president of a firm which manufactures cardboard boxes and tin cans, was arrested Thursday night as he left his apartment.

He was accused of shooting Ruben Markowitz, whose bound body was found in a trunk in the Harlem River Nov. 8 with four bullet wounds.

Detectives said the shooting occurred in a Manhattan apartment on Oct. 10, where Feis had arranged to meet Markowitz ostensibly to pay off a $25,000 bet on the Yankees.

Police said Feis had lost $60,000 to another bookmaker.

5,000 Welcome Beatles Home

LONDON (AP)The Beatles flew home from their United States' triumph today to a wild welcome from 5,000 shrieking, weeping teen-agers.

Ecstatic whoops went up as the four beaming performers marched down the steps of their jet. Police battled to control wild-eyed fans, some of whom had waited at the airport for 24 hours.

Authorities herded the welcomers on to the roof of the Queen's Building for fear the regular observation deck might collapse.

Lesage Welcomed In Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Jean Lesage of Quebec said Friday the federal government will play a lesser role and the provinces will grow closer together in the Confederation of the future.

Speaking to the Ontario legislature at the beginning of a weekend goodwill visit, the premier said the provinces will be drawn closer together because their need for money to deal with similar problems of rising education and health and welfare costs.

"We will work together more and more in groups of two, three, five and even 10. Up to now we could say the relationship between governments in Canada has been vertical, that is, largely limited to relations between federal and provincial levels; I believe that this relationship will gradually become horizontal, that is inter-provincial."

He said Ontario will not be alone in asking the federal-government for a greater share of federal tax revenues at the next federal - provincial conference.

TOP SECURITY

RCMP officers stood on duty on the tarmac as the premier's plane landed at Toronto International Airport. Provincial police were stationed at intersections and on overpasses as the premier's cavalcade of 10 cars and a chartered bus moved slowly into the city.

Toronto police blocked intersections to enable the procession to reach the legislature building on schedule. Inside were 24 uniformed OPP officers. Plainclothes provincial and metro officers mingled with the crowd.

Leger Sets Skilled Mind To Work in Sensitive Area

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The appointment of Jules Leger as Canadian ambassador to Paris sets a skilled and subtle mind to work in a sensitive area.

If Canada is seeking a dialogue with President Charles de Gaulle, Leger is one man who has the intellectual equipment to sustain it without flinching in the face of Gaullist logic and rhetoric.

At 50, Leger is one of the most experienced Canadian career diplomats and one of the external affairs department's leading political thinkers. His appointment reflects the changing balance of power in Europe and shows the new importance France is accorded as one of Canada's founding nations.

Son of a country storekeeper from Valleyfield, Que., Leger is a tall man of grave demeanor whose flair for quiet understatement hides a twinkling good humor. Colleagues say he is "very finely tuned" culturally and artistically.

As a former ambassador to NATO, he knows his way around Paris. His brother, Paul-Emile Cardinal Leger, archbishop of Montreal, has an international reputation as one of the leaders of the liberal wing of the Roman Catholic Church, an advance guard that draws much of its inspiration from France, West Germany and The Netherlands.

At one time there were even published reports that de Gaulle wanted a French-speaking pope and that Cardinal Leger was the man he had in mind.

Apart from Canada's concern to inject fresh vigor into relationships with France, the new ambassador will confront a full international slate in Paris. The French capital is a focal point in some of the most acute tensions facing the Western alliance.

Even in Canadian circles, Ambassador Leger may have a tricky time. French - Canadian separatists have set up an international committee in Paris to spread the message and Parisians sometimes are puzzled in distinguishing between various currents of Canadian opinion.

With Leger's posting in Paris on top of the appointment of Lionel Chevrier as high commissioner in London, Canada's two top diplomatic posts in Europe now are held by French-speaking Canadians.

The suggestion once was canvassed that the appointment of a French-Canadian to London, as happened for the first time in Chevrier's case, would be an appropriate moment to place an English-speaking Canadian in Paris. The appointment of a man of Leger's calibre will console any who advocated this attempt at bicultural balance.

Victims of Change

The residents of Dundas Street East who object to plans for a medical building opposite the Belleville General Hospital, those who object to setting the minimum width for lots in residential zone B at 55 feet, the deer who raced terror-stricken through the busy city streets on Tuesday—all are victims of the same phenomenon.

Times change.

There was a day when that deer could have wandered with comparative safety over the hills and through the marsh and woods where Belleville now stands.

But not today.

There is not much the deer can do to prevent man from changing the environment in which it must live.

Man, however, has some control over the environment in which he must live and endeavors to exert this control through regulations defining the ways in which it is permissible for it to be altered.

Today he faces a difficult task because the rules which he establishes have, in many cases, already been broken in the past, setting a precedent which can be used by those who want future change.

Even if this were not so, however, even where man finds himself dealing with areas which, since the first, have been regulated, time will force some changes.

There are no simple rules by which to judge whether a proposed change should, or should not, be allowed. Each case must be judged by an assortment of yardsticks, of which the profit or loss of the owners of property in the immediate area is but one.

We do not envy the judges their task.

Freedom Becoming Anarchy

The trouble with that freedom which slowly broadens down, from precedent to precedent, is that eventually it often becomes anarchy.

Or so it would seem, if we take a look at two separate, but concurrent, exhibitions of this process, now running in the United States.

The worker has come a long way since the days when the law refused him the right to join with his fellow employees in seeking changes which would benefit the group. His freedom has slowly broadened down—until today the longshoremen in the United States are refusing to load ships with grain bound for Russia, because half the ships are being utilized on U.S. owned. The longshoremen argue that they have a right to concern themselves about the welfare of fellow-Americans who earn their living as sailors on U.S. freighters. But, as a Washington official has observed, what the longshoremen's boycott really means is that the union is trying to expropriate from the State Department the right to make U.S. foreign policy.

In Dallas Jack Ruby is on trial for the murder of Lee Harvey Oswald, believed to have been the assassin of President John F. Kennedy. First task will be to select a jury. There was a time when an accused man had nothing to say as to who should compose the group which would decide his fate—and there have been occasions when the jury was packed with the personal enemies of the accused. It is proper that the defence should have a right to challenge prospective jurors, in order that the accused may not see his avowed enemies sitting in judgment upon him. This freedom, though, has also slowly broadened down to the point where it has become an absurdity—a hunt for twelve men amongst 900.

These are not abstract problems for us, just because we are Canadians. What has happened in the United States could also happen here —and indeed often appears to be in the process of happening.

Must freedom always broaden down into anarchy?

It is a question to which it is easy to give a quick reply in the negative—but it is much more difficult to produce irrefutable evidence to support this stand.

Our society cannot achieve greatness unless individuals at many levels of ability accept the need for high standards of performance and strive to achieve those standards within the limits possible for them. We want the highest conceivable excellence, of course, in the activities crucial to our effectiveness and creativity as a society; but that isn't enough. If the man in the street says, "Those fellows at the top have to be good, but I'm just a slob and can act like one"—then our days of greatness are behind us. We must foster a conception of excellence which may be applied to every degree of ability and to every socially acceptable activity.—John W. Gardner.

Ottawa Offbeat
Mike Pearson and Press Corps Having a Happy Honeymoon

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Pearson has pulled the political public relations trick of the year.

He has refined the Press Conference into something that approaches an instrument of policy.

It is a neat feat seldom attempted — and never successfully — by any previous prime minister within living memory.

By the simple process — perhaps it is not really simple at all, but actually a carefully cultivated art — of putting a remarkably pleasing personality to work he has captivated, almost completely, the Parliamentary Press Gallery.

Since the Gallery membership now numbers something more than 125 working newspapermen, columnists, radio and television commentators, this has given him what generally is known as "a good press," better by far than any enjoyed — or more often endured — by Prime Ministers Diefenbaker, St. Laurent, Mackenzie King, and certainly, if legend is to be believed, by Richard Bedford Bennett.

It-results in a continuing public image of Prime Minister Pearson as an extremely reasonable, amiable, reasonable and altogether likeable man.

While, in many ways, he is.

And which, surely, does him no harm at all with the taxpayers and voters.

LACKED THE TOUCH

But as, tried and in a not greatly lesser degree, are Conservative Leader Diefenbaker and former Prime Minister St. Laurent agreeable men.

And even Mackenzie King who, while he was a great deal more remote, perhaps even distant an da little on the old-womanish side, was likable, if ever, anything but pleasant in his daily contacts with the working press.

But none of these men, in his days of prime ministerial power, was able to charm and disarm the Press Corps with the affable ease of Mike Pearson.

While Mackenzie King could be charming, in an old-world way at his receptions at Laurier House where he served tiny glasses of sherry to friends and neighbors on Sandy Hill including, inevitably, some members of the Capital's Press Corps, he was pretty much a stranger most of the time to all but a very select few among the newsmen.

And whenever he did hold his infrequent press conferences, it always seemed to be mid-afternoon with the sun beaming in through the East Block office windows.

With his daisy-fed tucked tidily up on a petit point footstool, and his small hands neatly folded on his lap, he would drone away in the warm sunlight of the afternoon and heavily boring, in later, would nod.

It was always relaxing, almost enervating, and never unpleasant.

"Uncle Louie" St. Laurent, a courtly man, was very seldom inconsiderate of reporters' questions, but on those occasions he could show some small irritation over what he sometimes assumed to be their editorial trespassing on his private thoughts, but most of his time he was content to do his way to be pleasant, if not always informative.

BRISK, WITTEN BITING

John Diefenbaker was an entirely different cup of reporterial tea.

Possibly because he knew a few of the newsmen nearly 30 years by the time he became prime minister and seemed to think he could be completely honest and even cause with most of them, he developed a boisterous camaraderie that could be rasping and even misunderstood.

If he didn't like a news story or a column of comment, he didn't hesitate to say so in usually bluntly, even at times brutally. And he seemed almost to tear great bleeding strips off what he may have come to regard as his tormentors within sight and sound of their grinding contemporaries. This was a mistake.

If he didn't care for the fisyo, of a question, he could be acid in his reply.

But then, he could be the soul of consideration, co-operative, helpful, warmly pleasant, hilariously entertaining — and usually was. But it was the wounded who had the long memories and the sly and imagined grudges and they increased with the stress and strain of the years.

Now there is Mike Pearson — and right from the start, with the Press Corps knowing if not always calling him "Mike," he was away out ahead.

But there is more than that to it.

The prime minister has taken the press conference out of the East and Centre Block corridors, where it is conducted in something of the combined style of a hurdle race and football scrimmage, and into the quiet order of a large room set aside for just such a purpose.

But more important, the prime minister, with reason and the bounds of discretion, and so far they seem to be astonishingly wide — answers every question.

Usually fully and well.

Usually, too, with a smile. Always in a pleasant manner. Relaxed and easy. Flatteringly using Christian names.

That goes for the kind of questions other prime ministers might have regarded as "loaded." Questions with sharp points, if not exactly political fishhooks in them.

They've been tried on this Prime Minister and he has answered them with the same equanimity as in responding to a "set-up" question.

There are two exactly opposite types of questions confronting any prime minister at a Press Conference: those he hopes will be asked and perhaps arranges to have put to him, and those he hopes can be avoided.

WITH MIKE PEARSON

With Mike Pearson, they seem all the same. If he has hackles, they're invisible. And if he is irritated at the way certain questions, he conceals it utterly. This attitude produces a certain state of mental mind in which a newspaperman, even the five-minute-egg type of reporter hellbent to an unpleasant or unwelcome questions of such a thoroughly pleasant man.

Then there is this final thing. On the infrequent occasion when a question usually controversially worded answer backfires and causes some political embarrassment, the prime minister blames himself, not the newspapermen. It has happened a couple of times, notably when he said there would be "no-limit" on federal spending for the Montreal World Fair. He hadn't meant it that way, and if he had been misunderstood — and he was, in big black type — it was his own fault, and he confessed next time. This is quite a switch, and goes a long way to explain what has been described as the honeymoon with the Capital's Press Corps.

"You're in luck, Dad . . . It's the cop you know . . . from last time."

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

25 YEARS AGO

FEBRUARY 22, 1944

Figures were made public at Ottawa showing that the total of intakes of men into the armed forces of Canada up to the end of last September was 869,221. This must be inspiring news to the people of Canada that the men of military age have been playing so great a part in the war for the preservation of liberty and democracy.

In this military district, No. 3, that of Kingston, the figures of enrolment are 72,316 or 38.7 per cent of the male population of the ages 18 to 45, the average for the Canada being 35.1 per cent after the deduction of 1,731 men taken on the strength of the Canadian Parachute district No. 2, led all districts in totals and in percentage of the men of military age, the former being 197,335 and the percentage 42.7.

Of the 72,316 the army led, 589,106, the air force 204,458 and the navy 75,757. The figures for the Royal Canadian Air Force show the tremendous development which has taken place in this branch of the services. These colossal figures provide an idea of the part the Royal Air Force plays in air, land and sea operations in modern war. The growth of the Royal Canadian Navy, likewise, is indicative of the great part that the control of the sea plays in warfare of today. The development in the Air Force and in the Navy has been phenomenal and shows how the character of war has changed as well as how Canada has realized the supreme need of keeping the sea lanes and the air routes free. Canada's development since the war of 1918 can be indicated in added stress on naval strength.

To Your Good Health
Overconcerned With Having Big Bust Measurements

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Doctor: What causes one breast to be larger? Does this mean cancer? How can check for it? I am not very well-developed, so there is a noticeable difference. I am 17. — G. W.

Should I see a doctor? — A. M.

Sometimes I lose my self-control and rant — well, a pat is sharply, anyway — against the overconcern with having a big bust measurement. From the purely medical standpoint, I think we can spare a few words for girls who write letters like these today.

Unequal size of the breasts is not unusual. In fact, most of us, male and female, are unequal — from left to right in many things. (No, that is not political comment!) Rarely if ever do you find a face which is perfectly balanced, and photographers and artists have learned to use different most of us would look, including world famous beauties like Vic. E. Clarke, W. Walshe, W. H. Gilbert, skip 7.

From the French-Canadian Viewpoint

Grandy La Voix de l'Est.

Quebec's preferential economic policy still bothers Ontario. The businessmen and even the government of that province are taking a very dim view of the campaign by Le Conseild, expansion economique and the decision of several Quebec governmental agencies to favor the industries and business firms of our province. . . .

Listening to opinions emanating from the neighbor province, one gets the impression that Quebec people haven't the right to buy at home and favor industries of own businesses. Ontario, headed by its premier, in effect invites us the right to do what it has been doing for more than a century. For we must not be fooled by the Ontario Trade Crusade, even if it does not commit people to buy in Ontario. It is entirely aimed at this objective. Ontario is heavily industrial and in a position to supply not only its own market but those of other provinces. Its policy amounts to this: Come at us in a shop among us, it says to industrialists, and it will be easy for you to get markets in other provinces.

Well, contrary to what Mr. Robarts pretends, Quebec is not fragmenting the Canadian economy by putting a preferential policy. It is simply helping to ensure the growth in its economy and thus to make the general economy of the country more solid. This encouragement to its industries will allow them to develop and raise the level of employment.

The "five-and-ten-cent" store concept of business was launched 80 years ago today—in 1879—when Frank W. Woolworth, after working as a clerk in various stores, opened the first of what was to become the Woolworth chain. Until his death in 1919, Woolworth's company had grown to 1,000 stores and had accumulated a personal fortune worth millions. Hundreds of new stores continued to be added to the Woolworth chain after his death.

Viewpoint

Moncton, L'Evangeline

"People seem to be under the impression that the Laurendeau - Dunton commission has been set up to make Canadians learn two languages." This idea is firmly rooted in the minds of perhaps just as much in the East. An example of it is a statement by the executive of the Local Orange Lodge of Moncton, coinciding with the visit of Governor Rockefeller and Kennedy to Moncton.

This statement is a gem of simplicity, if not of truth in such an expression. It says bilingualism is not practical. How has such a conclusion been reached? How can anyone declare in Moncton and in Northern New Brunswick bilingualism is not practical? By what right is a language imposed upon 6,000,000 French-Canadians whose ancestors have worked as hard to develop the country as the English-speaking compatriots . . .

Canada ought to have a double advantage with two official languages for it would be in a position to communicate with other countries where French is the language of one of the official languages. Diplomats have certainly grasped the importance of French in international affairs.

Another statement denoting either crass ignorance or hypocrisy is the statement that "there is no basis for arguing that bilingualism develops unity." How do people get to understand each other if they do not know each other? How can we profit from the cultural advantages of both great races that have made up Canada?

Salt on Roads

Port Arthur News Chronicle

Two Ontario road experts told the Canadian Good Roads Association convention in Winnipeg that the salt used to keep roads free of ice is having serious effects on the province's bridges. Cool it, the department of highways loses a few bridges, they might even get around to worrying about the province's roads and bridges.

Guides and Brownies Mark Thinking Day in Many Ways

The Guides and Brownies of Belleville Southeast District have enjoyed many special programs for Thinking Day's February 22nd which was both Lord and Lady Powell's birthday. During February the whole district assisted by the Guides and Brownies of Belleville Northeast district have worked at making Valentine tray favors for each patient in the hospital. Many worked actively on them and others contributed financially. Special collections have been taken for the World Friendship fund to assist Guiding around the world.

PACK 3 BROWNIES

With Brown Owl Mrs. D. DeBoer, Pack 3 Brownies held a Dutch Brownie meeting for Thinking Day. Dutch songs were sung and games played. The toadstool had been transformed from the regular color to red with white dots as they are in Europe. The Brown Owl showed slides that she had taken of children in Holland and served Dutch cookies. The District Commissioner Mrs. T. R. Cockburn was present and enrolled twins Carol and Kathy Donley.

PACKS AND BROWNIES

Mrs. G. T. Crabb's pack 8 brownies thought of other brownies around the world by placing games from South Africa and from Germany. The Brown Owl explained thinking day to them and the origin of Scouts and Guides. At a special ceremony, large yellow candle representing guiding around the world was lit. Each brownie placed a cup cake with a yellow candle lit while a story of a Brownie in India was told.

PACK 14 BROWNIES

A special golden bar ceremony was held in pack 14, with Brown Owl Mrs. R. Pollard presented golden bars to Judith Stier, Patty McKnight, Lynn Watson, Debrdra Barlow, Susan Brodie, Marylou Clark, Lenore Romain and Patsy Bickford. The goden bar is the brownie's first badge of achievement and represents the half-way mark in the brownie program. Thinking day was celebrated by lighting a birthday cake with candles.

Valentine tray favors were also made by special pack for the patients at the Bellcrest Nursing Home.

PACK 9 BROWNIES

Brown Owl Mrs. J. Driscoll of pack 9, had a large enrolment and at this pack has been divided to make two packs but many new twenties to be enrolled. These were Debbie Cassidy, Kathy Moore, Anne Marie Poremba, Dianne Thibodeau, Maureen Guilfoyle, Debbie Ferrar, Deborah Anderson, Patty Farrell, Jean Fleming, Joanne Belanger, Mary Ellen Noble, Shelly Woodman, Janice Green, Beverly Young, Louise Bray, Mary Lou Hall, Anne Marie Hilbig, Colleen Clancy, Mary McCullum, Susan Ross, Carol Brooks and Sheila Duffy. In evidence were some of the smart new Brownie uniforms, with the colorful ties. Brown Owl Mrs. M. Chartrand of pack 18 assisted and many parents attended.

PACK 15 BROWNIES

Mrs. R. Maki's pack 15 Brownies have had a very busy month. The District Commissioner enrolled six Brownies, Janet Burke, Lee Ann Bell, Heather Reid, Nancy Wormald, Janet Ward and Helen Smith. The mothers were invited to the ceremony and were served tea by the Brownies. There were also a number of mothers and a father present at a special golden bar ceremony where Marlene Adamson, Candace Clarke, Cathy Dier, Judy Atkin, Suzan Sinclon, and Lesleigh Hussey proudly received their bars.

This pack also had a birthday cake with candles for Thinking Day and special games from other countries were played.

PACK 18 BROWNIES

Pack 18 Brownies remembered Thinking Day by having Brown Owl Mrs. M. Chartrand pin the name of a country where there are brownies on each child as she came to the meeting. Each brownie then lit a candle on the cake in the name of Brownies of that country. Happy birthday was sung in honor of the Founder.

At a recent enrolment ceremony, which was attended by a large number of parents, Commissioner Colden enrolled the following brownies; Theresa Henry, Mary Jane Kelleher, Diane Clermont, Linda Beaudoin, Ann McKee, Rosanne Lane, Monica Bibby, Mary Jo Bishop, Joanne McDonald, Linda Silver, Connie Molnick, Jo Smith, Dale Boyle, Patricia Smith, Sharon Kot, Judy Barlow, Donna Barrett and Mary Cunningham.

As this is a new Brownie pack this year Brown Owl Driscoll of pack 9 also assisted. The commissioner spoke briefly to the Brownies and presented the Pack Registration Certificate to the Brown Owl.

1ST POINT ANNE

Brown Owl Mrs. M. Akey's 1st Point Anne Pack met with the 1st Point Anne Guides for a fly-up ceremony. The Brown Owl read a farewell message and the commissioner pinned wings to Dianne Branigan and Bonny Branigan. They then "flew up" and were welcomed into Guides by Captain Horwood. Cheryl Gwinn and Debbie DeBoude "walked" up to Guides.

The Sunday before Thinking Day the Brownies were all requested to attend the church of their denomination in uniform. At their next meeting the Brownies had a Thinking Day birthday party.

With the assistance of several mothers to provide transportation, the Brownies recently toured the Ontario Intelligencer printing plant and offices, and learned much from the conducted tour.

COMPANY 1 GUIDES

Each patrol in Mrs. S. Alberti's Company 1 Guides is to be responsible for a part of the Thinking Day program, such as a German song, life of Lord and Lady Baden-Powell, origin of Guides in Canada and a skit on Guides in other countries. Refreshments will be served.

A large enrolment was recently held and Guides enrolled by Commissioner Colden were Elizabeth Edwards, Pan Thorne, Susan Boyce, Carol Attinson, Jane McKenzie, Nancy McFarlane, Carol Pope, Joyce Stewart, Christine Dall, Sharon Welch and Paulette Fair. Also born Several Guides trying their hostess badge served tea to the parents and treated the company.

COMPANY 3 GUIDES

Captain Mrs. P. Stalkovitch recently planned a Girl Guide tea into the sisterhood of guiding in Company 3. These were Karen Bateman, Carole Lennox, Barbara Boyd, Brenda Blackburn, Noleen Geen and Judy Maclaren.

The badge secretary Mrs. W. R. C. Munroe was present and tasted several of the guides on their hostess badge as they served tea to the mothers present.

n Brown Owl DeBoer graciously consented to show her slides of Holland to this company as part of their Thinking Day program.

Guide Holly McMurray has successfully tried her gold cord challenge, which is the highest award in guiding, and is given for outstanding service.

COMPANY 9 GUIDES

An enrolment was held recently in Captain Mrs. N. Newland's company 9, and Commissioner Colden assisted by Lieutenant Mrs. J. Ritchie enrolled Polly Peachken, Diane Thistle, Anne Mandsley, Janice Overton, Donna Kirkman, Brenda McLanchan Rosalind Rogers, and Linda Close.

This company has an international connection in that newly enrolled Guide Linda Peachkin expects to return to her homeland, the United States shortly, and wears the uniform of an American Girl Scout.

The meeting was well attended by interested parents. Company Leader, Guide Lynn Neill also has successfully tried her gold cord challenge, and her company is justly proud of her.

COMPANY 14 GUIDES

Thinking day was commemorated by Mrs. W. Jarvis's company 14 by having a birthday cake set on a table with a world globe beside it and several guides plus of different countries. Each guide lighted a candle and after the four candles on the cake, representing the four corners of the earth, were set aglow, the guides formed a circle singing "Oh, Chalet". In a darkened room with just the lights from the candles the guides recited the law and promise. Oh Canada was sung both in English and French.

Guides recently enroled by the District Commissioner, are Captain Janice Carr-Brant, Maureen Kirby, Karen Cross, Stephanie McGuire, Joanne Tugnett, Betty Molnski, Patricia Bankey, Diane Boyle, Mary McVicker, Donna Marie Boyle, Theresa Martin, Marilyn Henry, Pearl Ann Vase, Bonnie Green, Pamela Barrett. The commissioner also awarded the important religion and membership to guides Ann O'Connor, Karen Boyle, Diane Belanger. Some of the success of this large company is due to the assistance of Provincial Cadet Jennifer Carter, from Ottawa, a nurse in training who is comig to this company as her service project.

1ST BONNY ANNE GUIDES

Thanks to the generosity of Canada Cement plant company the 1st Point Anne Guide company under Mrs. W. Horwood as captain are meeting now in the company canteen. It was there that the 1st Point Anne Brownies met with the Guides for a special "fly-up" ceremony and many interested parents attended.

Mrs. Dale King was erroled by Commissioner Colden and presented with her Lieutenant's warrant. Also enroled were Bonnie Branigan, Dianne Branigan, Debbie Desnaire, Debbie Gibbs, Bonnie McLuckie and Debra Mallica. Refreshments were served to all present while the commissioner told the girls about some of the hardships of being an Eskimo Guide and the fun that they too enjoy.

For Thinking Day each Guide wore a small flag representing all the countries in the world's association and as each dropped her money in the "World Friendship" bank she pledged her friendship to the country she represented. This bank also contained money collected throughout the year when each girl donated "a penny a year" on her birthday. The flags were also used as the basis of a World Friendship game.

At Campfire Lieutenant Mrs. King showed colored stickes and gave a brief talk on the North-West Territories where she and her family resided for several years.

Sit Back and Relax to Acquire Will Power to Quit Smoking

By JIM PEACOCK

NEW YORK (CP) — Want to stop smoking?

Okay. Turn on the record player, lie back and relax.

Now listen carefully to the Bargeton.

"In order to stop smoking you must want to."

Now close your eyes and repeat: "My legs are relaxed. My arms are relaxed. My entire body is relaxed. I am completely relaxed . . ."

In this state, says the narration, "you can give yourself suggestions" and when you slowly open your eyes, the suggestions will remain with you permanently.

GIVES SUGGESTIONS

Ready for the suggestions? Just flip the record, lie back, relax again and close your eyes.

"I will think and act in a positive and constructive way.

"I will have full and complete control over my mental abilities. . . .

"Once I have made a decision, I will stick to it.

"I have decided to give up smoking. My mind will accept every suggestion that will help me quit smoking.

"I will look better . . . feel better . . . feel strong, healthy and happy . . ."

Got the idea? Sound easy? Well, Joseph Lampl, New York city hypnosis expert who wrote and narrated the long-play recording The Record to Stop Smoking from which the above instructions are taken, says it is easy.

"All you do," he says in the notes on the record's jacket, "is place yourself in a comfortable position and concentrate."

Playing both sides of the record at least once a day, the average person should be able to master the power of controlling the smoking habit within 10 days, Lampl says.

Lampl, about 40, has been a cigarette smoker since he was 15. When the U.S. surgeon general's committee reported several weeks ago that cigarette smoking is harmful to health, Lampl applied his self - hypnosis methods and quit smoking.

Then came the recording idea—which Lampl now may find use for himself.

When distributors in the U.S. and Canada snapped up 14,000 copies of the initial pressing of the record, Lampl said, "I got so nervous, I started smoking again."

Man, Nature Combine to Make Rio De Janeiro Ideal City

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

RIO DE JANEIRO — He is known only as Pedro dos Flores — "Flower Pete" — and he can be seen each night in the bohemian sidewalk restaurants of Copacabana Beach, a carnation in his tuxedo lapel, ageless as Santa Claus.

With his tray of flowers, he passes quietly among the tables and extends a bloom to each lady. Sometimes he is offered money, and sometimes not, and there are times when he will not accept any. But if the lady and time are propitious, a rich man may give him $20, and so Pedro dos Flores has made his living on the sentimentality of Brazilians all these years.

It is difficult not to be sentimental in, and about, what may be the most beautiful city in the world.

The splendor of this magic place, lovingly curling its arms around the waters of Guanabara Bay and the hills of Tijuca Barocchi. Its aspects are as changing as a pack of shuffled picture post cards.

There is a rhythm and pace about the city as throbbing as the samba, as sensual and as insinuating as the bossa nova, both of which were born here and could have been born nowhere else. The caramel-colored senoritas and the deep and dark-eyed men with the patrician air of Latin dons, appear to have been hired to fill the streets as extras for a Hollywood musical.

IDEAL MARRIAGE

In few places have man and nature achieved an ideal a marriage. Rio's shape has been dictated by the Latin restlessness of her people. The city starts at the bumpy projection of Sugar Loaf in the harbor, then wanders north along the bay and into the hills, west along the beaches of Copacabana and Leblon, seemingly endless in every direction.

It is a crowded city with little space to taste for private homes. The streets and beaches smile after mile, are studded with apartment houses and skyscrapers that somehow complement the soaring grace and harmony of the natural beauty. White beaches outline the picture, and outcroppings of rocks and mountains are the background.

Each section maintains its own character and is often starkly different from the others. Santa Teresa, almost blackened with trees and rural as a Portuguese hill town, nestles at the foot of the mountains. Ipanema and Leblon embrace the stillness of Lagoa de Freitas Lagoon, and glow golden at sunset. Downtown Rio is frenetic, roaring with people and clanging the world with new concepts in modern architecture. Yet graceful parks and colonial scenarios punctuate it everywhere.

Nothing ever stops. New buildings rise, streets are being straightened, tunnels cleft through the mountains, land is reclaimed for new freeways, and the traffic everywhere is thick, even in the world, 24 hours a day. Maracana Soccer Stadium can, and often does, hold 200,000 people. So do the beaches. And night life in the little bossa nova boites pulsates all night.

SO MUCH TO SEE

Rio is so huge, full and varied that the desire to see and grasp it all in one sweep is almost overpowering. The place to do this is Corcovado Mountain. Here at an altitude of 2,000 feet, the 90-foot mosaic statue of Christ the Redeemer spreads its arms above the city. Mists drift mystically over the near peaks and valleys, and the breathtaking sweep of the harbor, beaches, suburbs and sprawling miles of white towers finally blend into a comprehensible whole.

All this exuberant nature mixed with a sophisticated civilization and seasoned with an undertone of primitive, backgrounds explodes each year, 40 days before Easter, into the world's greatest carnival. It is an unrestrained madness of music, dancing, dazzling costumes, and contagious, more-than-half-pagan merrymaking. The soul of Rio dissolves into a delirious orgy of light, color and sound compounded of black Africa, Indian America, and inscrutable Iberia.

Brazilians are among the warmest and most outgoing of all Latin Americans, quick to search the eyes of the stranger for a sign of friendly response. Cariocas, like most very-big city-dwellers, are inclined to take nothing very seriously. The last revolution, they say, dissolved when it started to rain; the most publicized state of siege a while back was treated as a big holiday during which everyone went to the beach, with only cursory glances at the warships. The army and police are gratifyingly less in evidence in Brazil than in most Latin countries, and the average political crisis ends with both sides joining in a big barbecue.

All this insouciance has its drawbacks. For reasons no one seems to understand fully, economic conditions are terrible, and inflation (170 percent in the past two years) is uncontrolled, though it does benefit the tourist with scores of the lowest prices in the world.

But, capital or no, centuries does not get unabated. And it is typical of Rio that one of the major projects currently in the planning stage is part of the harbor to build — you guessed it — another beach.

Mr., Mrs. W. H. Martin, Thomasburg Residents, Married for 65 Years

One of the longest married couples in Hastings county, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Martin of Thomasburg are quietly celebrating their 65th anniversary today.

It was on February 22nd, back in 1899, that the couple clasped vows at the home of the bride's parents five miles south of Tweed. They have since lived in the vicinity, the past 16 years in the village of Thomasburg.

Mr. Martin was born at Selby in Richmond township while Mrs. Martin, the former Elizabeth Adams, has lived all her life in Hungerford township. Both are 86.

No big celebration is planned for the anniversary, although relatives and close friends will be welcomed today and Sunday.

"We just don't feel up to a big celebration," Mrs. Martin said.

Dozens of anniversary congratulations have been received by the couple, including messages from Prime Minister Lester Pearson, Premier Robarts and local government members.

The day 65 years ago when they were married by Methodist minister D. Balfour, is clearly remembered by the long wedded couple.

More than 100 guests attended the house wedding, some coming by cutter and sleigh and others with buggies.

HONEYMOON BY CUTTER

The couple took a brief honeymoon — by cutter — to Selby and Napanee — and then had to return home by buggy as the sun melted the snow.

Then for the next half century the couple operated their own farm on what is now 37 highway, five miles south of Tweed.

"People have it a lot easier now than we did when we were young," said Mrs. Martin. "But I think we were just as happy."

As a girl she recalls milking as many as 21 cows by hand when the men folk of the family were away threshing.

"They didn't usually get home until long after dark, so the women did the chores", she said.

In contrast threshing bees and hand milking are today almost things of the past. Combines have taken over from threshing machines and modern milking parlors, such as owned by Mr. and Mrs. Martin's grandson, have made milking by hand obsolete.

The couple have one son, Albert Martin, who operates the farm homestead and a daughter, Mrs. Jennie McTaggart of Tweed. There are eight grandchildren.

Fashion Show Discussed At Auxiliary

The February meeting of the Women's Auxiliary to the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Medical Society was held at 23 Fairview Cres., the home of Mrs. Rock Nugent.

The Trenton ladies present were welcomed to the group by the president, Mrs. Ross.

A detailed report of the annual fashion show "Fantasy in Fashions" to be held later this month was given by the convener, Mrs. S. Murphy. Following a discussion of the show refreshments were served.

Community Nursing Registry Hears Report From Director

The annual meeting of the Belleville Community Nursing Registry was held Wednesday evening at the Education Hall, Belleville General Hospital, following a buffet supper.

A large audience listened with interest as Mrs. Ida Campbell, director of the registry, submitted her report, saying:

"Many can look back on 1963 as a year of accomplishment, and we of the Belleville Nursing Registry can reminisce on the completion of twenty years of professional nursing service to Belleville and district."

This field of nursing service is a necessity to all health organizations, and to meet the needs of hospital and community.

The next important objective of the professional registry is to improve and maintain the standards of nursing service by the membership.

ANSWERING SERVICE

This organization provides a 24-hour answering service for the Physician Order of Nurses. "We feel it is a privilege to be associated with this branch of nursing service. Our organization is extended to Miss Dorothy Connor and her efficient staff for the pleasant relationship which has been maintained with these ladies of good will.

"To the Canadian Cancer Society we say 'thank-you'. We are indeed pleased to be of help in helping hand in allocating their calls, and assisting in the community in this worthwhile nursing endeavor."

The organization has not been associated with the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society these last few months, since there has been no physiotherapist to cover the field work in this district. The arthritic patients who are ambulatory now receive their treatment in the nursing department at Belleville General Hospital.

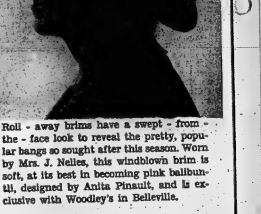
"To our president, Mrs. Marguerite Lucas, and nurses in private practice, most worthy of our confidence, we pay sincere tribute. Your co-operation and faithfulness are most heart warming.

"Appreciation also is extended to the Auxiliary worker, the practical nurses and the Registered Nursing Assistant, who fill many emergency calls. During the past year from threshing machines and modern milking parlors, such as owned by Mr. and Mrs. Martin's grandson, have made milking by hand obsolete.

The couple have one son, Albert Martin, who operates the farm homestead and a daughter, Mrs. Jennie McTaggart of Tweed. There are eight grandchildren.

GUIDANCE GIVEN

"Guidance and direction have been generously given to this organization by Miss Doris Smith, Director of Nursing, B.G.H. and also by the Board of Directors of Belleville Community Nursing Registry. For this we extend our grateful thanks.



"With the new year, of 1964 let us take stock and appraise how far we have advanced toward achieving those things which we value. For many of us indeed the beginning of a new year is a time of reflection, of satisfaction and dissatisfaction with the things we have done and those we have left undone.

"Our aims and objectives of nursing service are a positive, optimistic philosophy, grounded on things worth while and give meaning to life, in this changing world we must have faith in what is being done today and may we be granted the vision coupled with wisdom and courage to face the future".

TORONTO (CP) — The Scarborough board of school trustees has voted to spend $21,000 to send Grade 8 classes on field trips to the country to study nature and science. Five trustees argued the expedition was a waste of money. Trustee William Nobleman however said the trips would give students a greater knowledge of nature than they could ever obtain in a classroom.

MAIL CALL

Question: We've invited two couples to sit at our table at a club dance. They're buying their own meals and I've asked them to our house in advance of the dance for cocktails and dinner. In the meantime, other friends have invited us to their house after the dance for a late supper. I think it would be fun to end the evening this way, but I wonder if it would be permissible to sort of abandon the others at our table when the dance is over. I know neither of the other two couples has been invited to the supper party. They have said nothing about going elsewhere when the dance ends. Do we have any further obligation as far as they are concerned, or may I accept the other invitation with a clear conscience? — Mrs. B. F., Philadelphia, Pa.

Answer: I think you may feel safe in assuming you have no further obligation towards your companions at the dance once it's over. Since they will have been guests for dinner at your home in advance, actually it would be their place to make the arrangements to round out the shank of the evening. Since they've been in her home you're a woman enters a room? I mean when she's home and a friend of her husband's comes in, a group of us had a debate on this the other day. Several girls said it was not necessary for a girl to stand up for another female, regardless of age. Others said they thought that they were not invited, too.

Question: Shouldn't a girl stand up in her home when

The Golden Years
'Attitude of Gratitude' Helps Says Aged, Retired Minister

By THOMAS COLLINS

For every person who finds happiness in retirement through the material things — savings, house, car, status, and such — there apparently are a dozen who find it in the spiritual.

Reflect for a moment and you will find it difficult to recall a dedicated church man who was ever unhappy in his latter years. Maybe some who were a little hungry, and quite a few with patched trousers. But no unhappy ones.

So it is fitting that a retired pastor tell why this is so. He is the Rev. C. J. Coon. He is 75 years old and is pastor emeritus of his church.

"People who retire remind me of the four blind men and the elephant," he says. "One felt the side of the elephant and said it was flat like the side of a barn. Another felt a leg and said the elephant was round like a tree. The third felt an ear and decided the elephant was like a large fan, and the fourth felt the tail and said an elephant was like a rope."

The Golden Years are viewed from as many angles.

"I was raised on a farm and enjoyed farm work. So it was quite natural when I began to think of retirement that I'd like a farm. I thought about 125 acres would be just about what I could care for with pleasure.

VIEWPOINT CHANGES

"But as the years passed and my strength began to wane, I began to cut the acreage. At around 65 I thought 15 to 20 acres would be about right. At 70 I settled for a garden.

"I found that my viewpoint changed with the passing years. My heart really comes so many things can enter the picture as one grows older to make one retire very flexible plan. . ."

Mr. Coon says he and his wife once read an article on "Growing Old Gracefully," and recently his wife asked him if he thought he was growing old that way. "I thought for a moment, then I told her I thought I was growing old gratefully. I am grateful I have lived long enough to get old. I am grateful for good health, a pleasant home, friends and unnumbered blessings — and not least I am grateful for the hope of eternal life."

A lecturer said not long ago that a person in retirement should "Cultivate the attitude of gratitude." Mr. Coon says. And he favors it. "If we would be grateful for our everyday blessings, we could bring sunshine to all within our sphere, and they would be grateful that we live. I am grateful, in my retirement, for our wonderful country, and for the security it has provided for the elderly. I am grateful for my pension from my church. I find the Golden Years are better than I had anticipated, and I am grateful for this also."

HELPS OTHERS

Mr. Coon says that as time passes he senses to a greater degree the importance of preparing for eternal life. He says he is trying to use his influence to help others prepare, and as pastor emeritus of his church he is finding all the work he can do.

"I am deeply sorry," he says, "for those who have arrived at the age, not of Golden Years, but of sorrows. There are those who walk among the shadows, who have so little to be grateful for. May a Divine Hand bring Golden Hope to them as they prepare for the Golden City. And may they be grateful for this hope."

Thus does a retired pastor express his beliefs.

You might look up one of the men of God and have a chat with him, if your retirement is not good. It could prove more meaningful than a $50 boost in your pension.

Five Quebec Residents Held Then Released

LONDON, Ont. (CP) Five Quebec residents, held Friday night by police for questioning after they were arrested following behind a Royal Canadian Navy truck loaded with small arms, were released early today.

Provincial police described the matter as a "coincidence."

"It was just a matter of having to question them," police said. "When their stories checked out, we released them."

He said names of the five persons arrested will not be released.

A man and a woman from one car were released first. Three men from a second car were questioned further by military, provincial police and RCMP officers.

The arms were being transferred in a panel truck from HMCS Hunter, an RCN reserve unit in Windsor to London, apparently as part of the security drive announced Friday by Defence Minister Paul Hellyer in an effort to combat thefts of arms and ammunition from military depots.

His move followed three thefts of arms from Quebec armories in the last three weeks. Mr. Hellyer told the Commons Friday all small arms will be recovered from military armories which can't be given maximum security in "sensitive areas."

Police said a number of foreign registered cars were spotted following the navy trucks on Highway 401 in the Chatham area. Police stopped the two cars near Dutton, some 35 miles west of London, and the five persons were brought to London for questioning.

A car load of navy personnel was following the navy vehicle.

New Murder Charges Laid Against Nazi

— CP from Reuters-AP

FRANKFURT a former adjutant at Auschwitz concentration camp being tried here for wartime atrocities was re-arrested at the end of Friday's session on new murder charges.

The former SS (Nazi Elite Guard) officer, Robert Mulka, was out on bail when placed under arrest.

Chief Prosecutor Hans rossman told the court new witnesses had come forward to testify against Mulka and that a new investigation would be opened.

Court sources said the new charges against Mulka related to machete but to a different part of his activities as adjutant. He refused to give any details.

The sources thought it likely the new charges would be introduced into the current trial of 22 men accused of carrying out mass murders at the Auschwitz camp in Poland during the Second World War.

DECISION POSTPONED

Earlier the defence for Mulka —one of the main defendants in the trial—asked that proceedings against him be stopped because the alleged crimes fell under the statute of limitations. The court postponed a decision on the request.

During Friday's session Dr. Martin Broszat, historian at Munich's Institute of Modern History, said that by 1942, so many concentration camp prisoners were dying that records were no longer kept on the exact number perishing.

Disease alone killed about 300,000 concentration camp prisoners by war's end, he said.

Only about 2.5 per cent of the camp guards—members of the so-called "death's head" regiments — requested transfers, he added.

DELIVER FIRST U.S. WHEAT

ODESSA (AP) The American freighter Exiona arrived in this Soviet Black Sea port Friday with the first cargo of United States wheat for the Soviet Union. The ship sailed from Hoboken, N.J., Jan. 31. Mae Murray Sent Back To Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD (AP) Silent film star Mae Murray, who didn't know where she was when police found her wandering in west St. Louis Thursday, is back in Hollywood.

Her return was hardly triumphant. The 74-year-old former actress was met by only two friends and a few officials of the Motion Picture Relief Fund when she got off a plane at Los Angeles International Airport Friday night.

She was taken to her apartment in Hollywood.

"We hope she will stay here," said William T. Kirk, director of the relief fund. "She wanted to go on to New York because she had an idea somebody there would publish her life story. But her story was published in a book in 1965. She knows no one in New York who will take care of her."

Mrs. St. Louis, Salvation Army Capt. Fred Major said Miss Murray thought she was in New York when police found her in west St. Louis. Major said she had a bus ticket to New York but no money. He said he wouldn't let her continue her bus trip because "she might be lost in the next large city she goes through."

Miss Murray played opposite such stars as Rudolph Valentino and Francis X. Bushman in the 1920s and became a millionaire three times over.

The Salvation Army had to pay a $13.20 hotel bill for her before getting her on a plane for Los Angeles.

Sugar Supplies To Be Adequate In Coming Years

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — The former director of U.S. sugar policy said Friday world sugar consumers can anticipate adequate supplies of sugar at reasonable prices during the coming years.

The prediction was made by Lawrence Myers, chairman of the board of National Molasses Company, a subsidiary of C. Brewer and Company, Ltd., of Honolulu.

Myers, who retired last year after 15 years as director of the United States sugar policy staff in the commerce department, spoke at the Western Candy Conference in Palo Alto.

"The temperate zones, where high wages have tended in the past to check production," he said, "may be more important sources of supply in the future."

Myers said the sugar industry may never again experience "the disastrously low prices of the past," or "excessively high prices."

He noted that world consumers cannot depend upon Cuba to meet the growing demand, since sugar production there now is about half its previous potential.

DEAR HENRY — I am 15 and overweight. I've been on a diet that a friend gave me but it hasn't seemed to help. I can almost hear the boys say "ugh" when they see me. As a result I haven't had many dates.

DESPERATE

DEAR DESPERATE — Get a diet from your doctor and stick to it. In the meantime work on your brains, talents and personality. If you work on your intellect now . . . after a while you'll notice that other things are getting into "shape" too!

HENRY

DEAR HENRY—How would you define the word "nut"?

CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS — A nut is an angry almond.

HENRY

DEAR HENRY — When I'm older I hope to be a politician. I'm going to work for a law making it compulsory for everyone to take a knowledge test, a test that would ask little questions about the election and policies. In the last election I knew more about the leaders and policies than many an older person who could vote.

M. F. (age 16)

DEAR M. F.

I agree!

The people with no opinion
The bumps on the log
The hold of the Dominion
The half in the fog
Or fallout or civil rights
And the pension for the frail
When problems reach new heights
They stir like a pond that's stale!
Asked:
Foreign Aid; less or more?
They complain about the flies.
Asked:
Who they voted for:
"It's the man with the big blue eyes."
—People's awareness and debate . . .
Is the best protection of the democratic state!

HENRY

DEAR HENRY — I like a boy very much and he has asked me to go steady with him. I also have a very good girl friend who thinks that I should choose between him and her.

I have suggested that I go to a dance or to a show with him fewer times but she thinks that I have to choose. I don't want to break up with either of them. What should I do?

VERY TROUBLED

DEAR VERY TROUBLED — Boy friends and girl friends are in different categories. There is not such a thing as choosing between them.

Your problem is not the choosing . . . It is the handling of a jealous girl friend.

Help her with her 'romance' and in every incident that pops up put yourself in the place of your girl friend. Perhaps that way you'll be able to understand her feelings.

Waiting Lists For Hospital Beds Now Rule

TORONTO (CP) Waiting lists for hospital beds are the rule in larger Ontario municipalities, a survey made Friday shows.

Most hospital administrators said there is no bed shortage for emergency cases, but agreed there is a waiting list for other patients. They said that while the situation is not critical, it is also not desirable.

Health Minister Dymond told the legislature Thursday "most cities and towns in Ontario now have an adequate number of beds available for their present population."

Although no accurate account could be given of the number of persons on hospital waiting lists in Metropolitan Toronto, Dr. John B. Neilson, chairman of the Ontario Hospital Services Commission, estimated the figure in the thousands.

The hospital bed shortage, he said, is serious but not critical in Metropolitan Toronto.

KITCHENER SHORT

Hospital officials in Kitchener said the city has 5.3 beds for every 1,000 people, well below the 6.25 beds considered an acceptable level.

In Ottawa, a three - month waiting period is the rule at Civic Hospital although no emergency cases are forced to wait. General Hospital had 406 on a waiting list but gave no waiting time.

Kingston hospital spokesmen said there are waiting lists at both Hotel Dieu and General Hospitals. At Hotel Dieu, urgent cases face a two-week wait and non-urgent cases have to wait two months. The general has a 300-patient waiting list.

The 520-bed Sudbury General Hospital has a waiting period of five months, said administrator Sister Paula.

Victoria Hospital in London reported an average wait for non-emergency cases of three months. St. Joseph's had a six-week waiting period.

Hamilton's St. Joseph's General and Civic Hospital both reported a 10-day waiting period.

Tissues Taken From Stomach Will Be Tested

By SAM MODIANO

ATHENS (Reuters) Tests have been made on tissues removed from the stomach of King Paul of Greece to discover whether he has a malignant disease, it was disclosed here today.

Meanwhile, a hospital bulletin said the 62-year-old monarch, who was operated on Friday for stomach ulcers, had a quiet night and his condition was satisfactory.

However, the king was said to be "extremely exhausted" following his 4½-hour operation at the royal summer residence of Tatoi, 16 miles north of the capital.

Members of the royal family were allowed to visit King Paul at his bedside following the operation.

Assembled at the palace were Queen Frederika and her children, Crown Prince Constantine, Princess Irene and Princess Sophia and the latter's husband, Don Juan Carlos of Asturias, son of the Spanish pretender. Also there was Paul's sister, former Queen Helen of Romania.

Premier George Papandreou cancelled his appointments to be close at hand. Like other Greeks, he was not told about the progress of the operation until it was finished.

Among those on the case were two British specialists, Sir Stanford Cade, former chief consultant surgeon to London's Westminster Hospital, and Edward Grainger Muir, surgeon to the household of Queen Elizabeth. The king also has three Greek doctors.

Thursday night Paul signed a government - drafted decree naming Constantine, 23, as temporary regent.

A Lift for Living

Small Things, Little People Important in Eyes of Christ

By REV. HAROLD R. KOHN

Pliny the Elder, a contemporary of Saint Paul, said of the Romans of his day that when they failed to make a thing beautiful they were sure to make it big. Apparently even Jesus' disciples were caught up in the Roman fascination for bigness. One time as the Master and His disciples left the temple it disciple exclaimed, "Look, Teacher, what wonderful stones and what wonderful buildings!" One translator catches the spirit of the awed one when he has him saying, "What a size these stones and buildings are!" Jesus did not frown upon the magnificence of the temple buildings. Doubtless He rejoiced in such grandeur. But while the disciples were enamoured of sheer bigness, something else had caught Jesus' attention. . . a little thing, a poor woman putting two copper coins in the temple treasury, demonstrating, a sacrificial dedication to a holy cause. Jesus noticed this, and li mpressed Him. To Jesus' mind a sacrifice of two copper coins, when it represented everything a woman owned, was far more notable than a huge stone or a big building.

In Christ's scale of values little things had tremendous worth. When He spoke of a final judgment He told of little people doing little things in loving ways receiving the blessing of the King. However, when the blessed ones were feeding the hungry, giving drink to the thirsty, or lodging to the stranger, or clothing to the naked, or visiting and companionship to the sick and imprisoned, they did not know these ministries were great in Christ's eyes. Love, rather than hope of reward, impelled them. And they did not realise that Christ had any connection with the needs of the people they served. When Christ identified Himself as one who was fed when the hungry were served and as one who was comforted when the sick and imprisoned were called upon, the righteous exclaimed, "Lord, when did we see thee. . . ? and He answered", . . as you did it unto one of the least of these my brethren, you did it to me." So even the blessed ones missed the importance of doing little things for the world's little people. They did not see that little things and little people are great in Christ's eyes.

In a world that worships bigness we need to accept Christ's standard of values. Especially do we need to study and use His high regard for the importance of little things.

Tiny little have enormous influences. They can frustrate or fulfill us. The things that cause us the most irritation are seldom life's catastrophic problems.

But, thank Heaven, small things work for our triumph as well as for our ruin. An ancient Chinese proverb reminds us, "The man who removed the mountain was he who began carrying away the small stones." Often "laths removes mountain" is just that way. The greatest tasks are accomplished little by little, and all who have learned to do big things well have begun by learning to do little things faithfully. The longest walk is taken with single steps.

The man who learns to put his moments to good use need not worry about the outcome of his days or of his life.

The beauties of the visible world greet our minds after travelling over a tiny, fragile pathway, the optic nerve.

The vast universe is composed of sub-microscopic atoms, revealing the Creator's regard for the smallest things.

Well, how about our consciousness of values? Does it take notice of little things like coins and cups of water and brief visits to the needy? Is it becoming more like that of Christ, with a great respect for little things handled in loving ways?

The lineup: 16 NDP and 71 Conservatives voting against 116 Liberals, 12 Creditistes, five Social Credit MPs and Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena).

Defence Minister Hellyer outlined security measures to strip some acres of weapons and keep others under 24-hour guard.

Creditiste Leader Caouette voiced strong criticism of the Canada Pension Plan proposal and opposed sending peacekeeping troops to Cyprus.

Louis-Joseph Pigeon (PC—Joliette - l'Assomption - Montcalm) said Prime Minister Pearson is incompetent and is sabotaging Canadian unity.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) said he is delighted with the high priority the government has given The Canada Pension Plan.

Havana Is Type of Post Made to Order for Mayrand

By FRAN N. MANITZAS

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP)—Canada's new ambassador to Cuba, Leon Mayrand, has a wealth of experience in dealing with Spanish - speaking and Communist governments.

"More than that, Havana is the type of post that's made to order for Mayrand," said a close friend. "He doesn't like the easy jobs."

Mayrand, 58, leaves this month for Cuba after 14 months as ambassador to Argentina, Uruguay and Paraguay. From Havana he will also handle Canada's affairs in Haiti.

He has served previously in Britain, Brazil, the Soviet Union, Palestine, Chile, Laos, Spain and Italy.

One mark of his diplomatic experience is his multilingual fluency — he speaks English, French, Spanish and Russian. And his wife, the former Lidzia Kerstedjian, born in Egypt of Turkish parents, can get along in about 10 languages, a definite asset in her role.

FOUNDED SCHOOL

A native of Montreal, Mayrand went into external affairs 29 years ago armed with a law degree and several years of study at the Free School of Political Science in Paris and the London School of Economics.

In 1938 he founded the school of political science at the University of Ottawa.

Mayrand knows what it's like to work in a Communist country under the most trying conditions. He was charge d'affaires in Moscow in 1945 when Soviet cipher clerk Igor Gouzenko in Ottawa disclosed information that exposed the operations of a Communist espionage ring.

He declines to talk about what happened in Moscow then, just as he avoids discussing his new assignment in another Communist capital. It's understandable in view of the sensitive position of Canada which continues to trade with Cuba in the face of an almost complete American embargo on dealings with the Fidel Castro regime.

'LAY MISSIONARY'

Mayrand tells a story of how two religious aunts originally wanted him to be a missionary.

"When I chose the diplomatic service instead, my aunts were still optimistic. 'Well,' they told me, 'that's good too. You can still be our lay missionary.'"

Any missionary work he has done is probably best reflected in his pragmatic approach to diplomacy — "taking advantage of whatever situation presents itself to bring people closer together."

He has had plenty of opportunity to try out this theory, having served with the UN mission to Palestine in the trying times of 1947 and having been assigned on two occasions as Canada's representative on the international commission in Laos, 1954-55 and 1961-62.

Mayrand is described as a working diplomat, an ambassador who likes to see for himself what's going on.

"I can't tell what is happening somewhere unless I'm there to smell the atmosphere," he told a friend.

The Mayrands have three children—two sons and a daughter. The older son has been studying history of art and archeology in Paris, the daughter is enrolled in a political science course at the Sorbonne, and the younger son is assistant to theatrical director Jean Delannoy in Rome.

Admits Robbing Globe and Mail Of $25,000

NEW YORK (AP) A self-admitted holdup man returned Friday from Southern Rhodesia to face robbery charges rather than—as he put it—have his wife in Quebec City made "miserable" by RCMP questioning about his activities.

Frederick Freeman Leister arrived by plane from London on the final leg of his flight from Salisbury, Southern Rhodesia, and immediately was taken into custody by federal agents.

Earlier this month, police said, Leister confessed to the U.S. consul-general in Salisbury that he had taken part in a $25,000 robbery last Nov. 12 of the Citizens Bank of Maryland in Hillside, Md., near Washington.

Leister also said that on Nov. 22 last, while on parole after serving seven years of a 15-year U.S. sentence for kidnaping, he robbed the Globe and Mail in Toronto of its cash payroll, about $25,000.

Leister said he was working as a newspaper in Salisbury when he decided to give himself up.

He said he teamed up with a policeman to rob the Toronto newspaper office during the height of the excitement over President Kennedy's assassination.

TAKE THE ABC's OF LEARNING

ADD THE ABC's OF DOING

.....AND YOU HAVE THE ABC's OF SUCCESS

Seems like a simple formula. But not every boy has the opportunity to add these two ingredients together.

A newspaperboy does. He gets both sides of the picture, the book end of it and the business end of it. He's learning by doing. And his experience as an independent little merchant, buying, and selling, delivering and collecting, keeping his own books and spending or saving his own money helps him grow inside and outside the classroom.

Every year more and more educators and juvenile authorities are joining the 700,000 parents who say: "Encourage your boy to get a newspaper route."

If you think your son might profit by Newspaper Route Experience, our Circulation Department will be glad to hear from you.

The Greatest Scout of Them All

Baden-Powell: "The Happiest of Men"

Baden - Powell, founding father of the world's Boy Scouts, was one of the few who found the secret of life — eternal youth.

Now, more than two decades since his death, his spirit seems destined to march down the ages — the personal possession of millions of youngsters.

In fact, he is still so much alive inspiration, that 20 years after his death, he has not yet become a legend. He is still too close to the great international organization he created.

This is no accident, for he was by nature one of the most consciously active men of his time.

At an age when most men of the world are already satisfied with their accomplishments, he was only charting the second phase of his career — and the one which made his stake in history.

FOUNDED SCOUTS

By the time he founded the Scout movement in 1907, he was already 50 years old, an imperial hero, high-ranking British Army officer and an accomplished author.

He was one of that particular strain of Englishmen fostered by the Victoria age, when empire signified more than a political design. In Britain it meant an instrument for building a better world and its ideal of service provided the outlet for character qualities.

Born in 1857, Baden-Powell joined a Hussar regiment in 1876—in the halcyon days of imperial service. As a young officer he served on the frontiers of India, Afghanistan, Malta and South Africa—the last being his proving ground.

He distinguished himself in the Zulu and Matabele campaigns, rising through several promotions. It was, however, the war with the Boers that turned him into an Englishman's hero.

MAFEKING SIEGE

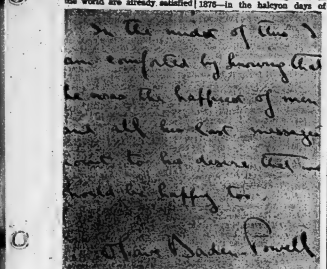
For seven months, commanding a small force under continuous bombardment, he held the town of Mafeking. With the war blundering badly elsewhere, the resistance became a rallying point for the public at home. When reinforcements finally broke through "the relief of Mafeking" became a historic catchphrase. Baden-Powell was a hero.

It was not however, the high-point of his career.

In 1908, at the age of 50, he launched the Boy Scout movement — and its complementary Girl Guide organization was a natural consequence.

The rest is history — and the most significant phase of Baden-Powell's life.

Now an international figure, for another 30 years he devoted his energy and inspiration to the ideal of training the world's children in character and citizenship.



His trademark was his bi-woyish grin, which became as familiar as the scout's hat. There was little doubt he relished life — and sincerely delighted in what he had accomplished.

In a letter to Belleville Guides and Brownies after Baden - Powell's death in 1941, his wife Olave remarked:

"In the midst of this I am confronted by knowing that he was the happiest of men, and all his last messages point to his desire that we should be happy too."

LETTER from Lady Baden-Powell to the Belleville Guides on death of Scout founder in 1941 — now in local archives.

Who's Who, What's What In Local Guide Work

More than 2,400 Girl Guides personnel in the Quinte Area come under the jurisdiction of Mrs. A. M. Haig, who is instructed by Provincial headquarters in Toronto.

The Area Commissioner in turn meets with the Division Commissioners, who are: Mrs. D. Stewart, Belleville; Mrs. F. Dyson, Northumberland; Mrs. D. C. McVicker, Lennox and Addington; Mrs. A. Hamblin, Picton. Such matters as new uniforms, which go on sale in March are brought to their attention.

And in Belleville, Mrs. Stewart relays the latest releases to four District Commissioners: Mrs. L. Brennan, Northeast; Mrs. T. Colden, Southeast; Mrs. H. W. Hunter, West, and Mrs. A. Bannon, Northwest, all of whom are in direct contact with the Guiders in charge of the Rangers, Girl Guides and Brownies. Hence through this pyramid type organization everyone is kept in pace with the times.

Mrs. A. M. Haig

Area Guide news, in the form of a small bi-monthly publication, "The Quinte Link" is compiled and edited by Mrs. R. Settle, public relations advisor for the Area and distributed at no charge to every Cadet, Guider, Commissioner and committee member.

Bookings for both camp-site at Waupoos and Doc Lake are made by Mrs. A. Steenburg, who acts as camp advisor for the Area. Doc Lake is a Provincial camp while Waupoos belongs to the Quinte Area. The 200-acre site purchased in 1960 and is located near Picton.

With a good water front, buildings complete with modern conveniences installed since purchase of the grounds and wooded sections it is ideal for Brownie Pack holidays and trainings, aside from the regular camping trips. To help financially maintain the grounds without too much expense to those using the facilities offered, a small acreage is farmed each year.

The local interest in international travel has created the need for an Area International advisor, the post is now filled by Mrs. Richard Arnott. A former Guide, who has served approximately thirty years in the various phases of Belleville Girl Guide work, finds the international role most interesting.

There are 67 countries with five and a half million members that share the same promise and only recently Cuba had to drop from the membership when the Communistic influence took over, explained Mrs. Arnott in one of her recent talks. Needless to say Mrs. Arnott is a popular speaker, informing the Guides and Brownies of their international ties.

Basic training in the area is conducted twice annually by Mrs. R. Settle and Mrs. G. Walkin. During the October training 16 new leaders qualified for warrants.

Thinking in Millions

They're thinking in millions today around the world!

The fragment photographed at the right — one of the most precious possessions in Belleville Scout and Girl Guide archives — tells why.

From the Chief Guide of the world's packs, Lady Olave Baden-Powell, it is as fresh a reminder today as it was in 1964 why this is a significant day.

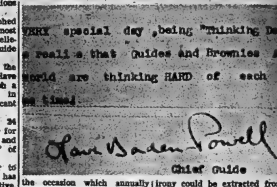
"Thinking Day" is the 24 hours set aside once a year for the millions of Scouts and Guides to simply "think" of each other.

While it doesn't appear to need much effort the idea had a firmly-established objective.

The Boy Scout movement — and later, the Guides —, was the first successful attempt at international organization of peoples in spirit and action. Admittedly, they are only young people — but some day they too become adults.

Since its start by Baden-Powell more than a half-century ago, it thus has probably contributed more to the growing International spirit of our times than it has been credited with.

"Thinking Day" is thus allocaled in the Scout manual as the occasion which annually emphasizes the international spirit of the organization.



It falls every February 22 — and for good reason.

Both Baden-Powell and his wife celebrated their birthdays on that day. When the Scouts and Guides rolled around the world to instant success the twin event seemed a natural date for the idea of Thinking Day.

Baden-Powell himself was dead three years when the letter pictured in part here was written, in 1944 by Lady Baden-Powell. Some bitter irony could be extracted from the fact that mankind was then plunged into the maddest war in its history.

However, other forces had been fostered in the madness— and a year later the United Nations came into being. Its writ still holds good today — 20 years later.

But it is only the first successful international organization with adult membership. The Scouts and the Guides had then been round for nearly 50 years. A fact in international relations which many might think about today!

'In the Best of International Spirits!'

For some, internationalism is a real experience — which takes the youngsters from their hometowns to mingle with companions abroad.

Two such Guides are selected each year from the Quinte district — from a total of 150 for all Ontario.

The girls have to meet strictest of qualifications to win permission for such a trip.

They are selected not on the basis "of those who can afford the trip, but those judged qualified to best represent Canada," says an official.

In the Quinte Area an International Fund has been established to aid every Guide or Ranger with travel expenses.

It is one of the highlights of the internationalism that predominates Scout and Guide work.

Those selected this year from the Quinte area will follow a regular six-week tour program.

Different countries are on the tour map each year. It could be India, it could be England.

A World Friendship Fund — with pennies donated across the globe on Thinking Day — helps maintain international camps at various points on the world map — most of which are booked solid three weeks in advance for international trips.

But international flavors are also directly introduced on the local level.

For instance in Belleville, one Brownie pack has a Dutch leader—Mrs. D. DeBoer.

Two American Girl Scouts also are members of Belleville Guide packs.

Pam and Polly Peschken are the daughters of an United States Air Force captain, posted with the RCAF for two years.

Wearing their distinctive U.S. uniforms they turn out regularly with Belleville packs.

Memory of a Rainy Day

"Let's Choke Them All and Go Home!"

Anyone might have started the first Girl Guide organization in Belleville.

Few could have imbued it with the initial enthusiasm that made it the flourishing force of Guides and Brownies it is today.

For that accomplishment only one woman can take credit —Mrs. M. E. Branscombe.

"I remember when we had our first camp at Moira Lake in tents left by the Boy Scouts," Mrs. Branscombe recalled. "The tents leaked and it rained every day—or almost every night."

After one downpour she was surveying the bedraggled Guides stepping around puddles lacing the camping ground. "I said to the camp mother, "What are we going to do?" and she said "Let's choke them all and go home."

However, such frustration was foreign to the founders of the Belleville packs. In fact, right from the start spirited enthusiasm was the keynote.

BACKROOM WORK

The widow of a city doctor, Mrs. Branscombe still resides at 64 Queen Street, where much of the initial backroom work was done that gave successful impetus to local guide work. She had been active with Guides when she came to Belleville from Picton with Dr. Branscombe in the early 20's.

In 1923 local women, interested in forming Belleville packs, called on Mrs. Branscombe for assistance. The idea was successful from the outset.

"That first night we called for Guides we had enough girls turn up to form four companies", she recalled.

However, that only marked the start of hard work for the organizers. Unfamiliar with the demands of Guide work the leaders trained the pack with the instretion manuals practically open before them. Mrs. Branscombe recollects she and the other women were learning almost simultaneously with their girls.

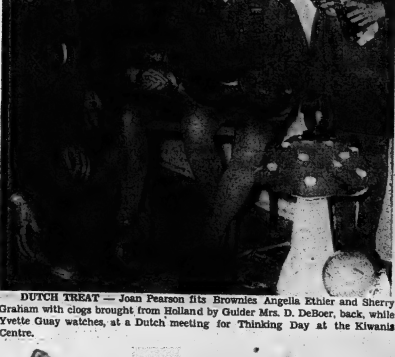
"However, we managed to keep ahead of them", she said.

With the Guides firmly established, Mrs. Branscombe turned her activities to more fundamental organization — recruiting Brownies in 1925 who would later graduate as guides.

In 1925 Mrs. Branscombe was promoted division commissioner and, now although retired, her interest in the work is boundless as ever.

She still keeps in touch with many of what she calls "my girls" now adults — and scattered across the continent.

In retirement too, she proudly wears a title those same girls conferred on her — one which Guide headquarters refuses to recognize.



To her "girls" she is "Grey Owl" — the Wise One!

CARD PARTY

QUEBEC (CP) — Fishing 18 small hours a day for a little-known species that might be called the smallest of northern waters is an experience that Quebec can offer this summer.

The ouananiche, a landlocked salmon that averages five pounds in the prize lists of spring anglers into North American's newest and most fascinating frontier.

Little iron ore towns — the mining developments rout billions from the vast deep of northwestern Quebec, and in the last two years angling camps have begun to appear on the cold rivers.

Ron Thierry, a towering 40-year-old Manitoban who is as handy with a dogsled as he is with an aircraft, discovered the angling possibilities of New Quebec.

He went into the Kenaujuak River 450 miles northeast of here two years ago, seeking a good river for his float-plane and speckled trout, he found ouananiche, whose strong fins and broad tail provide good sawing for the stouter rod.

IDEAL CAMP

An idea of the value Thierry put in the ouananiche is seen in the fact he sold his partnership in a Lake Assinica outfit, whose record catch was 200 trout every year, to set up a new camp on the Kaniujuak.

He flew in supplies and two children, with two Cree guides from the Chibougamau region in a 17-year-old Norseman seaplane from Toronto, David Maloof opened the camp last June and had a party for his mid-September, with the freeze - up starting and snow piling. The visitors had paid an average $325 to fish in the colorful wilderness.

Most were doctors or brokers from the United States. They were joined by Dr. Jean Beetz, Quebec City or Sept-Iles, caught a scheduled flight to Gagnon, a mining town, and then to Schefferville and were flown to the Thierry camp.

They found themselves in a tent-camp of canvas and bamboo mess carpets the earth and trees are shaped like ice-cream cones, with huge spruce for the base.

Average light during the summer is 12 hours daily. Because of the long days, the fish are as vigorous and active in July as they are in May in more southerly waters.

HISTORIC ROUTE

Thierry found one four-inch thick trout only 20 years old — he checked it with forestry experts—and he also found a 10-pounder that weighed a ton, marking the spot where a Cree Indian died in 1905.

The Kaniujuak, once was part of the water route from the Gulf of St. Lawrence to Ungava Bay, 1,000 miles north.

Thierry, who worked once on an Eskimo dogsled route at a Hudson Bay trading post, has the north.

He recently was elected director for the province of Quebec in the Quebec Outfitters' Association, and his venture has resulted in a boom in many other outfitters taking leases in the region.

This year, he says, he may keep the camp open for the caribou season as well as ouananiche.

Thomasburg

THOMASBURG — The Explorers Group enjoyed a Valentine party at their regular meeting held in the school last Thursday evening.

The annual Valentine party at the group was held last Friday when the pupils exchanged Valentines and late, treats were distributed.

A number of ladies from here attended the World Day of Prayer service in Roslin United Church last Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Wilson were Sunday evening guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Martin.

A card party was sponsored by the Rebekah Lodge in the L.O.O.F. hall with 13 tables in play. The winners were Mrs. W. Blakely of Madoc and Mr. Harry Carney of Moneymore. Mrs. Welbourn of Belleville won the lucky plate prize.

After the games, prizes were presented to the following for high scores: Ladies high, Mrs. Arnold Foster, and Mrs. G. Harris; men's high — Mrs. H. Adam (playing on a man's ticket) Mr. W. King; for euchre — ladies high, Mrs. Keith Rabbard, Mrs. Clifford McFaul; men's high, Mr. Frant Root, and Mr. Howard Palmer. Refreshments were served.

Mayor Whitton Denounced As a "Tyrant in Skirts"

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP) — Some French - Canadian leaders believe Ottawa is on a forbidding English-only city where French-speaking people don't feel at home.

What's more, they find that trying to change it can be a frustrating experience.

Not that the proponents of bilingualism in the city administration are giving up. They have only begun to fight and the whole issue is expected to be a part in the civic election next December.

Since Ottawa is the national capital, it is some people feel, to be has a right to get into the discussion. So when a controversy over bilingual traffic signs erupted in December, it spread to the House of Commons and national press — wide attention.

Mayor Charlotte Whitton was denounced as a "tyrant in skirts" by Creditiste MP Gilles Gregoire and defended as a guardian of the law by New Democratic MP Frank Howard.

Lionel Cherrier, then the Liberal justice minister, and Leon Balcer, former Conservative transport minister, both suggested that the whole city hall setup be done away with and replaced by a Washington-style federal district board governing the entire capital area on both sides of the Ottawa River.

IDEA OPPOSED

The royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism has said it will look into the federal district proposal.

Prime Minister Pearson, aware of local opposition to the idea, has indicated, however, the government has no plans for a federal district.

French - Canadians make up 30 per cent of the city's population of 270,000. But when Eastview, Ont., and Hull, Que., and sufficient French-speaking areas are counted, the French-Canadian proportion of the capital area's 430,000 people comes to 40 per cent.

City solicitor Donald Hamilton says he doubts that city council has the power to legislate use of French in the civic administration.

He explained in an interview that the British North America Act in effect makes English the only official language in the nine provinces other than Quebec and that this applies to municipalities since they are creatures of the provinces.

He adds that, in his opinion, any city bylaw or Ontario statute authorizing official use of French would be of doubtful validity. None exists at present.

SIGNS ILLEGAL

In December, asked for his opinion, he said existing bilingual traffic signs in the predominantly French - speaking By ward were erected unlawfully.

City council passed a motion Jan. 8 asking him to report on what steps might be taken to legalize these signs in the city's market area. He is expected to recommend that the issue be passed on to the Ontario highways department for an official directive.

The bilingual signs were purchased and installed at a cost of $15 each after council passed a resolution in August, 1956, quite perfected yet...."

providing for their use. For some unknown reason the necessary bylaw confirming the resolution never came up.

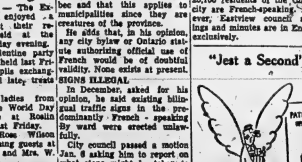
The battle over French in the civic administration was sparked by a bilingual alderman, David Dehler. He introduced motion last fall calling for bilingual signs, tax forms and letterheads as well as bilingual speeches at civic functions.

When the motions came up for debate in mid - December, Mayor Whitton ruled them out of order, holding that English is the only official language in Ottawa.

FORMED ACTION GROUP

Stung by her attitude, a group of 900 French-speaking students marched on city hall Dec. 19 bearing "Down With Charlotte" signs—in both languages, naturally. The protests came not by two controllers in the mayor's absence.

A group of French-Canadian leaders met Jan. 8 and formed La Ligue d'Action pour le Bilinguisme (Bilingual action League) with an initial membership of about 300. Florian Carriere, business manager of l'Union du Canada, a life insurance firm, was named president.



The league met Jan. 15 with the six bilingual members of the 25-seat city council (four are of French origin) to sound out their views.

Mr. Carriere said in an interview his group will participate indirectly in the December election—in which Mayor Whitton is expected to run—endorsing candidates who are sympathetic to bilingualism and opposing those who are not.

"Ottawa is the capital of a bilingual country," he said. "We must prove it with external manifestations, particularly in view of the recent report by Montreal world's fair in 1967, when many visitors will be coming here."

Campaigning in stages, the league plans eventually to press for bilingual signs, tax bills and stationery. It will ask for more bilingual employees at city hall for the convenience of French - speaking ratepayers.

In adjoining Eastview, all these bilingual measures have been in force—on an unofficial basis for many years, reflecting the fact that 65 per cent of the 25,100 residents of the Ontario city are French-speaking. However, Eastview council members and minutes are in English exclusively.

Southern Rhodesia's Dilemma:
Goodby to All That -- But What?

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — The white population of Southern Rhodesia is moving towards its moment of truth over independence—a truth that could loosen the whole Commonwealth.

The choice is whether to seek independence with British approval, which implies a speedy reform of the constitution to give the African majority control of the federal forces, who would have to reject their oath of allegiance.

FALSE TRADITION

Under these terms, the colony could no longer stay in the Commonwealth. If it did the multi-racial family of nations would be ripped apart along color lines. That is unthinkable, is traumatic, not least because the British tradition is precious to the Rhodesian way of life. They pride themselves on their loyalty and war record.

Alternatively, the decision could come now that Prime Minister Winston Field, a conventional man seeking a compromise, has been challenged in a secret caucus meeting by 16 right-wingers led by his Rhodesian Front Party.

Field, in Britain recently for talks with Prime Minister Harold Wilson and Commonwealth leader Sir Alec Douglas-Home, took a hasty flight home on hearing of the Conservative defeat on independence. Informed sources said the party's parliamentary caucus was split down the middle.

Decision point is hastened by the mounting haunting the governing whites in Salisbury:

—The prospect of a Labor victory. Labor would certainly be less sympathetic than the Tories.

—The recent violence in East Africa's newly independent states, proof to white Rhodesians that Africans are not yet ready to govern and that Prime Minister Field's policy of "evolution, not revolution" is the only sensible one.

UNREST AFTER BAN

The hard-shell white supremacists in the government are urging a unilateral declaration. They want to stamp out African political activity now. The mouthpiece of this group is Ian Smith, nationalist leader Joshua Nkomo has put the country "almost in a state of cold war." as Minister of Justice Clifford Dupont put it.

Field's personal position as a comparatively moderate leader is in danger. If more extreme politicians feel his mission to Britain has failed and it is time for a showdown, they may force him to resign and take the issue to the country in a general election.

What does, there is no guarantee that moderation will prevail, despite deep loyalty to the Crown that will recall to the idea of armed rebellion.

The truth is that white Rhodesians are really worried now. Most are free from racial hatred, but are convinced that black majority rule spells ruin. Negro rule leads to chaos.

They are bitter at what they call betrayal by Britain, reneging over the years and are so ultra-sensitive to criticism some even see the BBC as a subversive purveyor of liberal ideas. "Liberal" is generally an insult on Rhodesian lips.

STATUS UNIQUE

Above all, they are sharply conscious of their country's unique status in the Commonwealth. Unlike other colonies, Rhodesia has been self-governing since 1923, independent in all but name. Inevitably, there is strong resentment that virtually African governments being given independence while their own experienced administration is denied it.

Field has said "we are not an emotional people," but emotion does play a part. Attitudes towards Negroes in power have hardened considerably in the last three years. The process began in 1960 when white refugees from the former Belgian Congo staggered off the train in Salisbury with horrific tales of Negro atrocities.

They have hardened on both sides as the two federal members of the federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland gained their black - majority governments.

Until recently life in South pre - Rhodesia had a dream-like quality, despite its tough frontier traditions. It was a world of big skies, servants bearing trays of gin and tonic at "sundowner time," a world where the prospect of any change in the white man seemed naturally ordained.

The harsh voice of African nationalism intruded unpleasantly on this sun-drenched idyll. It meant that most whites disliked Africans—they simply ignored them as people. A local government official revived, observed: "This country is run on the pretence that the native is not here."

Much progress has been made since then—a multi-racial university, hotels and restaurants opened to Africans and even allowed on the sidewalks. Some jobs, notably the railways and the police, have evolved towards equal status.

Doubtless, given time, the frustrations will evolve in the same way to provide, as Field believes, a genuine multi-racial partnership. African elite than those who have hustled to power in the new states. But the tragedy that Southern Rhodesia has few Africans of cabinet calibre. Field has argued that Rhodesia's whites may well be right —but right too late. They have been bedeviled by history, and for them the time is out of joint.

Britons Getting to Know LBJ as Well as Americans

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — Britons are getting to know President Lyndon Johnson almost as well as Americans do, though inevitably from a different angle.

What primarily concerns Britain is how he will shape as leader of the West, a role in which John F. Kennedy had begun to fire Europe's imagination. Like anxious doctors, the political commentators constantly take the new president's pulse, reporting his staff changes, watching him at work, trying to assess his future weight in the world.

Kennedy had achieved a widespread acceptance as "president of all the West" partly because of his own outwardlooking, Europe-jam tempered with Boston Irish saddle Nov. 22. It was generally expected that he would bring the same flair to the presidency as he did to his formidable Senate career, and that hope has not been belied beyond all existing appraisals.

SWIFT AUTHORITY

But nobody foresaw that he would take to it with such swift authority or muscle in so uncompromisingly on civil rights. Liberal opinion is also where, feared that the mastermind of Capitol Hill might find it necessary to make alliances with his fellow-southerners.

In British eyes, the Texan president gained in stature and somehow typecast him in a popular paper as the "good sheriff." But a few inevitably doubts remain.

Some observers feel that in the world context Johnson's attitude to the presidency may lack a certain sureness, that in the way he consider it just another big political job for which he is well-prepared. Kennedy, sensitive to the global power and glory of the role as he saw it, succeeded in projecting a new dimension of leadership which the world now expects from the White House.

There is a general sense of pain in the Washington disappointment at a higher level that Johnson may be "just the wrong size of president needed at this time—great enough in action to cope with the crises, but not great enough in mind to grapple with their causes."

But Observer correspondent Hodgson believes he will be fully as shrewd in foreign affairs as in U.S. politics — as cool, tough and patient with foreigners as with stubborn congressmen.

In Hodgson's view he may even handle Europe and Britain with more success than Kennedy because he is less personally involved—"because he cares less."

And The Times notes approvingly that with Johnson's chief policy adviners including McGeorge Bundy, a former Harvard dean, and State Secretary Dean Rusk, an influentials persists in pressing political shrewdness, scholarly sophistication and experience."

Make Geranium Cuttings Now

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

Did you bring in your geranium plants last fall? If you potted them up, put them in a basket with a shovelful of earth, or hung them up by the roots you will notice that they have developed new growth at the tips.

Now is the time to make cuttings for summer bedding plants. Take the cuttings four to six inches long. Trim off the leaves that would be below the soil surface but leave as as many as you can. The leaves manufacture the food which will make new roots. Allow the cut surface to dry off for half an hour then dip the lower end of the stock in water. Shake off the excess moisture and dip in rooting one, or other rooting hormone powder. Shake off excess powder and plant the cuttings two or three inches deep.

The potting medium can be sterile sand, half peat and half sand, or equal amounts of sand, soil and peat. Or, you can use perlite. This is a white, loose, porous substance which allows developing roots to penetrate readily. It also allows free entry of oxygen which is necessary to the roots growth, it holds moisture well and is sterile.

Bulletins From Birdland

FROM FAR NORTH

This winter the snowfall has been very uneven over all North America. Some places have had more than their customary share, others far less. Those of us living where snow has been scarce have had the opportunity of coming across many flocks of snow buntings. How does this happen?

These birds, members of the large sparrow clan, breed only in the treeless tundra, right up to the Arctic islands. They feed on the limitless insect life found in that land of continuous summer sunshine. There they remain even after moths, mosquitoes and crane flies have finished, changing over from being insect eaters to seed eaters as nights grow longer. Once snow covers up plant life migration becomes necessary.

LARGE FLOCKS

When the topmost seeds disappear under snow, the snow buntings leave home and fly south to more inhabited parts, keeping to localities where snow is not too deep for them to find their favorite seeds. There they suddenly appear in flocks of 20, 73, 150, or even 200 individuals. ...ch for the sake of camouflage they wear small patches of black and tawny brown, no other American songbird shows as much white. Overhead, they look as if they were entirely white. Snow buntings never perch in trees, but cling to weeds or keep to the ground, where, instead of hopping, they walk about. Their mode of travel over a field is spectacular. They play leap frog. Those in the rear of the flock fly low over the backs of those feeding in front of them. Thus there is a "rolling" forward movement of the entire flock. No wonder they are often called snowflakes for they do look like blowing snow.

NEVER SILENT

But whereas snow is silent, snow buntings in flight keep up a continuous, sweet whistle. Even while feeding their twittering, like talking goes on and on. Another call is a tremolo note, sometimes described as "purring". Their song on the breeding grounds is said to be a broken, twittering warble.

The nest, we are told, is made in a crevice among rocks or hidden under vegetation. Moss and earth are used for the bowl. This is well lined, first with sedges, then, as inner lining, feathers, and fur from the Arctic fox. Naturally, this last is especially for the protection of the eggs which are decorated with a wreath of reddish-brown spots to make them inconspicuous.

By the end of March our chance of meeting a flock of snow buntings is over — until next October.

Looking Back On The Past

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—You've blown out a lot of candles on a lot of birthday cakes if you can look back and remember when:

It was a compliment to be called square.

Wives tried to look their best at breakfast, so husbands would go off to work with a pleasant mental picture of them.

A juvenile delinquent was a boy who spent all his coins looking at the naughty-girlie machines in the penny arcade —and then braggéd to all the neighborhood kids how much he knew about women.

If you said a bad word, your mother promptly washed your mouth out with soap instead of worrying about whether she should take you to a psychiatrist.

After calling on his patients in rural areas, the doctor came home with empty pockets but with his buggy loaded with fresh tomatoes, potatoes watermelons and maybe a couple of live chickens.

Make Geranium Cuttings Now

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

Did you bring in your geranium plants last fall? If you potted them up, put them in a basket with a shovelful of earth, or hung them up by the roots you will notice that they have developed new growth at the tips.

Now is the time to make cuttings for summer bedding plants. Take the cuttings four to six inches long. Trim off the leaves that would be below the soil surface but leave on as many as you can. The leaves manufacture the food which will make new roots. Allow the cut surface to dry off for half an hour then dip the lower end of the stock in water. Shake off the excess moisture and dip in rooting powder. Shake off excess powder and plant the cuttings two or three inches deep.

The potting medium can be sterile sand, half peat and half sand, or equal amounts of sand, soil and peat. Or, you can use perlite. This is a white, loose, porous substance which allows developing roots to penetrate readily. It also allows free entry of oxygen which is necessary to the roots growth, it holds moisture well and is sterile.

GOOD CONTAINER

A large bulb pan (shallow clay pot) makes a good container. Place the cuttings around the edge about one inch apart. See that the medium is about but not soggy wet. Set the pot in a good light but not direct sun. It should be warm, 60 to 75 degrees. Direct sun causes the leaves to give off moisture rapidly. Since the plants have no roots to take up moisture they should not be placed in the sun until roots have formed. This will take three weeks usually, or a little more. Keep medium damp, and place in sun when roots have formed.

When the cuttings are placed in the pot conserve the moisture by placing a large polybag over the cuttings and pull down over the pot. This will create a humid atmosphere and promote good growing conditions. The bag allows air to enter but keeps the moisture in.

Once the roots have formed, take the cuttings out of the pot and pot up singly in three inch pots. Keep out of direct sun for a few days until the plants have recovered from the shock of transplanting. A weak solution of Hapidgro or other liquid fertilizer will cushion the shock of moving.

Feed the young plants with half strength fertilizer and grow in sun in a cool window. Cool temperatures and low fertility in the soil will encourage thick, sturdy plants rather than tall spindly ones.

AS WEATHER WARMS

As the weather warms up you can place the plants outdoors in mid-May, in a sheltered place. This can be a cold frame, under an evergreen or other shelter. Harden them off gradually by exposing to early morning or late afternoon sun only. Protect from strong sun, wind and beating rains. Sudden exposure to strong winds or sun burns the tender leaves and sets the plants back weeks in their growth.

A temporary cold frame can be made from a wooden box with top and bottom knocked out. Make a light frame and cover it with plastic and use this as a cover to screen out sun and protect from cold, strong wind, and beating rain.

By the end of May the weather and the plants should be ready for planting into the open ground.

Have you examined your dahlias, cannas, begonias and gladiolas lately to see that they are not drying out, or have not developed some infection? When trouble is noted, take out the affected tubers cut off the diseased parts and dust the cut surface with sulphur. Isolate any infected tubers.

Cannas can be potted up in March to start them into growth.

HODGE PODGE

If "Shaker" Baker of the Picton Intermediates was given a fedora for every hat-trick he has racked up this season, he'd have enough chapeaux to stock a shop. Eight thus far . . . There's no truth in the rumor Peaver is starting a Bobby Hull fan club . . . Fiori Goegan is one of the shining lights on the Kingston Aces entry in the St. Lawrence senior league . . . Ball heads and beards will feature the exhibition game between the City Firemen and the Kingston No-Stars on Wednesday night next. George Woodhouse tells me the smoke-eaters will wear Beatle wigs with the goalie using a guitar instead of a stick . . .

The Belleville Bowl has two tournaments slated for early March. "The Mrs. and Miss" tourney goes on March 7 while the ten-pin battle for "Mr. Belleville Ten Pin" gets under way March 14 . . . My old boxing buddy expert Harry Robinson picks Liston to put Cassius bye-bye in the fifth round . . . Man quotes the Good Book as saying "Thou shalt not injure thine enemy" but the hockey rules have changed all that. However they still adhere to the biblical quotation "An Eye for an Eye . . . " . . .

Frank Mahovlich, Andy Bathgate and Gordie Howe have an authoring newspaper series on "Hockey". Thus far I haven't seen a reference in the "Big M" and Big B" editions on "How to Come out of a Slump."...

The reason some bowling scores are not published is because they are either a week old or the "sender" omits to put the name of the league on the copy. Items of high singles and the triples of a single player forwarded separately will not be published . . .

Jim Rutherford appears to have wrapped up the local Junior "B" Club's Individual scoring crown with his six-goal explosion the other night. He tops his team with 28 goals and 37 assists with one game to play . . . It's that time of the year when playoffs and playdowns hog the limelight in most sport circles, especially hockey, basketball, etc . . . Moira S.S. and Campbellford are expected to be top contenders for the O.S.S.S.A. wrestling crown at the Feb. 29 championships here. The going will be tough, however, with about 15 schools taking part . . . Tonight's big NHL clash between the Hawks and Habs in Montreal is one of three left between the co-leaders prior to playoffs . . .

Several horsemen have phoned or told this department they hope the rocky road travelled by the harness racing division of the Quinte Riding and Driving Club becomes smoother. "We would hate to see the meets in Belleville discontinued" said. "We like racing here. The track could be better and should be fixed up by the powers-that-be" . . .

A world record for a pike caught on a six-pound test line was established by Ed Zaleski in Lake Abitibi a Quebec-Ontario haunt. The big fella was 29 pounds nine ounces. The breaking point of a line like the one used to land the fish is 4.713 pounds . . . Don McNevin tells my a "Saddle Club" has been formed here and has a membership of almost . . . Don is the only deer hunter extant who shot two antlered bucks from the poopdeck of his favorite quarter horse . . .

This city's secondary schools will host the annual COSSA senior basketball championships (boys and gals) in March. The two-city teams likely will meet Monday to seek the local laurel wreaths . . . A teen-age feminine phones to say that when her "pet Elvis" gets through with the Beatles, they'll "flip"...their wigs. Ye Gods No. Four hatcheckers for Beatles!...

After a somewhat rugged season the Belleville Juniors appear to have their full potential working and could cause trouble for somebody in the playoffs. They have come up with brilliant performances in the last two outings that rate them a much better qbah than earlier displays indicated. The six and five goal efforts by Jim Rutherford and Stu Muirhead in the last two games were scoring spics. The boys appear to have found their proper hockey stance and to say the least the timing was perfect. More power to 'em.

Geo. Knudson Shares Lead

CARACAS (AP) — Al Besselink of Philadelphia and George Knudson of Toronto matched five-under-par 65s Friday and finished for the halfway lead in the Caracas Open golf tournament with 36-hole totals of 133.

Besselink, back in tournament competition after a three-year absence, and the sure-putting Knudson are three strokes ahead of Spanish champion Ramon Sota who carded his second successive 68 for 136.

Art Wall of Pocono Manor, Pa., followed an opening round 74 with a course record-tying 66 and shot within five strokes of the leaders at 138.

Knudson had six birdies Friday for a two-round total of 13.

Wilf Homeniuk of Winnipeg carded 73 and 69 for a 142 total. Adrien Bigras of Montreal also got a 142 with 72 and 70. Murray Taylor of Toronto was two points behind with 73 and 69 for 144.

Win After Early-Morning Battle★ ★ ★ ★

Northern Ont. Schoolboy Champions

By Walter Krevenchuk

REGINA (CP) — The Bob Ash rink from Kirkland Lake won the Canadian schoolboy curling championship for Northern Ontario today, defeating New Brunswick 10-8 in the final game of a three-team playoff that carried the competition into the early morning hours.

In a dramatic rally, Bob, his brother Bill, his third, second Terry Armstrong and lead Fred Prier whirled to six consecutive victories, four in a 13th-hour period in the final phases of action, to snatch the Pepsi-Cola Canada Limited Trophy as the final game ended at 3:30 a.m.

Several hundred fans, the survivors of a crowd that numbered 2,500 earlier in the night, were still on hand to cheer the Northern Ontario four's triumph.

Regina—1st add day lead curlition in a three-way tie for first place with New Brunswick and the first Saskatchewan rink, the 18-year history of the schoolboy championships at the end of regular play.

The Ash foursome finished the 11-game round-robin competition Saskatchewan, turning back Alberta 10-6 and Nova Scotia 13-3 to get there. All three leading clubs had 7-3 won-lost records.

FIRST PLAYOFF

In a hurriedly - organized two-game playoff, Tony Richardson's Moncton rink drew a bye, sending the Northerners against Saskatchewan. It was the first playoff in the 13-year history of the schoolboy championships at the end of regular play.

The Ash rink crushed Saskatchewan 11-3 in eight ends and took the ice again, just 30 minutes later against the well-rested Maritimers, who had two byes during the long day's play.

Ash and company finished with nine victories and three defeats. Behind them were Saskatchewan and New Brunswick with seven wins and four losses. Ontario, British Columbia and Alberta, all in fifth place, had four losses. Manitoba and Quebec, with 5-5 records, Newfoundland, with six wins and seven losses, Prince Edward Island, two-victories and eight defeats, and Nova Scotia, one win and nine losses.

BOTH CONCEDE

Dredging up brilliant draw and knockout form, the experienced Northern Ontario rink forced Fred Fennell's New Moose Jaw, Sask., four and the Richardson quartet to concede playoff defeat.

Saskatchewan threw in the towel after eight ends and New Brunswick after five.

Kirkland Lake's victory brought Northern Ontario its second schoolboy title and the fourth for an Eastern rink. Western provinces have won 11 times, paced by Saskatchewan with eight titles.

Appearing more effective as the night wore on, the Ash rink pulled away from a 3-3 tie with Saskatchewan after four ends, counting two deuces, a one and a three. Frank Bailey's Moose Jaw foursome conceded defeat after registering 11 clean misses in 64 shots.

New Brunswick counted one in its opening end but felt belated rapidity thereafter, it was 5-1 after three ends, 9-2 after six and the Maritimers called it a night when Ash blanked the ninth end after swapping single counters in the previous two.

One of the last-day features was the collapse of the John Harris rink from Owen Sound, Ont., which went from the last two rounds in first place, lost 8-4 to Saskatchewan and then blew its chance for a playoff berth by dropping an 11-8 decision to Quebec.

In other round-robin matches, Quebec downed Prince Edward Island 12-9, British Columbia crushed Manitoba 12-6 and Newfoundland outlasted Nova Scotia 14-12. In the 11th round New Brunswick trounced Prince Edward Island 14-3, Manitoba whipped Newfoundland 10-5 and Saskatchewan needed an extra end to nip B.C. 11-10.

Enthusiasm, Excitement Missing
Fight Financial 'Bust' At Gate?

◆ MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Sonny Liston growled, Cassius Clay knocked off another sonnet and the promoters sweated today over the massive disinterest in Tuesday night's heavyweight championship fight at Convention Hall.

It threatens to be a financial turkey at the gate, saved by a record closed circuit television network of 800 locations.

"We've got problems, but hope things pick up," said Bill MacDonald, paunchy self-made millionaire who put up a $625,000 guarantee for the fight between the bull - strong champion Liller, Liston, and the poem-sprouting challenger from Louisville.

The electric excitement that normally accompanies heavyweight championships was non-existent. There were small crowds and big yawns even at the fighters training sessions. I expcid it to b much out of the widespread lack of enthusiasm is understandable. Few expected it to be much of a fight.

EASY WINS

Liston has won his last three fights, two with Floyd Patterson and one with Germany's Alfred Westphal, in the first round and all in the total of little more than six minutes.

Clay has shown no indication despite his remarkable speed and babbling tongue that he is likely to last any longer than his immediate predecessors.

Liston is 7-1 favorite and yesterday and confined himself to bag-punching, shadow - boxing and rope-skipping Friday.

His post-workout news conference was brief and followed the usual line.

"I have trained harder for this fight than any of my others," the 215-pound champion said. "I am sharper than in either of my fights with Patterson.

'IT'S A CINCH'

"I feel it's a cinch but I won't be taking Clay too lightly. I'll let them fight on a long stretcher, I'll be watching out for him. My aim is to send him out on a stretcher."

Clay finished his boxing program with a much better performance than the day before when he was tagged by Cody Jones, a towering spar mate.

During the workout, Clay a picture fighter at 6-3 and 215 pounds, moved about the ring like a ballet dancer, his left jabs flicking out with lightning speed and his left hooks landing with good power. He went two rounds with Dave Bailey, a 195-pounder from Philadelphia, and two with Jones.

"That's my strategy," Cassius said after the workout, "to hit and not be hit."

Then he passed out a 14-line prediction in verse, which described the fight and ended with these words:

Yes, the crowd did not dream, when they laid down their money,

"That they would see a total eclipse of the Sonny."

Fort Wayne Beaten By Zephyrs 7-3

By the Canadian Press

Muskegon Zephyrs may still be shy of a playoff position, but they took the right step Friday night by knocking off the league leading Fort Wayne Kometa 7-3 in International Hockey League action.

The win moved the Zephyrs to within four points of idle Windsor Bulldogs as Des Moines Oak Leafs blanked Port Huron Flags 2-0 and Toledo Blades scored a come-from-behind 4-3 win over Chatham Maroons.

Joe Kastelic scored three goals for Zephyrs as they outscored the visiting Kometa 4-1 in the last period to put the game out of reach. Don McLeod, Rod Pagois, Moose Lollo and Lyle Porter also tallied for Muskegon.

Bobby Gilles, Norm Waslawski and Eddie Long scored for Fort Wayne.

Burloaks Clip Regals Win String

GUELPH (CP)—Welland Burloaks consolidated their hold on third place in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior standings Friday with a 3-1 victory over fourth - place Guelph Regals.

The loss halted a Guelph winning streak at four straight and left the Regals a single point ahead of fifth-place Oakville Oaks. Both Guelph and Oakville have three games remaining.

Defenceman Bob Hall tallied two of the Burloaks goals, with the other coming off the stick of Vance Miller.

Hall turned in a standout performance in the Guelph cage as Welland outshot Guelph 35-26.

Flyers Shade Canadiens
Marlies Drub Red Wings

By the Canadian Press

Toronto Marlboros stretched their lead in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series to four points with a 9-1 drubbing of Hamilton Red Wings while the second-place Montreal Junior Canadiens lost 4-3 to Niagara Falls Flyers.

In other action, the high-flying St. Catharines Black Hawks were jolted 6-5 by the lowly Kitchener Rangers.

Marlboros scored six unanswered goals in the last two periods to completely demoralize the hapless Red Wings.

Midway through the first period Hamilton netminder Allan Frank was cut over the eye while attempting to stop Toronto's Pete Stemkowski. He was bounced back to the Marlboro forward and he flicked it into the net.

SCORES TWICE

The goal was one of two for Stemkowski. Wayne Carleton Frank was cut over the eye while attempting to stop Toronto's Pete Stemkowski. He was bounced back to the Marlboro forward and he flicked it into the net.

SCORES TWICE

The goal was one of two for Stemkowski. Wayne Carleton and Jim McKenny, Rod Seiling, Andy Champagne and Ron Ellis, Peter Loveless scored the Red Wing goal.

Captain Ron Shock notched his 35th goal of the season and added two assists as the Flyers upset the high-scoring Canadiens. Dave Armstrong, Brian Bradley and Bill Goldsworthy also scored Niagara Falls' goals.

Andre Droiet scored twice for Montreal, with the third going to Jean Claude Heberg.

Trevor Fahey's second goal of the night with less than four minutes remaining launched Kitchener to its seventh win of the season.

Dennis Huff's three-goal effort, including two 11 seconds apart in the third period, had sparked Black Hawks in a come-from-behind bid to tie the game. Ron Hodge scored the other two St. Catharines' goals.

Other Kitchener goals were by Sandy Fitzpatrick, Gary Sabourin, Pete Brennan and Dave Sheen.

SET FOR TOUR

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Maroons leave Feb. 26 for a 12-game exhibition hockey tour of Germany, Switzerland and Czechoslovakia. First game will be Feb. 28 in Munich. The Maroons, who have no league of their own but play a partial schedule in the Saskatchewan Senior League, return March 21.

Snead Leads Senior Golf

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP)—Sam Snead whacked out a four-under-par 68 in Friday's second round of the PGA Seniors golf tournament and boosted his lead to three strokes.

With a 36-hole total of 138, nine-under-par, Snead increased his margin over Leland Duke Gibson from one to three strokes.

In his first venture in the seniors field, the 51-year-old Snead seemed just about to get a lock on the teacher trophy the $2,500 first prize, and the trip overseas to play the British senior champ for the world title.

Other Canadians further down the list were: Andre Gagnier, Montreal, 74-72—146; Henry Mehlenbacher, Hamilton 70-77 — Norm Hunt, Montreal, 73-78—151; and Ken Duggan, Toronto, 76-75—157.

HITS REF, GOES TO JAIL

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP)—Soccer player Tony Catanis will spend 30 days in jail for striking a referee. The term was imposed in court Friday with no alternative of a fine. "It's about time some of the so-called sportsmen showed an example of sportsmanship," said Magistrate A. D. Pool. Catanis, 21, was found guilty of assault.

The warriors wing was their eighth of the season against three losses while the Redmen from Montreal were absorbing their 11th straight setback in league play.

Jerry Raphael hooped 25 points in the Waterloo victory while Bob Pando and Dick Aldridge scored 16 and 15 points respectively. Al Raisbeck had Queen's top effort with 19 points.

Hawks, Habs Clash Tonight In Big One

Bruins At Detroit

By MARVEN MOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Hockey's version of Russian roulette is the penalty shot. On one side you have a man with the puck and an unlimited stretch of ice. On the other, a goalkeeper with his oversize stick and gloves and whatever reflexes he has at his disposal.

National Hockey League rules instruct the referee to set the stage for the drama anytime an attacker is fouled from behind when he has a reasonable chance to score.

It's a delicate call for the officials and one has seen fit to enforce it this season since Jan. 12.

Up to that point, the High Noon climax was invoked eight times, with boosts exactly even. Four of the sharpshooters outguessed the goalkeeper and another four were thwarted.

BOWER UNBEATEN

For what it's worth, Johnny Bower of Toronto Maple Leafs is the only finisher with a perfect record. He outfoxed Tommy Williams of Boston Bruins Dec. 14. The only time he was called on to face the ordeal.

Put Glenn Hall of Chicago Black Hawks in the first division. Doug Barkley of Detroit Red Wings beat him Nov. 30 but he subsequently foiled Forbes Kennedy of Boston and Bobby Rousseau of Montreal Canadiens.

Third place belongs to Charlie Hodge of Montreal, who outguessed former teammate Don Marshall of New York Rangers Nov. 3 but couldn't cope with Boston's Leo Boivin two months later.

The booby prize belongs to Detroit's Terry Sawchuk, beaten by Rod Gilbert of the Rangers Nov. 27, and Don Simmons, Boston's standin at Toronto, who fanned on an effort by Claude LaForge of the Red Wings Dec. 8, Jacques Plante of New York and Ed Johnston of Boston haven't been tested this season.

SHOT MAKES COMEBACK

The penalty shot has been on the books for some time, but it was two years ago that the word was passed quietly to the officials that its enforcement might help to spice up action at the NHL. Since then, the aggrieved sharpshooters have been increasing.

Only four out of 12 brought virtue its reward in the 1961-3 season but more than one-third of 10 found the mark.

Two without the penalty shot, there'll be plenty to spare at Montreal tonight when Chicago tackles the Canadiens with first place at stake. The Bruins travel to Detroit for an afternoon game while New York opens a home-and-home series with the Leafs which concludes Sunday night when the Bruins move to Chicago and Montreal plays at Detroit.

Muirhead Brilliant In 9-2 Victory

B's Defeat Trenton Juveniles

By GARRY ALEXANDER
(Staff Sportswriter)

Belleville "B"s sparked by Stu Muirhead's tremendous scoring performance, ended the Trenton Legion Juveniles unbeatable reputation here last night by lacing the young visitors by a 9-2 score.

Muirhead showed no after effects of his recent leg operation as he triggered five goals and assisted on the other four for a terrific nine point total. He got able assistance from Jim Rutherford, with two goals and five assists and Grant Hagerman, with two more goals and helped on one more. The line had a total of 19 scoring points. Ted Rowland earned two assists and Bobby Boyle one.

The nine winners led 6-1 after one period and 8-1 going into the third.

There were 12 penalties in the contest, sewed going to Belleville as tempers threatened to get away at times.

Bob Moon in the winner's nets, had no chance on the two that got past and aided by the other goals when the, visitors did get the puck away from Muirhead and company.

Belleville carried the play from the first and Muirhead and mates peppered Trenton's second-string goalie, Wayne Hagerman with a wicked barrage of shots, never letting the visitors get untracked.

Hagerman got the first goal on Muirhead's pessoot after 48 seconds of play. Rutherford tipped in Rowland's blueline blast at 3.36 and Muirhead got his first with a solo effort down a man at 14.21. After Hagerman made it 4-0 seconds later, Terry Hutchison got in uncovered off Garrett's pass for a 4-1 score at 15.50. Belleville was short a man on the play. Muirhead got another powerplay goal at 17.09, and he got his fifth with a third goal in the next minute.

Boozer stopped a lot of rubber in the second heat but Muirhead at .34 and 8.08 made it 8-1.

Play was rough in spots although Bill Lang and Jim Shoemaker had their periods only penalties when they tangled for seven minutes each at 12.

Muirhead got his 9th consecutive point, assisting as Rutherford made it 9-1 early in the third. Bob Barnett got that back, aided by Jim Lange and Jim Boon at 7.55, to end the scoring at 9-2.

DOUG MEAGHER
By Bradley Mann
(St. Michael's)

BARBARA PRENTICE
(Albert College)

Agility, speed and coordination are not the only factors which contribute to being an all round school athlete. Perseverance, good sportsmanship, and the will to win, plus a high scholastic standing are what really produce championship calibre. Doug Meagher is one such individual.

At fifteen, Doug has already acquired for himself a most impressive record of sports achievements. He has contributed to squirt, peewee, bantam and midget hockey; being on two championship and one all-star teams. Besides this, there is his baseball record which shows a championship and two all-star teams to his credit.

Doug has played bantam, junior and (although it was under unusual circumstances) senior basketball and senior football for S.M.A. and Nicholson Collegiate. It was in 1963 that he proved his ability to play "first string" in his first year at the senior sports and kept both positions despite the fact that he was rookie.

To round out his sports achievements he is an avid bowler, swimmer and tennis player and he enjoys his chance to water ski in the summer months.

Agility, speed and coordination are not the only factors which contribute to being an all round school athlete. Perseverance, good sportsmanship, and the will to win, plus a high scholastic standing are what really produce championship calibre. Doug Meagher is one such individual.

At fifteen, Doug has already acquired for himself a most impressive record of sports achievements. He has contributed to squirt, peewee, bantam and midget hockey; being on two championship and one all-star teams. Besides this, there is his baseball record which shows a championship and two all-star teams to his credit.

Doug has played bantam, junior and (although it was under unusual circumstances) senior basketball and senior football for S.M.A. and Nicholson Collegiate. It was in 1963 that he proved his ability to play "first string" in his first year at the senior sports and kept both positions despite the fact that he was a rookie.

To round out his sports achievements he is an avid bowler, swimmer and tennis player and he enjoys his chance to water ski in the summer months.

Barbara is gaining experience as a rated referee for girls' basketball in the Bay of Quinte district this season.

After completion of Grade 13 Barbara plans to attend the University of Toronto in the Physical and Health Education department with the ultimate aim of teaching this course.

WHITE BARON DIES

LONDON (AP)—Baron Alexander Meyendorff, 94, vice-president of the Russian Duma (parliament) before the Bolshevik revolution of 1917, Thursday. Meyendorff, a Baltic nobleman, constitutional monarchist and liberal, tried to promote a negotiated peace to pull Russia out of the First World War. Failing in this, he later moved to England.

Umpires Vote 9-1 For Ejection

Finley On Verge Of Baseball Toss-Out

By BOB HOOBING

BOSTON (AP) — Charles O. Finley, who confidently predicted he'd remain the owner of Kansas City Athletics, is on the verge of being thumbed out of baseball.

The umpires in this unprecedented American League baitle are his nine fellow club executives who began ejection proceedings with a 9-to-1 vote Friday.

Finley and his franchise may be parted within a week to 10 days.

That's how long it is estimated the board of directors will need to set up a date and site for a general meeting which would consider a vote upon the termination of Finley's league association.

Finley, usually outspoken, stood silent after the meeting while Louis Nizer, his lawyer, read a statement which said the owner would await the outcome of the ouster meeting "and make an appropriate statement at that time."

Previously, Finley had threatened legal action if the league took away his franchise.

COMPLICATED ROUTE

A league spokesman termed it a "very complicated legal procedure," but here is the essence of what will happen, assuming the league escorts Finley all the way down the path to disfranchisement:

1. The league will take over operation of the Kansas City team and appoint a sort of overseer "pro tem.

2. The league would negotiate a lease with Kansas City for Municipal Stadium, the deadlocked issue on which Finley lost the battle, if not the war. He would take nothing but a two-year lease, city officials wanted at least four.

3. The league will conduct the sale of the club when suitable buyers are found.

4. Proceeds of the sale—minus league expenses in running the club in the interim period and related costs—will go to Finley.

These moves are authorized by the reorganization agreement and the constitution of the league.

Although the action is new in American League annals, Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, former iron-fisted baseball commissioner, struck at least twice in the National League.

Landis ended William D. Cox's brief ownership of Philadelphia Phillies in 1943 when a latter admitted gambling on his own team. In the late 1920s, Landis read C. F. Adams, part owner of Boston Braves, out of the league. Adams also was connected with Suffolk Downs Race Track and Landis ruled no man could associate with baseball and horse racing at the same time.

Away They Go, Feb. 29

Anglers Ready For Trout

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's 1964 inland fishing season opens in earnest next Saturday—the earliest ever. It will continue until dusk on Nov. 30, however.

On Feb. 29 ardent anglers in eastern Ontario and some parts of northern Ontario will cut holes in ice-bond lakes, rivers and streams in search of elusive, hard-biting trout—speckled, brown, rainbow, steelhead and Kamloops. Fishing ends Sunday, April 15.

As an experiment the lands and fish and game department last year started speckled and brown trout fishing on March 1 instead of April 15 at 13 Ontario Valley countries.

A departmental official says catches were stepped and there was no depletion in the fish population. As a result rainbow, steelhead and Kamloops were added and the territory extended to include a Northern district.

The northern section, some of which includes the territorial districts of Cochrane and Timiskaming and parts of the districts of Sudbury and Algoma- Many of the isolated lakes and rivers are accessible by air and may attract United States as well as Canadian fishermen.

TROUT OPENS MAY 1

In other reas this year the opening for trout fishing is Friday, May 1. The closing varies from Sept. 15 to Nov. 30.

There will be earlier pickerel fishing in souther Ontario, too. Angling will start May 9, a week earlier than in previous years, and on May 30, 1965, to permit spawning. The area involved is south of a line starting at Pembroke through Algonquin Park and across the north boundary of Muskoka County to Georgian Bay. The department says the second Saturday in May will be a regular starting date in future.

Most parts of Lanark and Leeds Counties in eastern Ontario also begin pickerel fishing May 9 with end of fishing Feb. 28.

Pickerel fishing starts in the Bay of Quinte area May 1, and March 31. There is no closed season on the Great Lakes- In the area north of the Pembroke-Algonquin Park lines the opening is the third Saturday in May, May 16, and the close April 14.

Dates for bass fishing remain much the same — Wednesday, July 1, to Nov. 30. However, the department has agreed to a request by local conservation associations in Lanark and Leeds that most fishing end Thursday, Oct. 15, the usual closing date until last year.

Minor Hockey

Three exhibition games in the Peewee division was the extent of the Belleville Minor Hockey Association's action at Memorial Arena last night.

Game played in Bantam and Peewee groupings this morning are also of the exhibition type since most of the players are in Kingston for O.M.H.A. playdowns.

Maroons whitewashed the Rangers 4-0 in a one-man scoring display. Jim Meagher potted all four Maroon goals. Ken Cochrane had one assist.

Maes nipped the Bruins 3-1. Dennis MacCormick scored two goals and A. Wilson one for the Maes. C. Powell had two assists, M. Geegan and S. Reid one each. R. Bunnett fired the Bruins' goal, assisted by D. Andrews.

Leaside whipped the Generals 11-2, sparked by D. Robert's four goals an ditwo assists. J. Cass had three goals, C. Adams two, M. Truisich one and two one each. P. Noble and W. Farrell had three assists apiece. Sprackett and Truaisch one H. Willms and Murray were the goal-getters for Generals. D. Rust and Poremea assisting.

RUSSIAN SETS RECORD

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Soviet student Vyacheslav Kozlov broke the world weightlifting record for the middleweight press Friday with a lift of 323 pounds.

Will Ask For Western Officials

EDMONTON (CP) — Art Potter of Edmonton, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, says Canada should not compete in further world hockey tournaments unless at least four North American referees are used.

Potter said in an interview Friday he plans to make such a recommendation to the next CAHA annual meeting.

"The refereeing in Austria this year was atrocious."

He said certain modifications will have to be made in the way Canada selects its team because the key to the problem is having a good coach and a good manager.

Potter would not say whether Rev. David Bauer would coach the Canadian team again in 1965. It has been reported that Father Bauer plans to give up hockey and devote more time to teaching at the University of British Columbia.

TOTTENHAM BUYS BROWN

LONDON (AP) — Tottenham Hotspur, leading club in the English Soccer Leagues first division and the defending European Cup champion, purchased Laurie Brown, a halfback, from Arsenal Friday for $112,000. The Spurs' defence has been riddled by injuries since Christmas.

GORDIE HOWE'S HOCKEY

By GORDIE HOWE

My advice to hockey players in general is never to argue with the referee.

It slows up the game, spoiling it for the spectators. And it can detract from a player's performance, if he gets wrought up and forgets to do the job at hand.

Any allowing only the captain and the alternate captains to discuss a decision with the referee, the National Hockey League has cut down these useless arguments.

Players are restraining linemen around the fence by the penalty timekeeper keeping the players in the box while the referee is reporting penalties, has helped cut down needless discussion.

However, players do argue on occasion about the judgment of a referee's call. While they're arguing, they're looking ahead.

Maybe the same thing might happen again. Often they do seem to run in cycles.

But they shouldn't. They should occur and the referee's ear has been baited long enough, he might think it was a bonehead call. Maybe he was wrong, maybe he wasn't. After all, he calls them as he sees them.

Once he has made a judgment call, he's never going to change his mind.

Frank Udvari, the dean of National Hockey League referees, says they call "Chinese water torture system."

He's wise to it. He says he pays no attention.

However, I have seen a few players arguing about where a faceoff should be held result in an official changing his mind.

This wasn't a matter of a judgement call, but a question of fact, whose stick touched the puck last.

Such a thing as a faceoff can make a big difference, whether the faceoff takes place right by your net, or back by the blue lines where it'll give your centreman a chance to dump it out of your zone.

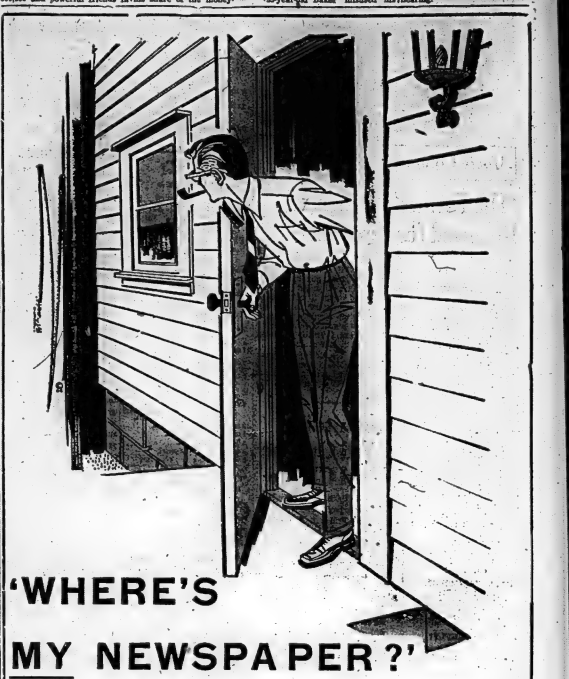
Baker Pictured As Borrower Of Small Loans



WASHINGTON (AP) — Bobby Baker, who a year ago claimed a net worth of more than $2,000,000 and powerful friends in the Senate, was pictured Friday as a borrower of small sums totalling about $1,000 in the last couple of months.

The testimony came from one of Baker's business associates, Fred B. Black Jr., who said he held a block of Tulsa bank stock recommended by the late multimillionaire Senator Robert S. Kerr (Dem. Okla.) for Baker, but that Baker never produced his share of the money.

Black told the Senate rules committee at a closed session last Monday that he borrowed $175,000 to buy6,400 shares of stock in the Farmers and Merchants State Bank in Tulsa after Kerr told him it would be "a fine investment."

The committee, which is seeking to determine whether the 35-year-old Baker misused his official position while serving as secretary to the Senate's Democratic majority, released Black's testimony Friday.

Baker, who resigned under fire last Oct. 7, was subpoenaed before a closed session last Wednesday and is due to reappear before the committee next Tuesday, his time at an open hearing.

'WHERE'S MY NEWSPAPER?'

When a newspaper is missing more often than not, a man will say, "Where's my newspaper?" "My," not "the"! You've heard him say many times: "Now, my newspaper said . . ." "I read in my paper . . . "

A man's possessive about his newspaper. He takes pride in it. He gloats when his newspaper praises his favorite political candidate or sports team. Or he groans when his newspaper differs with his choice of personalities or issues. He'll even write the editor when he feels strongly about a difference of opinion. And, his wife feels just about the same. She looks forward to reading her pet features. Missing out on some ad or choice item of local news could "ruin" her shopping trip or leave her feeling left out during the chitchat over the bridge table.

Both men and women want their newspaper. In fact, they insist on it. They are sorely disappointed and disturbed when their newspaper isn't on the front step when they want it. Ask any carrier boy. He can tell you, because he hears about it if a delivery is late or missed.

This loyalty to a favorite newspaper didn't just happen. It came about because the newspaper is localized to meet a particular want and fill a definite need.

And, because the newspaper is viewed as a necessary companion and source of information, it makes a big difference in the lives of people of all ages, of all faiths and political preferences, of all levels of income and education.

'The Farmer's Daughter' Renewed for Next Year

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Katie made it. The Farmer's Daughter has been renewed for next television season. The oddsmakers said no show starring a woman could succeed in today's television market, unless she could play it for laughs like a Lucy or a Hazel.

Yet The Farmer's Daughter, starring Inger Stevens, was recently picked up for the second season, heathered yet another handicap of suffering a mid-season switch from Friday to Wednesday night.

"I must admit I'm a little proud that we did it," said the outspoken Swede. "I don't believe anyone really thought that we would last beyond 13 weeks when we first went on the air, and very little was done to help us. All of which proves that if you believe in what you're doing and work hard, there is a chance you can succeed."

Inger didn't realize just how successful the series was until she went to St. Paul recently for the world premiere. Early reports that 200,000 people turned out for the torchlight parade, by "Ski" the festival crowd in the crafwet's history.

"I visited a lot of children in hospitals, they all watched the show," she said. "I was amazed."

MARRIAGE LIKELY?

The question she was asked most often was: is Katie going to marry the congressman (played by William Windom) for whose sons she is governess?

"I don't know, but I would think so," she said. "After all, they are a perfect congressional and if they don't get married after a year or more, people will talk."

And what about marriage for Inger Stevens, girl bachelor? "Yes, I want to be married," she said, "but it will take a very understanding man to put up with my schedule. I have to be up at 5 a.m. to leave for the studio, and I usually don't get home until 8:30 at night.

"Social life during the week is impossible. I can keep up this working schedule if I get enough sleep. If I don't, then I'm in trouble."

Manitoba Will Oppose Curl Clause

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba Curling Association announced Friday it will oppose the main clause of a rules-of-eligibility brief to be submitted to the Dominion Curling Association by an association committee.

The Manitoba association said in a prepared statement its delegates at the annual DCA meeting in Charlottetown next month will approve all points of the brief except one which sets a $250 - a - curler or $1,000 - a - rink limit on entries in DCA competitions.

The brief is aimed at barring professionals from organized curling in Canada. If it is adopted in full, any curler participating in a competition in which first prize is more than $250 will be ineligible for DCA-sanctioned competition.

More Comedy in the Offing For TV Programs Next Fall

By DAVE PIKE

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's two television networks are already deciding what programs you will be seeing next fall and winter. And while it's too early to detect a pattern, there are hints that an extra helping of humor may be served.

Both the CBC and CTV have a pretty good idea by now of next season's lineup of Canadian - produced programs. They've been working on this part of their planning since November or December.

The big question now is what programs they will pick up from U.S. producers.

About 40 pilot—single sample shows—from producers in the hope of selling an entire series to a network—have been made in Hollywood in recent months. Between 20 and 25 will be picked up by the three major U.S. networks.

Both CBC and CTV send their programmers out to Hollywood each year about this time to inspect the output. CTV men flew south in mid-February and CBC programmers will leave early in March.

Both networks expect to announce their fall-winter schedules sometime between mid-April and mid-May.

FORE COMEDY

Doug Nixon, CBC English-language supervising director, won't predict how the season will shape up except to say he thinks it needs comedy.

Arthur Weinthal, one of CTV's program producers, says he too can see an increased emphasis on situation comedies and sexapist adventure. Gunslingers and doctors have had their day, he suggests.

Of talking U.S.-produced series the networks are understandably influenced by what the U.S. audience chooses, the point being that a series hasn't any real hope of success unless NBC, ABC or CBS picks it up.

"We're at the mercy of the U.S. networks," says Weinthal. "A success there is a success here. Ask the viewer in Windsor and the viewer in Toledo and you'll find they are very much alike."

"We choose our shows very carefully and our first attention is to the Canadian shows. we are going to do," says CBC's Nixon. "We can't choose American shows too early because we have to wait for the American networks to make up their minds about what they're going to use. Then we choose on the basis of what will give variety and balance to our shows, as well as what are strong-looking one."

The requirement that TV programming have at least 55 per cent Canadian content is "the biggest factor in our lives," says Weinthal, estimating that CTV is close to the 55-per-cent figure. CBC figures theirs is around 60 per cent.

CTV is currently negotiating with U.S. producers for financial backing in producing a few series in Canada for world-wide distribution as a means of helping meet the Canadian-content rule.

One of the dangers both networks face when they contract for a U.S. series is that it might be dropped by the U.S. network part way during the season. When that happens the Canadian network must find a replacement.

CBC's programming during the last two years has been such that it hasn't been saddled with a hole in its schedule but CTV has been caught several times with space to fill after 13 weeks.

It happened last fall when NBC dropped Harry's Girls in favor of That Was the Week That Was. It happened with the Joey Bishop Show. It happened again with Fair Exchange, a series Weinthal says "did very well here but died coquisitely in the U.S." Mitch Miller's singalong show replaced it."

All other network can do is sympathize, he says. "We take rat- ings very seriously. They represent the only tangible reporting we one has ever suggested. Any other way to estimate audiences."

Exercise Car To Perk Up Performance

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

The car used primarily as transportation to the railroad station, school, or shopping centre, will never be a "best buy" in a used car lot, despite low mileage and good looks. The reason? The engine is rarely run long enough to reach efficient operating temperature — perhaps never during cold weather. It may take six to eight miles of driving — depending on car speed, load, and air temperature — before the engine will warm up adequately, and many trips are shorter than this.

Cold engine operation, such as this, is especially hard on a car's engine. It promotes excessive wear, corrosive action, sludge formation, and makes gas, oil and maintenance economy impossible. And there's no need to make solution in terms of special oil or additives. If your car must be used constantly for short runs, the best method of minimizing this problem is to take it for a good long workout on the open road, as often as possible.

From H.A.: "No matter what I've had done to the front end, steering and tires, the car still has a sideways pull." The front end isn't always to blame for shimmy. Worn universal joints can be the cause.

S. C. writes: "I've had trouble due to dirt in the carburetor with almost every car I've owned. How can this be avoided with my new car?"

Keep the carburetor dirty. Then clean — and remember, there are special solvents (at your service station for auto supply store) which — if added to the gas tank every few months — will actually help keep the carair filter clean.

H. P. asks: "Why do you insist that the best tires should be on the rear? Doesn't braking impose greater wear and tear on the front tires?"

True but maximum traction and skid resistance is needed at the rear. And, with front-rear tire blowout is harder to control.

From J. M.: "Just how hot does engine oil usually get?"

Another reader has asked the same question. Answer: Lubrication engineering studies, engine oil temperatures will reach 250 degrees F. or more, under steady thruway-speed driving in warm or hot weather.

Canadians Second In Sled Race

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP)— A four - man bobsled team piloted by Sergio Zardini of Italy captured first place in the International Diamond Trophy race Friday.

The sled sped down the slope in a four-heat total of four minutes and 37.02 seconds.

Runner-up at 4:37.18 was a sled driven by Vic Emery of Montreal. Emery was pilot of the Canadian sled which won a gold medal in four-man competition at the Winter Olympics at Innsbruck, Austria.

The team of Emery, Doug Anakin, also of Montreal and a member of the medal-winning Canadian sled at Innsbruck, Gen. Perry Hoisington and Capt. Gene Dolan, tied after the first two heats. Hoisington and Dolan are Americans.

Sport Snapshots

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

There isn't an affluent Arnold Palmer or Jack Nicklaus in the lot, but no dice needs to feel poor when it comes to Canada's skiers who skim down North American slopes in search of a livelihood.

These chaps travel a regular circuit, much like golf's golden boys. Their season opens with a tournament three-month season are at an all - time high of $1,000,000, Colo., and ends four or five make about $13,000 to $25,- 000 a season," says Ted Dutton of Aspen, Colo., head of the International Pro Ski Racers Association. "Then, of course, they have other sources of income."

SHORT SEASON

Dutton, in Toronto en route to this Sunday's professional race at Collingwood, Ont., said the skiers have a long way to go to catch up with the big money winners in golf.

"But, it must be considered that the ski-racing season is only three months, compared with the year-round play of the golf pros. Of course, we have only a small group of competitors, and they are all the best in the world.

"Skiing has a lot of problems to overcome, all in North America aren't designed to handle huge crowds. There's a big selling job to be done to get the public interested in ski racing. Then, of course, there's the low-level snow we've had this snow, no races. It's as simple as that, but we haven't had to cancel any yet."

The association was formed just four years ago and purses have increased each year. In 1961, the total was $15,000. A year later, this went up to $35,000, followed by $43,000 and this year $55,000.

And, just like golf, professional football and other professional spectator sports, Dutton feels that television is the big money-maker for ski racing.

"Television is the critical factor," he says. "That's where the money is. Television eventually will control our destiny."

Does he believe Winter Olympic skiing should be open to both pros and amateurs?

"Not exactly. We've hoped for this for a long time to get the top threes in Olympics to meet the top three in the pro circuit. But, I don't think it would clean them up. Guys in the Olympics usually are around the 25 years old mark. Some of the fellows around 30 who have had two or three Olympics under their belts and who have the big advantage of experience."

Dutton says his association has considered the possibility of introducing pro ski-racing in Europe. These most likely would draw fantastic crowds but there is the problem of transportation costs.

"It costs $8,000 to $10,000 to transport 20 or more skiers, equipment and so on from North America to Europe. Right now, that's a lot of money to us."

Argos Swap Three For Lark Pair

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto Argonauts made a three-for-two trade today with Montreal Alouettes in the Eastern Conference of the Canadian Football League.

Jerry Philip, 31; Claire Eschelby, 26, and Chuck Wood, 24, were sent to-Montreal for Don Paquette and Ray German.

German, a Western Blues player last year, was the 1963 draft choice of Montreal for fullback and linebacker. Paquette plays guard and defensive end.

Toronto picked up Wood last year from Ottawa, but he didn't play. Defensive halfback Eschelby has been with the Argos four years and Philip, who plays end, has been with them six years.

Prague Youth Taught Chess by Veteran Player

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (Reuters) — One of the most dedicated stores in Europe is a small place on Prague's Wenceslas Square called simply Chess.

The store, run by Irwin Rosenblatt, claims his shop is unique since it caters only to chess fans—Rosenblatt himself has an abiding passion for the game, which Slavs love above all others.

In his shop, chess fans can browse for hours through a library of textbooks. There are volumes on theory and practice, primers for beginners, complicated problems for experts and move - by - move accounts of games which have made chess history.

In addition, Chess stocks hundreds of different sets and boards. They range from pocket sets to creations in carved oak in which all the figures represent legendary characters from Czechoslovak history.

RULE? MAGNETIC SET

Fifty-seven-year - old Rosenblatt has himself invented something to the game, in the form of his own invention and patent, the magnetic set. Steel-based figures stick to their squares even when the board is held upright or on its side.

His great pride is to show visitors the guest book where the signatures of almost all the world masters are to be found.

In his younger days, Rosenblatt was a champion himself and used to give exhibition matches in Prague, playing as many as 20 challengers simultaneously. Now he contents himself with running his shop and teaching the game to the young of Prague.

Although the shop is state-owned, it was Rosenblatt's idea in the first place, and he himself created it in 1948.

Another of his ideas is one of the most original publicity ideas in the history of communist bloc. In the centre of the small display window, a board is set out with chess pieces of both colors, with a simple notice "white to mate in two."

All day, every day, a puzzled crowd stands in front of the window trying to solve the riddle. Eventually they usually come in to ask Rosenblatt for an answer—and stay to buy something.

PRESS CHINA TRADE

LONDON (Reuters) — More than 100 British companies will take part in the largest exhibition ever staged by a Western country in Communist China, the Sino-British Trade Council said Friday. The companies will take part in the British industrial exhibition, to be held in Peking from Nov. 2 to 14.

Appointment as Bishop Came as 'Bolt From Blue' To Parish Priest at Norwood

No one was more surprised than Remi Joseph De Roo.

"One day I was a parish priest at a parish of 2,000 in Norwood which is a suburb of St. Boniface, Man., and the next I was bishop of the diocese of Victoria. My appointment came as a bolt from the blue."

At 39, Bishop De Roo is the youngest bishop in Canada and a member of a world - wide faction of young liberal prelates who are bringing change to the Catholic church.

His appointment as bishop was announced by the Vatican Oct. 31, 1962. He was consecrated bishop two weeks later in St. Boniface and was installed here Dec. 30.

"It's a good time to be a bishop," he says. "Had I been appointed a few years later I would have missed three (ecumenical council) sessions which already have changed the course of the church and which inevitably have an effect on world history."

Change is a key word in Bishop De Roo's vocabulary.

"Long lifted only in self-defence, the church's hands now are stretched out to all Christians and beyond them to men everywhere.

"One thing is certain. The church will never be the same. Catholics will not change their beliefs, as some think, but the face of the church will change."

DIOCESE CHANGES

This mood of change is evident in Bishop De Roo's own diocese. Sparked by the ideal of Christian unity, the Catholic prelate and Anglican Archbishop Harold Sexton agreed to join in sponsoring establishment of a college at the University of Victoria.
